He was born at Fair Haven, Vt., 18 March 1852, the son of Clark Pelatiah[8] and Eliza Maria (Pratt) Hill. The progenitor of his family in America was John[1] Hill, who came from England and settled in Dorchester, Mass., as early as 1633. From him Mr. Hill was descended through John[2] of Sherborn, Mass., Ebenezer[3] of Sherborn and Holliston, Mass., David[4] of Holliston and Bellingham, Mass., and Isaac[5] of Holliston — all substantial yeomen, Whitney[6] of Sherborn and Holliston and Arnold[7] of Holliston, Mass., and of Sudbury, Pittsford, and Hubbardton, Vt. — both housewrights by occupation, and Clark Pelatiah,[8] who was born at Pittsford, Vt., 11 February 1821. The last-named, the father of Mr. Hill, was a man of an exceptionally genial temperament, but of delicate constitution, with which he was handicapped throughout his life. After his marriage in 1851 he had a small general store in Fair Haven, Vt., until 1862, and then for three years a stationery store in Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; but in 1865 his broken health induced a removal to a small fruit farm in Hammonton, N. J., where he resided thereafter until his death in 1895.

Most of Mr. Hill's ancestors, in various lines, lived in the present counties of Norfolk and Middlesex, Mass., and all of them were descended from the English founders of New England. Among the well-known families from which he was descended were those of White, Thayer, Whitney, Fairbanks, Daniels, Adams, Leland, Morse, Smith, Cook, Thomson, Pratt, Lewis, and Sprague; and his ancestors included James Chilton and Richard Warren, passengers in the Mayflower in 1620.

At a very early age Lew Cass Hill began to exhibit the strenuous diligence, energy of character, and business ability with which he eventually achieved marked success. When only nine years of age he actually carried on for several months the little store in Fair Haven, Vt., at a period when his father was completely incapacitated by rheumatism; and he also was of much assistance to his father during the ensuing three years in the stationery store in Saratoga Springs. When thirteen years of age he accompanied his parents on their removal in 1865 to Hammonton, N. J., where he remained for six years. He attended the country public schools, but his early chances for education were limited. Realizing the lack of opportunity in Hammonton, when nineteen years old he left there and went in 1871 to Bainbridge, N. Y.; here he spent two years in a foundry business, of which a relative was the manager. In the spring of 1873 he came to Boston, where he soon married; and the next year his wife's uncle, Mr. John L. Whiting, offered him a position as bookkeeper in his brush-manufacturing establishment, which was accepted, and in this business Mr. Hill continued for almost half a century, until his death.

Mr. John L. Whiting was a man of great inventive genius, had devised some remarkable machines for brush manufacture, and had a prosperous business of moderate size when Mr. Hill entered it. Soon afterwards Mr. Whiting's son, William S. Whiting, joined the company, bringing a youthful, driving energy into its affairs; in a few years the business rapidly developed to large proportions; and a new building was erected at the corner of High and Purchase Streets. Mr. Hill's abilities and services were of very great value during this expansion of the business, and in 1887 he was admitted to the firm of John L. Whiting & Son. After the death of John L. Whiting in 1893 the company was incorporated, Mr. William S. Whiting becoming president and treasurer and Mr. Hill secretary, they being the principal stockholders. The continual growth of their business demanding greater facilities, in 1904 a new and much larger factory was established at 690–710 Harrison Avenue in Boston. The company became the largest in the world in its line of manufacture, which comprises over 10,000 forms and sizes of brushes; and its goods have always held the highest reputation for excellence and secured the leading awards at many international expositions.

After the death of William S. Whiting in 1908, the John L. Whiting & Son Company was consolidated with another old and successful company, the J. J. Adams & Company of New York, forming the John L. Whiting–J. J. Adams Company of Boston, which was incorporated and capitalized at $2,000,000. The old factories of the J. J. Adams & Company in Brooklyn, N. Y., and Cambridge, Mass., were given up, and the business was concentrated at the Whiting factory on Harrison Avenue in Boston, which was much enlarged. Mr. Hill was elected president of the consolidated companies and continued in this position at the head of the organization for the remaining fifteen years of his life, completing a service of almost fifty years with one enterprise. Under his able management this great company continued to increase in importance and prosperity and maintained its place as by far the largest brush-manufacturing establishment in the world.

Mr. Hill was endowed with a vigorous physique, indomitable will, forceful energy, and exceptional executive ability in efficiency organization. His power of instantaneous decision, with correct judgment, was extraordinary, and enabled him to direct his great business with celerity and apparent ease. So effective was his system of organization that in his later years he was enabled to take several extended foreign trips, during which the business went on with the smoothness of a perfectly lubricated machine, under the direction of his trained executive staff.

During the past thirty years Mr. Hill was much interested in the genealogical history of New England, and had a strong feeling of admiration and reverence for the accomplishments of the old New England stock in the development of the institutions of this nation. This interest led to the compilation and publication, in 1904, of a hundred-page volume entitled "John Hill of Dorchester, 1633, and Descendants," which contains a genealogical and biographical account of all the various ancestral lines of both Mr. Hill and his wife. The hereditary-patriotic societies received his approval and interest; and, besides his membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society, he joined also the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, the Society of Colonial Wars, the Sons of the American Revolution, the Sons of the Revolution, and the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants, of which he was elected governor on 28 March 1913, serving for three years in that office.

His active work in the New England Historic Genealogical Society began in 1916, when he accepted the office of Treasurer, which he held also in the following year and which gave him a seat in the Council. Besides this, he served on the Committee on Ways and Means, 1916–1922, inclusive, on the Committee on Finance, 1918–1920, inclusive, and as a member of the Council in 1919 and 1920, having been elected a Councillor for a full term of three years at the annual meeting of the Society on 5 February 1919, but resigning this office in the autumn of 1920 on account of his contemplated absence from Massachusetts. When he became Treasurer the finances of the Society were in a straitened condition, due to a burden of debt on account of the new building and to general conditions resulting from the World War; and in those trying times the Society benefited greatly from Mr. Hill's sound business advice and ripe judgment in financial matters.

His clubs included the Exchange, Art, Algonquin, and Boston City Clubs, and he was also a member of the Paint and Oil Club of New England, of which he was at one time president, and of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association. In the Masonic orders he was affiliated with Joseph Webb Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, St. Paul's Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and the Boston Commandery of the Knights Templar.

For over a quarter of a century Mr. Hill was a very active member of the Home Market Club, which he joined in 1896, serving as a member of its Executive Committee, 1903–1913, and as one of its vice presidents, 1913–1923. At the annual meeting of this club on 21 November 1923 the following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That the death of Lew C. Hill, a member of long standing, formerly of the Executive Committee and Vice President for many years, has cast upon us sincere grief. From a long line of Colonial ancestry he inherited rugged Puritanical determination. Born in a small Vermont village, he advanced step by step until he became the executive head of the largest brush-manufacturing concern of its kind in the world. He was a firm believer in the policy of protection and an ardent worker in its cause; while never striving for the spectacular, his counsel and advice were always most wholesome."

Although most diligent in business all his life, he found time and opportunities in his later years for play as well as work. He had a keen appreciation of art and fine taste in it; for many years he was a director of the Boston Art Club and active in its work; and he gradually acquired a choice collection of paintings by several noted American artists for the decoration of his home. Foreign travel appealed to him not only as a relaxation and recreation but also as a broadening education; and, beginning in 1887, he made half a dozen extended trips to Europe and the Mediterranean countries, visited the West Indies twice, and in 1918 went to the Hawaiian Islands. The first half of the year 1923 was occupied by a trip around the world, on which India, Ceylon, China, and Japan were visited. Another hobby of his last years was a small farm in Holliston, Mass., his sentimental interest in the homes of his ancestors determining his choice of this town for this purpose. After a residence of a score of years in the South End of Boston he removed to the Back Bay, where he had his home for the last thirty years; and he also had a summer estate at Swampscott, Mass.

Endowed with a remarkably vigorous constitution, he enjoyed excellent health almost to the close of his life. After an illness of only three weeks he passed away at his home in the Hotel Westminster, Boston, on 25 August 1923, in his seventy-second year. The funeral services were held three days later at the Newton Cemetery Chapel, and were conducted by Rev. Edward Cummings, of the South Congregational Church, of which Mr. Hill had been a member for many years under the ministry of Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale.

He married in Boston, 4 April 1873, Clara Kendall Marcy, born at Worcester, Mass., 20 September 1852, daughter of Charles Dustin and Mary Kendall (Whiting) Marcy; they had met while her family lived for about three years in Hammonton, N. J. Like her husband, Mrs. Hill descended in every line from the early founders of New England, among her noted ancestors being Rev. John Cotton, Gov. Thomas Dudley and Gov. Simon Bradstreet of Massachusetts, and Deputy Gov. Stephen Goodyear of the New Haven Colony. She died in Boston 8 October 1917. They had three sons: the eldest, Charles Clark Hill, died unmarried at the age of twenty-one years; the second, Henry Horace Hill, of Boston, A.B. (Harvard, 1899), who has succeeded to his father's Pilgrim Tercentenary membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society, is vice president and treasurer of the John L. Whiting–J. J. Adams Company; and the third, Edward Marcy Hill, A.B. (Harvard, 1903), is also employed by the same corporation.

Mr. Hill married secondly Miss Lillian J. Fisher of Brooklyn, N. Y., who survives him.

JOHN WINCHESTER OF NEW ENGLAND AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS

By Henry Winchester Cunningham, A.B., of Milton, Mass.

1. John[1] Winchester, the immigrant ancestor of the family that forms the subject of this article,* embarked in England, 6 Apr. 1635, in the Elizabeth, the same ship in which came Clement Bates from Lydd, co. Kent, and arrived a few weeks later at Boston in New England. After remaining there a short time he went to Hingham,† where Clement Bates had already settled, and received, 3 July 1636, a grant of five acres of land in that town, situated on the present South Street in West Hingham (Lincoln's History of Hingham, vol. 3, page 330). On 20 May 1667 Elizabeth Hersie granted to her son John four acres of land in Hingham, "in the feild called the plaine neck," which her late husband, William Hersie, had bought of John Winchester (Suffolk Deeds, lib. 5, fo. 514). William Hersie had originally received a grant of five acres adjoining John Winchester's land, and on the same date, 3 July 1636.

This John Winchester was without doubt the John Winchester, son of Richard, who was baptized in the parish of Cranbrook, co Kent, England, 19 May 1611; and the following English records evidently refer to this family.

From the Transcripts of the Parish Registers of Cranbrook, co. Kent, 1560–1641

1599 "Rychard Wynchester son of Rycharde" baptized 16 December.
1602 "John Wynchester fili Ryc" baptized 10 October.
1603 "John Wynchester Infans" buried 1 November.
1604 "Elizabeth Winchester" baptized 4 November.
1607 "Mary Winchester" baptized "05" July.
1610 "Joane Winchester" baptized "06" May.
1610 "Joane Winchester" buried 29 May.
1611 "John Wynchester" baptized 19 May.
1623 "Richard Winchester fils Rici Jur" baptized 21 December.
1628 "Richard Winchester" buried 1 May.

From the Transcripts of the Parish Registers of Hawkhurst, co. Kent, 1617–1641

1628 Mary daughter of Richarde Winchester baptized 13 July.
1631 Caleb son of Richard Winchester baptized 8 May.
1631 Caleb son of Richard Winchester buried 4 September.
1632 Elizabeth daughter of Richard Winchester baptized 29 July.
1636 Sarah daughter of Richard Winchester and Elizabeth his wife buried 29 November.

*Alexander Winchester, who came to Boston in Oct. 1635 with Henry Vane, is not known to have been related to John; and, as Alexander is said to have had no sons, all the early Winchesters of New England must have descended from John.

†All places mentioned in this genealogy are situated within the present limits of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, unless another State or region is indicated in the text or may be easily inferred from the context.

From Probate Records

Administration on the estate of Richard Winchester, late of Cranbrook, deceased, was granted 24 May 1628 to his widow, ——— Winchester. (Archdeaconry of Canterbury, Act Book 31, fo. 79.)

In his will, dated 17 June 1691, John Winchester of New England describes himself as "aged fourscore yeares and upwards," a statement which makes it extremely likely that he was the John Winchester who was baptized at Cranbrook 19 May 1611. Moreover, Cranbrook is near Lydd; and John Winchester of New England married at Scituate in the Plymouth Colony, 15 Oct. 1638, Hannah Sealis, baptized at Biddenden, co. Kent, 8 Jan. 1614/15, daughter of Richard Sealis of Biddenden (a parish about five miles from Cranbrook), one of a group of Kentish men who had gone to Scituate in 1634 with Rev. John Lothrop. It is, therefore, not improbable that John Winchester and Hannah Sealis were acquainted in the old country.*

John Winchester was made a freeman 9 Mar. 1637 [1637/8], joined the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston in 1638, and in the military disturbance of 1644–45 was one of those who were fined for the trouble which he and his neighbors had caused, but the fine was remitted the following year because of his slender means (Records of the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay, vol. 3, page 80).

Some time after 1650, possibly early in 1655, he removed to the Muddy River district of Boston, now the town of Brookline, and on 28 Dec. 1657 bought the so-called Ronton farm, "now in ye possession of ye said Jn° Winchester" (Suffolk Deeds, lib. 3, fo. 82), from the heirs of William Hibbins for £60. This consisted of 140 acres in all, being two farms of 80 and 40 acres of upland, lying on or near the present Harvard Street, near Coolidge Corner, Brookline, and extending back over the summit of Corey Hill, and along the highway towards the Cambridge (later Brighton) line. The house in which he lived was occupied by his descendants John,[2] John,[3] and Isaac,[4] and is said in Miss Woods's "History of Brookline" to have been pulled down in 1844. The situation is easily identified, because it was just across Harvard Street from the contemporaneous house of the Devotion family, that is still standing. (See plan of Muddy River in 1700, in Publications of the Brookline Historical Publication Society, Second Series, page 7.) The balance of this purchase of the Ronton farm was 10 acres of swampy fresh meadow about two miles away and also 10 acres of salt marsh at Muddy River, on the arm of the sea between Boston, Roxbury, and Cambridge.

Previously to his arrival at Muddy River John Winchester may have lived a few years at Scituate, as the Roxbury church records give the baptism, 20, 3 mo. 1655, of "Josias son to Goodman Winchester of Scituate."

At Muddy River he was surveyor, constable, and tithingman; and on 30, 6 mo. 1674 he and his wife joined the church, and his son

*For Richard Sealis of Biddenden, co. Kent, and Scituate in New England, and his English connections see Register, vol. 65, pp. 319–322. In Register, vol. 64, pp. 73–74, may be found a short article, by Hosea Starr Ballou, entitled "Dr. Comfort Starr, and Cranbrook, Kent," with a picture of St. Dunstan's Church in Cranbrook.

John and wife Joanna and his daughter Mary and her husband, John Druce, solemnly owned the covenant at the church of the Apostle Eliot in Roxbury, as the Brookline church had not then been formed.

John Winchester was not only one of the earliest residents of what is now the town of Brookline but also a well-known citizen; his sons and grandsons were among the most prominent and useful people of the community; and several further generations dwelt in the town, some living there to-day. He has a vast number of descendants, scattered from Nova Scotia to California, with a few branches in the South and perhaps the largest groups in western New York and Ohio.

He died at his home at Muddy River 25 Apr. 1694, aged almost 83; and his widow Hannah died there 18 Sept. 1697, aged over 82.

In his will, dated 17 June 1691 and proved 15 June 1694, he calls himself "John Winchester, Senr, of Muddy River aged fourscore yeares and upwards," names his sons John and Josiah as executors, gives to his wife Hannah "liberty to dwell in my house as long as she live, and convenient firewood brought to her doore," together with "six pounds yearly and every year so long as she shall live three pounds in currant money of New England and three pounds more in such Provisions as she shall have most occasion for to be paid her at such times as she shall call for it, . . . and also, one barrel of Cyder allowed her every year so long as she shall live and brought in place where she shall order." He states that, as he has already given his son John 30 acres of upland, 3 acres of salt marsh, and 3 acres of fresh meadow, he leaves to his son Josiah a similar amount of each. He gives to his daughter Mary Drew 20s. "in countrey pay," to Mary Winchester, daughter of his son Jonathan, deceased, "when shee shall accomplish the age of twenty yeares," a piece of upland of about 8 or 10 acres, bounded upon the lands of Isaac Heath, to his wife the life use of all the moveables in his house, which after her decease are "to be equally divided between my three children," and to his son Josiah the improvement of all his lands not disposed of, "as long as my wife live for the bringing in of her maintainance," and after her death the lands are to be equally divided between his sons John and Josiah. His estate was appraised at £307. 10s., of which the real estate, which was probably what he had bought nearly forty years before for £60, was valued at £267.

Children:

2. i. JOHN,[2] b., probably at Hingham, and bapt. there 2 June 1644. On 3 Dec. 1691 he made an affidavit, in which he stated that he was about 48 (Suffolk Deeds).
   ii. MARY, bapt. at Hingham 26 Mar. 1648; m. (1) JOHN DRUCE, s. of Vincent of Newton, who was mortally wounded in King Philip's War, was brought home, and died 2 July 1675, aged 34; probably m. (2) EROZOMAN DREW of Brookline, but the similarity of names is confusing. (Cf. Jackson's History of Newton, under Druce.)
3. iii. JONATHAN.
4. iv. JOSIAH, bapt. at Roxbury 20, 3 mo. 1655.

2. JOHN[2] WINCHESTER (John[1]), born, probably at Hingham, and baptized there 2 June 1644, when a boy moved with his parents to Muddy River (Brookline), where he died 1 Feb. 1717/18. On 3 Dec. 1691 he made an affidavit stating that he was about 48 (Suffolk Deeds). He married, about 1673, JOANNA STEVENS, who was born 28 May 1652 and survived her husband, daughter of Henry Stevens of Boston and his second wife, Mary (Buckminster).

He was one of the most prominent citizens of Brookline, and held many important offices. He was one of the signers of the petition of 1704 to have Muddy River incorporated as the town of Brookline, which was granted in Nov. 1705. He served as selectman, surveyor, constable, tithingman, and assessor, and was the first representative of the new town in the General Court, serving as such for five years, 1706–1710. In the Brookline records for 1707 is found a vote "that John Winchester, senr. should serve as Commissioner and also that Samuel Aspenwall, Joseph Gardner and Erosamond Drew shold serve as Trustees to joyn with said Commissioner in making a valuation of the estate of the afore said Town." He had a small service in King Philip's War, having been stationed at the garrison at Punckapauge (now Ponkapoag in Canton), 24 Apr. 1676.

His will was dated 29 Jan. 1717/18, and his property was appraised at £1006. 9s.

Children:

i. JOANNA,[3] bapt. at Roxbury 6, 7 mo. 1674; m. 5 June 1698 JOSEPH STEVENS.

ii. MARY, bapt. 13, 8 mo. 1676 (Roxbury church records); d. 19 Feb. 1715; m., probably about 1700, THOMAS TROWBRIDGE of Newton.*

1. John.
2. Joshua.

8. vi. HENRY, b. at Muddy River (Brookline) about 1682.

vii. JONATHAN, bapt. at Roxbury 30, 10 mo. 1683; d. 31 Aug. 1714 (Newton Vital Records; Diary of Samuel Sewall, Jr., in Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Second Series, vol. 8, p. 224).

the Dedham line. (Cf. REGISTER, vol. 4, page 85, and Dedham Historical Register, vol. 14, page 62, for the Aldis family.)

Mary Winchester, widow of Jonathan, was appointed 29 Apr. 1679 administratrix of the estate of her late husband, which was appraised at £30. 7s. 6d., and consisted chiefly of 8 acres of land at Muddy River.

Three entries in the Roxbury church records are as follows:

"1677 month 3 day 6. Jonathan Winchester, Mary his wife, both received to lay hold on the Covenant."

"1679 month 1 day 8 Jonathan Winchester, dyed of a feav."

"1681–1–27 Mary widdow Winchester this day received to the full Comunion of the Church."

Child:

i. MARY,[3] b. after 1671, as under her grandfather's will of 1691 she was to receive 8 or 10 acres of land at Muddy River, "when shee shall accomplish the age of twenty yeares."

4. JOSIAH[2] WINCHESTER (John[1]), baptized at Roxbury 20, 3 mo. 1655 and called in the baptismal record the son of "Goodman Winchester of Scituate," so that he may have been born just before his father's removal to Muddy River, died at Brookline 22 Feb. 1728 [? 1727/8]. He married, 10 Dec. 1678, MARY LYON, born 4 Nov. 1650, died at Brookline 27 July 1730, daughter of Peter and Ann of Dorchester. The name Elhanan, which has persisted in every generation of Josiah's descendants, evidently comes from the Lyon family, as Mary Lyon had a brother of that name.

Like his brother John (2) he was a prominent citizen of Brookline, one of the petitioners for the incorporation of the town in 1704, selectman, moderator, town treasurer, representative in the General Court in 1711, 1713, and 1717, and the first town clerk. This last position he filled for the hamlet of Muddy River and town of Brookline in 1686/7, from 1697/8 to 1706/7, and again in 1712/13. He and his family were members of the Roxbury church until the formation of the church at Brookline. He lived in the southerly part of Brookline, probably near the present Warren and Cottage Streets, and his son Josiah probably also lived in this vicinity.

His son Amariah, of Brookline, was administrator of his estate, which was appraised 4 Apr. 1728 at £1452. 4s. 6d., and included about 102 acres of land valued at £1298. 9s.

Children, born at Muddy River (Brookline):

i. HANNAH,[3] b. 11 Jan. 1679/80; m., probably in 1698, ISAAC BOWEN of Roxbury. For this family see Edward Augustus Bowen's "Lineage of the Bowens of Woodstock, Connecticut," 1897.

10. ii. JOSIAH, b. 25 Dec. 1681.

iii. EBENEZER, b. 1 Mar. 1683/4; d. in Aug. 1684.

iv. MARY, b. 15 Sept. 1685; m. at Brookline, 4 June 1713, CALEB HOVEY of Cambridge and Newton.

11. v. AMARIAH, b. 4 Apr. 1687 or 1688 and bapt. at Roxbury 8 Apr. 1688. In the town records the last two figures of the year of his birth are missing, but family records in the possession of a descendant give the date as 1687.*

12. vi. ELHANAN, b. 14 Mar. 1691.

5. CAPT. JOHN[3] WINCHESTER (John,[2] John[1]), born at Muddy River (Brookline) 17 Apr. 1676 (Boston Records, vol. 9, page 139), died there 27 Sept. 1751, aged 76. He married first SARAH WHITE, born 5 Dec. 1680, died 31 Jan. 1715/16, aged 36, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Bowles); secondly, about 1717, SARAH (PHIPPS) GARDNER, born 13 Mar. 1687/8, died at Brookline 12 Jan. 1750, daughter of Solomon Phipps, Jr., of Charlestown and his wife Mary (daughter of Gov. Thomas Danforth) and widow of Caleb Gardner of Brookline; and thirdly, probably in the year of the death of his second wife, as her fifth husband, WIDOW ALICE (CRAFT) SHED, born in 1681 or 1682, died at Holliston at the great age of 102 (or at an even greater age, according to some records), daughter of Samuel Craft of Roxbury. This remarkable woman had descendants of the fifth generation living at the time of her death.

Like his father and uncle he held many town offices in Brookline, and was a large landowner and a man of force and character. He and his brother-in-law, Thomas Trowbridge, had an amusing though rather serious encounter with the irascible Governor Dudley on the highway in Roxbury, 7 Dec. 1705, a full account of which is given in Sewall's Diary (Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Fifth Series, vol. 6, page 144). He was known as Capt. John Winchester from his militia service. In the Massachusetts Archives, vol. 72, page 117, is a copy of instructions given to him 13 Sept. 1723, as follows:

"An express from Albany giving an account of a fresh party of fifty Indians, that are come over the Lake, which may be expected every Houre on the Frontier under your care. You are therefore to bee in a readiness to give them a warme reception with your Troup &ct."

In the Province Laws, vol. x, Appendix, page 405, is given a resolve, passed 19 Dec. 1723, allowing payment for a muster roll of a troop of Horse, late in His Majesty's service, under command of Capt. John Winchester, from 30 Aug. to 22 Sept. 1723. He is also mentioned as being stationed at Fort No. 4, on the Connecticutt River, when Shirley was governor.

On 14 Mar. 1721/2 John Winchester of Brookline, husbandman, was appointed guardian to his five children, Elizabeth, aged about 19, Sarah, about 17, John, about 16, Joanna, about 13, and Isaac, about 9, in order to receive property

*There is a manuscript record of this branch of the family known as "Josiah's Book," which was possibly started by Josiah[2] (4) or at any rate by one of his sons, and has descended in the family of Andrew[4] of Connecticut (26), son of Amariah[3] (11). Latterly it has been in the possession of Mr. Edgar Clinton Winchester of New London, Conn. This book contains many records of great value, some of which are not obtainable elsewhere, and it appears to have been carefully kept in certain lines for several generations.

coming to them from their late uncle, John White, who had been treasurer of Harvard College and had died unmarried.

He was a bearer at the funeral of Samuel Sewall, Jr., at Brookline, 6 Mar. 1750/1.

He undoubtedly lived in the old homestead of his father and grandfather; and at the time of his death, in 1751, his homestead contained 127 acres, valued at £926. 6s. 8d., with house, barns, and other buildings appraised at £133. 6s. 8d. Other property inventoried included a silver tankard, cup, and spoons at £14, a silver-hilted sword and holsters at £1. 6s. 8d., and two negroes at £60.

Children by first wife:

i. Elizabeth,[4] b. 30 Dec. 1701; m. Richard Gardner of Brookline, and removed to Cambridge in 1725. Their son Thomas, who m. his cousin, Joanna Sparhawk, was the Col. Thomas Gardner who was mortally wounded at Bunker Hill.

ii. Sarah, b. probably in 1703 or 1704; m. in 1723 Isaac Dana of Pomfret, Conn., s. of Benjamin of Cambridge. Their son John Winchester Dana m. a daughter of Gen. Israel Putnam.

13. iii. John, b. at Brookline, probably in 1705.

iv. Joanna, b. 13 Mar. 1709/10; m. Samuel Sparhawk (1698–1774) of Cambridge and outlived her husband. One of their daughters m. Col. Thomas Gardner and another Professor Edward Wigglesworth.

14. v. Isaac, b. at Brookline in 1712 or 1714.

Children by second wife:

vi. Danforth, b. 8 Mar. 1718/19; d. young.

vii. Bethia, b. 20 Dec. 1720; d. 2 Sept. 1722.

viii. Samuel, b. in Dec. 1722; d. 13 July 1751; probably the Samuel who m. 19 Nov. 1747 Joanna West, dau. of Benjamin and Joanna (Swinerton) of Roxbury, but there is no record of any children and no mention of him or of any children of his in the settlement of the estates of his or her father.

15. ix. Nathan, b. at Brookline 16 Apr. 1724 and bapt. there 26 Apr. 1724 as "Nathan ye child of Capt. I. Winch." He is the founder of the Nova Scotia branch of the Winchester family.

x. Martha, b. 23 Nov. 1728. The Brookline records in one place give the birth of a daughter Mehitable on this same date, but that may be an error.

xi. Abigail, bapt. 1 Sept. 1734.

6. Benjamin[3] Winchester (John,[2] John[1]), husbandman, born at Muddy River (Brookline) about 1678, died at Grafton in 1762, his will being allowed on 1 July of that year. He married first, at Roxbury, 31 Dec. 1719, Prudence May, born at Roxbury 29 Nov. 1694, died at Brookline probably early in 1726, daughter of John and Prudence (Bridge) of Roxbury; and secondly, at Cambridge, 22 June 1726, Elizabeth (Champney) Chamberlain, daughter of Joseph Champney of Cambridge and widow of John Chamberlain of Newton. She was living in May 1771, when she joined with her son Joseph in the sale of the Grafton estate. Joseph had received the homestead under his father's will, subject to his mother's life use and to the payment of certain legacies to his brothers and sisters, his two elder half brothers having removed to Hardwick before their father died.

He lived in Brookline till after his second marriage, in 1726, as he sold his estate there to his brother John on 28 Feb. 1726/7. On 1 May following he bought 55 acres in Framingham, and on 26 June 1739 he bought 46 acres in Grafton, being at that time called of Westborough. After leaving Brookline he probably lived for some years in Framingham, and in Nov. 1734 there appears in the Sudbury vital records the birth of a daughter. It is possible, also, that he may have lived in Westborough a few years before going to Grafton in 1739. He is the man whom Rev. Ebenezer Parkman of Westborough calls "Cousin Winchester" in his diary for 1737, as their wives were first cousins. Benjamin Winchester should, however, be considered as a resident of Grafton, for it was his final domicile and he lived there longer than elsewhere.

Children by first wife:

16. i. THOMAS,[4] bapt. at Brookline 1 Jan. 1721/2.
17. ii. BENJAMIN, bapt. at Brookline 6 Mar. 1726 [1725/6].

Children by second wife:

18. iii. JOSHUA, bapt., probably at Brookline, 14 May 1727.
19. iv. JOSEPH, b. about 1730.
- v. PRUDENCE, b. at Sudbury 29 Nov. 1734; probably d. young. She is not mentioned in her father's will of 1758.
- vi. SARAH, m. at Grafton, 3 Dec. 1761, AARON BRIGHAM.
- vii. ANNA, b. at Westborough 23 Mar. 1737/8; m. at Grafton, 29 Jan. 1771, SAMUEL BIGELOW, JR.
- viii. MARY, b. at Westborough 18 Dec. 1739; m. at Grafton, in 1763, NATHANIEL GODDARD.

7. CAPT. EBENEZER[3] WINCHESTER (John,[2] John[1]), born at Muddy River (Brookline) about 1680, died in 1746, while in the public service on the frontiers. He married at Framingham, 13 Feb. 1717/18, MARTHA BUCKMINSTER, born in 1693, died at Brimfield before 29 Aug. 1766 (see document among the probate papers of her husband's estate), daughter of Joseph and Martha (Sharp).

He was called variously housewright, captain, and gentleman. On 26 Jan. 1715 he bought 100 acres of land near the Brinley farm in Framingham for £300, and was a selectman of that town in 1741 and 1743.

In the Province Laws, vol. 14, page 18, is found "a Petition of Ebenezer Winchester Admr of Cpt. Ebenezer Winchester late of Framingham Decd Intestate Shewing that the said Cpt. Winchester was taken sick in the Publick Service and died upon the Frontiers, praying that the Charge of his Sickness may be born by the Province" (17 June 1748).

Children, born at Framingham:

- i. MARTHA,[4] b. 11 Aug. 1719; d. at Brimfield in 1760, aged 41; m. at Framingham, 1 Nov. 1739, REV. JAMES BRIDGHAM of Brimfield.
- ii. MARY, b. 26 Aug. 1723; m. (1) 22 Nov. 1751 SAMUEL WINCH; m. (2) in 1756 CAPT. JONATHAN GIBBS.

Dr. Ezekiel Hersey of Hingham. He was placed fifteenth in his Harvard class of thirty, the names of the students then being arranged according to their parents' social rank. He studied medicine and became a physician. His brother-in-law, Jonathan Gibbs, settled his estate, which, though not large, showed many possessions usual to a man of good social standing.

iv. ELIZABETH, b. 21 Oct. 1727.
v. SARAH, b. 8 Mar. 1730.
vi. BEULAH, b. 21 Aug. 1733.

8. HENRY[3] WINCHESTER (John,[2] John[1]), born at Muddy River (Brookline) about 1682, died at Brookline before Dec. 1750, when an inventory of his estate was made. He married, 5 Oct. 1705, FRANCES WHITE,* born 28 Mar. 1680, died 21 Nov. 1765, aged 86, daughter of Joseph and Hannah of Brookline and first cousin of Sarah White, the first wife of his brother John (5).

He lived in the southerly part of Brookline, near the present Cottage Street and Goddard Avenue, and held many town offices, being selectman from 1721 to 1725, inclusive, and again in 1736.

Children, born at Brookline:

i. MARY,[4] b. 19 Aug. 1707; d. 7 Oct. 1736 (Suffolk Deeds, lib. 62, fo. 238); m. 4 Jan. 1733 JOHN HARRIS.
20. ii. JOSEPH, b. 2 Apr. 1710.
iii. ABIGAIL, b. 17 Dec. 1712; m. 5 Dec. 1749 PETER STONE.
iv. MEHETABEL, b. 25 Mar. 1715.
21. v. JONATHAN, b. 21 Apr. 1717.
vi. HENRY, b. 27 Apr. 1720; m. at Roxbury, 3 Mar. 1748, DOROTHY BREWER, dau. of Nathaniel and Elizabeth. No further trace of this couple has been found.
vii. MOSES, b. 5 July 1723; d. at Brookline 21 Aug. 1725.

9. STEPHEN[3] WINCHESTER (John,[2] John[1]), born at Muddy River (Brookline) and baptized at Roxbury 28, 12 mo. 1685 [28 Feb. 1685/6], died at Newton 6 Sept. 1751, aged 65. He married at Milton, 3 Jan. 1722/3, HANNAH GULLIVER, born 10 Feb. 1690, died 4 May 1768, aged 78, daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Robinson) of Milton.

About 1720 he bought a part of the southwest end of the Governor Haynes farm in Newton, near the Upper Falls of the Charles River, and built a house there, being one of the first settlers upon this tract. In 1750 he and his wife conveyed 57 acres of this land, with the homestead, to their son Stephen,[4] and after him this descended to his son Amasa.[5]

Children, born at Newton:

22. i. STEPHEN,[4] b. 11 Aug. 1723.
ii. CHARLES, b. 21 Aug. 1726. He served at Louisburg in 1745 (REGISTER, vol. 55, page 68), and may have been the Charles Winchester who joined with Stephen in Mar. 1784 in conveying land in Needham, when this Charles is called "yeoman of Newton;" but he is easily confused with his nephew Charles[5] (b. in 1753), s. of Stephen,[4] and with Charles[5] (b. in 1749), s. of Isaac[4] of Brookline.
iii. HANNAH, b. 30 Mar. 1730; d. in 1743.
23. iv. GULLIVER, b. 4 Mar. 1732/3.

*Cf. REGISTER, vol. 52, p. 422, where this marriage date is given incorrectly as 28 June 1705.

10. Josiah[3] Winchester (Josiah,[2] John[1]), housewright, born at Muddy River (Brookline) 25 Dec. 1681, died at Brookline 28 Apr. 1724, as Samuel Sewall, Jr., writes in his diary under that date: "Dies Mr. Josiah Winchester Jun[r]," and under date of 1 May: "Buried. A great Many people. Die[s] suddenly and much lamented." He married, 25 Mar. 1707, Sarah Seaver, daughter of Caleb and Sarah (Inglesby) (Register, vol. 26, page 305), who married secondly, at Brookline, 12 Oct. 1726, Benjamin Vial of Barrington, R. I.

Josiah Winchester lived in the southerly part of Brookline. He died intestate, leaving property valued at £1037. 5s., which included a dwelling and nearly 100 acres of land. In Mar. 1732/3, as his estate, then valued at £777, was incapable of division, the whole was conveyed to the eldest son, Caleb, subject to the dower for life of his mother, Sarah Vial; and he was to pay £129. 10s. apiece to his brother Nathaniel and his sister Sarah.

Children, born at Brookline:

i. Sarah,[4] b. 6 June 1708; d. 11 Aug. 1708.
24. ii. Caleb, b. 5 Aug. 1709.
iii. Sarah, b. 17 July 1713; m. at Swansea, 10 Jan. 1733/4, Constant Vial, nephew of her stepfather (Narragansett Historical Register, vol. 3, pp. 111, 179).
iv. Josiah, b. 17 Oct. 1719; d. at Brookline 5 June 1720.
v. Nathaniel, b. 27 Apr. 1721; aged about 7 when a guardian was appointed in Mar. 1727/8; living in Mar. 1732/3, when his father's estate was divided.

11. Amariah[3] Winchester (Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Muddy River (Brookline) 4 Apr. 1687 or 1688 and baptized at Roxbury 8 Apr. 1688 (vide supra, page 11), died, probably at New London North Parish (now Montville), Conn., 15 Sept. 1752. He married, 15 Dec. 1714, Sarah Seaver, born 4 Feb. 1696, died 5 July 1777, daughter of John and Sarah of Roxbury. Her father was a first cousin of the Sarah Seaver who married Amariah's brother Josiah (10). (Register, vol. 26, page 308.)

In 1718 he sold to John Bowen for £395 his dwelling and barn in Roxbury, with 29 acres of land, on the country road to Dedham, Connecticutt Lane, and Mill Pond, although the deed, in which he calls himself "of Brookline, husbandman," was not recorded till 1773. Therefore he may have lived in Roxbury for a year or two after his marriage; but at the Brookline town meeting of 12 Mar. 1715/16 he was chosen a fence viewer, and on 29 Dec. 1718 the Brookline selectmen "agreed with Amariah Winchester to keep the Center School in Brooklyn three months beginning on the Sd. 29. of Dec. for seven pounds & four shillings." The Brookline records show that on 6 Mar. 1726/7 he was a surveyor for all but the south part of the town, that he was a constable the year before, that on 3 Mar. 1729 he was a member of a committee to look over the accounts of the treasurer, and that on 5 Mar. 1733 he was surveyor. In the New England Weekly Journal of 7 May 1733 it is stated that "Amariah Winchester sells farm at Brookline;" and in a deed dated 7 Apr. 1734 and recorded 11 Sept. 1735 Amariah Winchester "of Brookline, yeoman," and his wife Sarah sell to Samuel White 40 acres in Brookline on the highway to the meeting house and some marsh land. It is probable that about this time he, with his family, removed to New London, Conn., being the first of the Winchester family to move to that vicinity. In June 1739 the Brookline town records state: "Amariah Winchester with his wife and children warned to depart out of the Town of Brooklyn," an entry which would show that he then belonged in some other town.

Children:

i. HANNAH,[4] b. at Brookline 9 Feb. 1715/16; d. in 1736; m. in 1731 TIMOTHY HARRIS.
25. ii. AMARIAH, b. at Roxbury 25 July 1717.
26. iii. ANDREW, b. at Brookline 24 Feb. 1722/3.
iv. LUCY, b. at Brookline 2 May 1727; d. 3 Aug. 1746.
v. SARAH, bapt. at Brookline 17 Apr. 1730.
27. vi. JAMES, b. at Brookline 25 Sept. 1733.

12. ELHANAN[3] WINCHESTER (Josiah,[2] John[1]), cordwainer, born at Muddy River (Brookline) 14 Mar. 1691, died prior to 24 July 1752, as on that day his son Elhanan and his son-in-law Samuel Child were appointed administrators of the estate of "your father Elhanan Winchester late of Roxbury, cordwainer, deceased." He married in Boston, 1 Oct. 1713, Rev. Cotton Mather officiating, MARY TAYLOR, daughter of Isaac and Sarah of Boston.

The births of his first children, up to 1719 or 1720, are recorded in Boston; but after that he must have lived in Brookline, for he was elected sealer of leather at every town meeting from 6 Mar. 1720/1 to 4 Mar. 1744/5, besides being selectman in 1731 and 1732. After 1745, however, he may have taken up his residence across the line in the town of Roxbury, as that appears to have been his residence when he died.

Children:

i. MARY,[4] b. in Boston 4 Apr. 1715; d. 4 Oct. 1782; m. JOSIAH BOWEN of Brookline.
ii. ELIZA, b. in Boston 20 Dec. 1716.
iii. RUTH, b. in Boston 19 Mar. 1717/18; perhaps m. JONATHAN COREY.
28. iv. ELHANAN, b. at Brookline 29 Feb. 1719/20.
29. v. ISAAC, b. at Brookline 19 Oct. 1721.
vi. ELIZABETH, b. at Brookline 3 Aug. 1724; m. 26 Feb. 1744/5 SAMUEL CHILD of Newton.
vii. SARAH, b. at Brookline 28 Mar. 1727.
viii. JOSIAH, bapt. at Brookline 28 Apr. 1729.
30. ix. DANIEL, b. at Brookline 9 Feb. 1732/3.
31. x. MOSES, b. at Brookline 8 Oct. 1737.

13. JOHN[4] WINCHESTER (John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline about 1705, since he was described as about 16 years of age in Mar. 1721, when his father was appointed his guardian, died probably in Dec. 1738, his will being admitted to probate

7 Jan. 1738/9. He married at Reading, 25 Feb. 1729/30, ELIZABETH GREEN of that town, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Farmer) of Billerica, who married secondly, at Billerica, 2 Nov. 1749, Dea. Samuel Whiting and died at Southborough 20 Aug. 1773.

Not long before his death he moved to Cambridge; but his father's old home in Brookline was very near the town line of that part of Cambridge which became Brighton in 1807. His widow and children lived in Reading, Stoneham, and Southborough.

Children:

i. JOHN,[5] bapt. at Brookline 7 May 1732; d. young.
32. ii. WILLIAM, b., probably at Brookline, though possibly at Reading, 25 Apr. 1733.
iii. ELIZABETH, b. 29 Aug. 1734; m. at Reading, 25 Apr. 1757, EBENEZER RAND of Tewksbury.

14. ISAAC[4] WINCHESTER (John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline either in 1712 or in 1714, being described as about 9 years of age in Mar. 1721, when his father was appointed his guardian, died of consumption at Brookline 14 Feb. 1771, when his age is given as 57. He married, about 1736 or 1737, MARY SHED, born 12 Aug. 1715, died of smallpox at Brookline 6 June 1775, aged 60, daughter of James and Mary (Adams) of Roxbury. Her father was a substantial citizen and a man of large means for his day. He it was who in 1743 became the fourth husband of Alice (Craft) Greenwood, who after his death married Capt. John[3] Winchester (5).

Isaac Winchester was a prominent citizen of Brookline, filling many offices and being a selectman in the last year of his life. He probably lived in the old house of his great-grandfather, the first John (1). In 1761 he was one of the grantees of the town of Pomfret, Vt., although he never settled there. While he had five sons, there has been found no record of any children of these, though, as one son at least was married, there may have been children.

Children, born at Brookline:

i. OLIVE,[5] b. 2 Jan. 1737/8; d. before 3 Nov. 1770, the date of her father's will; m. WILLIAM DAWES, s. of Story. She left a son, William Story Dawes, b. 18 Jan. 1764.
ii. SARAH, b. 25 Sept. 1739; d. 19 Oct. 1822, aged 83; m. at Brookline, 11 June 1761, BENJAMIN DAVIS, who d. in 1774, aged 38.
iii. JOHN, b. 8 Sept. 1741; living 3 Nov. 1770, when his father made his will, leaving to his son John £40, to be paid in ten years, "or to his heirs if he should marry."
iv. ISAAC, A.B. (Harvard, 1764), A.M. (ib., 1767), b. 5 Aug. 1743; d. unm. during the Revolutionary War, his name being first starred in the Harvard catalogue of 1779. In the list of his Harvard class he was placed thirty-fifth in a class of forty-six. He was a soldier in the Revolution, and on 12 June 1775 signed a receipt for a bounty from the town. The Rev. Dr. John Pierce, minister of the Brookline church which all these Winchesters attended, said that Isaac died in the Continental Army (Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Second Series, vol. 2, p. 158), but the exact date of his death has not been ascertained.

v. Danforth, b. 15 June 1745. He was mentioned in his father's will of 3 Nov. 1770; and in 1777 the Brookline tax collector reported that he could not collect from him a tax for 1771 and 1772. There was a Danford Winchester on the New York Revolutionary rolls, who enlisted on 19 Dec. 1776 and was reported missing 6 Oct. 1777.

vi. Mary, b. 25 Aug. 1747; d. s. p. 25 Aug. 1772, aged 25; m. at Brookline, 13 Dec. 1770, Jacob Sharp, s. of Robert and Sarah (Payson).

vii. Charles, b. 14 Jan. 1749; living in Sept. 1814; m. Irene ———. He enlisted in the Revolution, and received a bounty from the town of Brookline in Mar. 1777. He is described in the records as a husbandman, 5 ft. and 7 in. high, with light hair and complexion, and aged 32 in 1780. Later he was a resident of Charlemont, Franklin Co., with his wife Irene; but no record has been found of any children. There are records of his transactions in land in the neighboring towns of Warwick and Rowe as late as Sept. 1814.

viii. Frances, b. 7 Nov. 1751; d. of consumption 24 Aug. 1776, aged 25.

ix. James, b. 4 Nov. 1753; living 1 Feb. 1785. He had a small service in the Revolution, and in the town meetings of 1780 and 1782 was chosen to a minor town office. In Mar. 1783 he acknowledged a deed conveying 40 acres of land which he had inherited from his father; and in this deed, dated 2 Mar. 1779, he is called husbandman, of Brookline. On 1 Feb. 1785 he gave another deed of land in which he is called "late of Brookline."

15. Nathan[4] Winchester (John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 16 Apr. 1724, died at Annapolis, N. S., probably in May 1802, as his will was proved on 31 May in that year. He married at Concord, Mass., 17 Oct. 1746, Beulah Parks, born 8 Nov. 1727, daughter of Josiah and Sarah of Concord.

In early life he lived in Brookline, where he was chosen to a minor town office in 1748 and possibly again in 1754. In Apr. and May 1756 he sold his homestead in Brookline, near the Cambridge line, and on 4 May 1756 bought 87½ acres of land, with buildings thereon, in Framingham, where he lived about three years, having a daughter baptized in the church there on 26 Sept. 1756. He sold this place 28 May 1759, and removed to Annapolis, N. S., taking up some of the rich farming lands left vacant by the expulsion of the Acadians. Calnek's "History of Annapolis County" states that he was a grantee of lands near Rosette, on the site of a former French settlement about three miles from the town, although the list of original grantees in 1759 does not contain his name. Calnek also states that Nathan Winchester was at Annapolis in 1768, with a family of five males and three females, and in 1770 with a family of ten persons, seven of whom were American born and three Acadian, and that he had 728 acres of land. In 1792 Nathan, John, and William Winchester were taxed at Annapolis.

His will, dated 2 Aug. 1796, was filed in 1802, and the jurat was sworn to at Halifax, N. S., 31 May 1802. In this will he leaves 10s. each to his sons John, Nathan, Josiah, William, and Spencer, and his daughter Beulah, wife of John Langley, and gives to his wife Beulah the use, rents, issues, and profits of the remainder of his personal property and real estate during her life, and at her death they are to go to his son Isaac. The estate was appraised at £256. 4s. 6d.

Children:

i. SARAH,[5] b. at Brookline 15 June 1747; probably d. young.
33. ii. JOHN, b. at Brookline 22 Sept. 1748.
iii. NATHAN, bapt. at Brookline 8 July 1750; living 2 Aug. 1796. Calnek makes no mention of him in Nova Scotia, but he received a legacy of 10s. in his father's will of 1796.
iv. BEULAH, bapt. at Framingham 26 Sept. 1756; living 2 Aug. 1796; m. JOHN LANGLEY of Annapolis. Four children.
v. MARY, b., according to Calnek, in 1756, before her father went to Nova Scotia, but the date may not be correct; m. BENJAMIN LE CAIN of Annapolis, b. in 1764. No children.
34. vi. JOSIAH, b. probably at Annapolis, N. S., after 1760.
35. vii. ISAAC, b. probably at Annapolis, N. S., about 1769 (in 1769, according to Calnek).
36. viii. SPENCER, b. probably at Annapolis, N. S., about 1770.
37. ix. WILLIAM, b. probably in Nova Scotia.

16. THOMAS[4] WINCHESTER (Benjamin,[3] John,[2] John[1]), baptized at Brookline 1 Jan. 1721/2, died at Hardwick 10 Jan. 1787, in his 66th year. He married at Westborough, 24 Nov. 1748, being then called of Westborough, MARY PRATT of Grafton, who died, probably at Hardwick, 29 Sept. 1803, aged 82 years, 25 days.

In early life he probably lived in Westborough. Paige's "History of Hardwick" states that he moved to that town before 1762; but, as all his children, from Sept. 1749 to Dec. 1763, were born at Hardwick, he must have moved thither at the time of his marriage.

Children, born at Hardwick:

38. i. MOSES,[5] b. 5 Sept. 1749.
ii. THOMAS, b. 1 Sept. 1751; d. 24 Apr. 1753.
iii. MARY, b. 10 Apr. 1753; m. 1 Jan. 1778 ELIJAH WASHBURN.
iv. PRUDENCE, b. 10 Oct. 1755; m. 3 June 1779 OLIVER BAILEY of Cummington.
v. ELIZABETH, b. 14 Mar. 1760; m. 22 Jan. 1781 THEODORUS FORBES of Wilmington, Vt.
39. vi. THOMAS, b. 9 Dec. 1763.

17. BENJAMIN[4] WINCHESTER (Benjamin,[3] John,[2] John[1]), baptized at Brookline 6 Mar. 1726, died at the home of his brother Joseph in Grafton, suddenly, while on a journey, 6 Jan. 1771. He married, 19 Feb. 1761, SARAH ALLEN, who died at Hardwick 8 May 1787, in her 53d year, daughter of Dea. Joseph, who was schoolmaster of Hardwick from 1750 to 1760.

On 16 Apr. 1755 he bought 90 acres of land in Hardwick from Kenelm Winslow, and was then called of Roxbury; but he probably soon moved to Hardwick. He served in the French and Indian War in 1757.

Children, born at Hardwick:

i. PRUDENCE,[5] b. 17 Oct. 1762; d. at Hardwick 19 Dec. 1797; m. at Sutton, 15 Feb. 1781, JONAS ALLEN, then of Sutton, who m. (2) Sarah Winchester, sister of his wife Prudence.

40. iii. Benjamin, b. 2 Dec. 1769.

18. Joshua[4] Winchester (Benjamin,[3] John,[2] John[1]), of Grafton, baptized, probably at Brookline, 14 May 1727, died at Grafton 30 Aug. 1757. He married at Grafton, 7 Dec. 1750, Mary Whipple, who married secondly, at Grafton, 12 May 1760, Ephraim Sherman, Jr.

19. Joseph[4] Winchester (Benjamin,[3] John,[2] John[1]), yeoman, cooper, born about 1730, his parents at that time being residents of Framingham, died at Brattleboro, Vt., 29 Dec. 1803, aged 73. He married at Grafton, 15 Apr. 1756, Lucy Harrington, born at Grafton 13 May 1730, daughter of Isaac and Miriam of that town.

From 1739 to 1771 he lived at Grafton, receiving upon the death of his father in 1762 the homestead, subject to his mother's life interest. In May 1771 he and his mother sold the place at Grafton, and shortly afterwards moved to the town of Marlboro in southern Vermont, being among the early settlers there. His son Luther is said in Child's "Gazetteer of Windham County" to have been the third child born in the town. The Vermont Census of 1790 gives Joseph and wife and one son over 16, probably Luther, the other sons except Antipas being listed separately. The two daughters had either married or died. The homestead at Marlboro descended to his son Luther,[5] then to Luther's son Antipas,[6] and then to the latter's son Williston,[7] who died in 1902.

Joseph[4] Winchester served in the Revolution from Vermont, in the expedition to Bennington, 29 Aug. to 22 Sept. 1777, and again for three days in Dec. 1782, to suppress insurgents in Windham County.

Children, all except Luther born at Grafton:

20. Joseph[4] Winchester (Henry,[3] John,[2] John[1]), of Brookline, farmer, tanner, born at Brookline 2 Apr. 1710, died there 28 Feb. 1781, aged (according to the Brookline church records) 72, and, if this age is correct, he must have been born in 1709. He married first, at Roxbury, 27 Nov. 1740, Marga-RET BREWER, born at Roxbury 18 Apr. 1719, died before 1753, daughter of Nathaniel and Elizabeth of that town and sister of the Dorothy Brewer who married his brother Henry; secondly, in the part of Braintree which is now Quincy, 8 Mar. 1753, MARY RAWSON, born 20 May 1718, died before 1758, daughter of David and Mary (Gulliver) Rawson of Braintree, great-granddaughter of Edward Rawson, secretary of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and niece of Hannah Gulliver, wife of Joseph's uncle Stephen (9); and thirdly, at Roxbury, 1 Mar. 1758, PRISCILLA GORE, said to have been born at Roxbury 26 Nov. 1717, died "of small pox natural" 14 Dec. 1776, aged (according to the Brookline church records) 63, daughter of Ebenezer and Susanna (Paul) of Roxbury.

He lived probably in the central part of Brookline, towards the West Roxbury line, as he was often chosen road surveyor for that section, and he owned land bordering on Jamaica Pond.

In his will, dated at Brookline 5 May 1778 and proved 3 Mar. 1781, he mentions his son Nathaniel, the heirs of his daughter Nanny Seaver, deceased, and his grandson Henry Cunningham.

21. REV. JONATHAN[4] WINCHESTER (Henry,[3] John,[2] John[1]), A.B. (Harvard, 1737), A.M. (ib., 1740), born at Brookline 21 Apr. 1717, died at Ashburnham 26 Nov. 1767. He married at Brookline, 5 May 1748, SARAH CROFT, born about 1728, died at Ashburnham 27 July 1794, aged 70, daughter of Capt. Samuel and Mehitable (Aspenwall). Her father owned a farm in Brookline on the present Washington and Cypress Streets, extending back almost to Walnut Street.

Jonathan Winchester was the first of the name to be graduated at Harvard, and there were only three of the name who took degrees there prior to 1900, though many Harvard graduates had the Winchester blood through female lines. At Harvard he was placed seventh in a class of thirty-four, the names being arranged in accordance with the social standing of the students' parents. He first taught school, and then became a minister. In the Dedham town records is the entry: "October ye 30th 1738 Mr Jonathan Winchester by Agreement with the Select Men began to keep ye Schoole in ye Town neare ye meeting house for one quarter after the rate of seventy-five pounds p annum." He probably remained in charge of the school about two years. As late as 14 Apr. 1757 there appeared in the Boston News-Letter the item that "Jonathan Winchester has opened a grammer school at his dwelling house in Brookline. Teaches Latin and Greek." He filled many town offices of importance, and was for several years town clerk and treasurer. At the town meetings in Mar. 1754 and 1755 he was chosen moderator, selectman and assessor, town clerk, and town treasurer, and in the latter year he was one of the committee to supply the pulpit, so that for those two years at least the affairs of the town seem to have been pretty firmly in his hands. On 23 Apr. 1760 he was ordained as the first minister of the church at Ashburnham, having been called there late in 1759. The historian of the town characterized him as "a man of singular purity of character, a kind neighbor and an earnest and effective preacher." He died there at the early age of 50, with apparently many years of usefulness before him. The line of descendants from him is one of the strongest and best branches of the family.

*William Cunningham and Margaret Winchester were married at Christ Church, Boston, 7 Dec. 1773; and the Brookline church records give the baptism in 1774 of Henry Cunningham, son of William, and the marriage, 23 May 1782, of Henry Dunster and Margaret Cunningham.

†In REGISTER, vol. 3, p. 302, in a sketch of the descendants of Edward Rawson, two children are assigned to Mary Rawson and her husband, [Joseph] Winchester; but on 12 Nov. 1756 Joseph Winchester was appointed guardian to Mehitabel only, to receive a legacy from the estate of her Grandmother Rawson.

Children, the first six born at Brookline and the last four at Ashburnham:

i. Samuel,[5] b. 5 May 1749; d. 18 July 1750.
ii. Elizabeth, b. 20 June 1751; d. 21 June 1782, aged 31; m. 26 Oct. 1769 Jacob Harris of Ashburnham.
47. iii. Henry, b. 25 May 1753.

22. Stephen[4] Winchester (Stephen,[3] John,[2] John[1]), farmer, born at Newton 11 Aug. 1723, died there 8 July 1798. He married first, at King's Chapel, Boston, 9 Oct. 1750, Beulah Trowbridge, born 29 Aug. 1726, died 21 Mar. 1762, nine days after the birth of her son Stephen, aged 36, daughter of Dea. William of Newton; and secondly, at Newton, 12 Apr. 1764, Hannah (Hastings) Aspinwall, born at Newton 20 July 1740, died there 21 Feb. 1801, aged 61, daughter of Samuel and Hepsibah (Dana) Hastings of Cambridge and Newton and widow of Caleb Aspinwall. She had been married to Caleb Aspinwall 10 June 1761, and he had died on 26 Aug. following, aged 26.

Stephen Winchester lived on the farm which he had inherited from his father, near the Upper Falls of the Charles River. He was a selectman of Newton in 1764, and served in the Revolution for brief periods in 1776 and 1778. He was well-off for a man of his time and occupation, and, though he had a large family and many of them were not prosperous, he left the major part of his estate to his youngest two sons, Edmund and Amasa, who had gone to Boston and were becoming successful merchants. This line of the family also produced many men and women of character and ability.

Children, by first wife, born at Newton:

i. HANNAH,[5] b. in 1751; d. 13 Jan. 1803; m. 13 May 1778 EBENEZER GREENWOOD of Newton.

He married at Newton, 8 June 1758, ANNA HAMMOND, born at Newton 23 Sept. 1736, died at Brookline 18 Apr. 1797, aged 60, daughter of John and Margaret (Wilson) of Newton.

He lived in the south part of Brookline, where he was an influential citizen, serving the town in many offices and on committees for raising soldiers and money during the Revolution. Many of his descendants lived in West Roxbury, and are buried in the burial ground at Jamaica Plain.

Children, probably all born at Brookline:

i. Elizabeth,[5] b. 13 Feb. 1759; d. at Newton 2 Sept. 1827, aged 68; m. 24 May 1787 Edward Mitchell of Brookline. They lived in Newton, where they kept the public house formerly kept by her uncle, Lieut. John Marean.

viii. Lucretia, b. 13 Aug. 1773; m. Jabez Lewis of Roxbury.

24. Caleb[4] Winchester (Josiah,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 5 Aug. 1709, died in 1736 (before Dec.). He married (intention recorded in Boston, 8 Apr. 1731) Mary Knight of Boston, who after his death married ——— Ward.

He was described as aged about 19 when a guardian was appointed for him in Mar. 1727/8. He lived in early life in Brookline, where he was chosen to a small town office 1 Mar. 1731/2, and later in Stow, where he owned 75 acres lying partly in the adjoining town of Sudbury. In the probate proceedings in Middlesex County on his estate he is called "late of Boston, mason."

Children:

i. Josiah,[5] bapt. at Brookline 27 Aug. 1732; probably d. young, perhaps before his father's death, as no further trace of him is found, though he may have been alive 14 Dec. 1736.
57. ii. Caleb, b. at Stow 18 Sept. 1734.
iii. There was probably a third child (posthumous), who probably d. young.

25. Amariah[4] Winchester (Amariah,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Roxbury 25 July 1717, moved with his father to New London, Conn., when a young man, and probably lived in that Colony. Records at Pomfret, Conn., give the marriage, 25 Aug. 1742, of Amariah Winchester and Mary Sawyer, and also the marriage, 15 Jan. 1744, probably at Brooklyn, Conn., of Amariah Winchester and Hannah Cady, daughter of Ezekiel of Pomfret. Amariah Winchester was then said to be living at Brooklyn, but a descendant of his brother Andrew, who has excellent records of this branch of the family, states that he never heard of the Sawyer marriage.

In 1758 Amariah Winchester served in the French and Indian War from Connecticut, and among the heads of families in New London County in the Connecticut Census of 1790 is an Amaziah Winchester, who has a family of two males over 16 and two females. This man's residence and family are vague, and little has been found that is authentic; but, as there are several Winchesters in this part of Connecticut who do not belong in the other lines, one might hazard a guess that they were children of this man. These names include:

i. Anne, m. 1 Mar. 1764 Dea. Nathan Cady.
ii. Lucy, m. in 1772 Asa Hyde.
iii. Jabez, of Brooklyn, Conn., m. in Boston, 6 June 1788, Lucretia Pepoon.
iv. Amariah, of Hebron, Conn., d. 5 Mar. 1821 (pension record). He was a Revolutionary soldier, and applied for a pension in 1818, stating that he was 71 years old. In 1820 he stated that he was about 74, and had a wife and a son and daughter.
v. Joel, m. at Preston, Conn., 21 Feb. 1788, Peggy Larabee.

26. Andrew[4] Winchester (Amariah,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), of Canterbury, Conn., born at Brookline 24 Feb. 1722/3, died at Canterbury 18 May 1793. He married Joanna Williams, born 15 June 1729 or 6 June 1731, died at Canterbury 12 May 1808, daughter of Ebenezer of New London, Conn.

When a boy he moved to New London with his father.

Children, the first three born at New London and the others at Canterbury, Conn.:

58. i. Andrew,[5] b. 16 Oct. 1750.
ii. A son, b. and d. 24 July 1752.

vi. Lucy, b. 21 Apr. 1760; m. 14 Dec. 1780 Elijah Bennett, Jr., of Canterbury, Conn.
vii. James, b. 2 Feb. 1762.
viii. A son, b. and d. 20 Mar. 1764.
ix. Sarah, b. 26 Apr. 1765; d. 11 Mar. 1788; m. 3 Nov. 1784 Charles Gusten (or Justen), and had sons Ira and Andrew.
61. x. Joel, b. 3 May 1767.
xi. Delight, b. 23 Mar. 1769; d. 2 June 1789.
xii. Joanna, b. 1 Oct. 1771; d. 10 Nov. 1790.

27. James[4] Winchester (Amariah,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 25 Sept. 1733, died in Connecticut 1 Jan. 1762. He married in that part of Norwich, Conn., which is now Lisbon, 15 Mar. 1757, Anna Longbottom, born at Norwich 24 May 1736, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Caswell) of Norwich.

In early youth he went with his father to Connecticut, where he lived thereafter. He and his wife may have resided in Norwich, as their two children were born there.

Children, born at Norwich, Conn.:

i. James,[5] b. 19 Feb. 1758.
ii. Anne, b. 9 Nov. 1759.

28. Dea. Elhanan[4] Winchester (Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 29 Feb. 1719/20 (Shaker records), died at Harvard 20 Sept. 1810. He married first, some time before 1750, Abigail Hovey, who died s. p. at an early age; secondly, about 1750, Sarah Belcher, born 13 Oct. 1729, died 7 Jan. 1760, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Brown) of Cambridge and Wrentham (cf. Register, vol. 60, page 255); and thirdly, at Rowley, 9 Apr. 1761, LYDIA JEWETT, born at Boxford 15 Aug. 1733, died at Harvard 3 Feb. 1820, daughter of Ezekiel.

Elhanan Winchester, generally called "Deacon," was a well-known citizen of Brookline, where his house was at the farther end of Heath Street, near Hammond Street, and close to the Newton town line. He was a farmer and shoemaker, and probably traded to some extent in hides and leather. He held at various times most of the town offices, and was an active, energetic person of the type that is always busy at town meetings. Religion influenced his life, and he changed his belief many times, possibly led in some of these changes by his son Elhanan, the famous preacher, though quite likely the same strain of character ran through both father and son. Occasionally he preached, though never as a settled minister. He began as a Congregationalist, then, being an admirer of Rev. George Whitefield, he became a "New Light," then a Baptist, then a Universalist, and finally a member of the Shaker community in the town of Harvard. While he was a "New Light," the meetings were held at his house, and the worshippers built an addition to his house for this purpose. After most of his children were married, he is said to have left Brookline, about 1793, and moved to South Brimfield, where his brother Daniel was living; and in 1797 he and his wife joined the Shakers at Harvard, as did some of his children and grandchildren.

Children by second wife, born at Brookline:

62. i. ELHANAN,[5] b. 30 Sept. 1751.
63. ii. SAMUEL, b. 11 Mar. 1753.
64. iii. DAVID (twin), b. 13 July or 13 Aug. 1756.
65. iv. JONATHAN (twin), b. 13 July or 13 Aug. 1756.
66. v. SILAS, b. 5 Sept. 1758.
67. vi. BENJAMIN, b. 4 Jan. 1760.

Children by third wife, born at Brookline:

vii. LOIS, b. 28 Jan. 1762; m. in Boston, 8 Nov. 1787, DANIEL RICE. For some of their descendants vide infra, No. 142.
68. viii. MOSES, b. 24 Aug. 1763.
ix. SARAH, b. 24 Oct. 1764; d. in 1848, aged 84; m. 2 Nov. 1788 THOMAS HAMMOND of Newton. About 1809 they both joined the Shakers at Harvard.
69. x. AARON, b. 28 Mar. 1766.
70. xi. DANIEL, b. 19 Mar. 1768.
xii. ELIZABETH, b. 3 Feb. 1770; d. 20 Aug. 1787.
xiii. MARY, b. 18 June 1774; d. 24 Aug. 1775.
71. xiv. EBENEZER, b. about 1776.
xv. PHOEBE, b. 18 May 1778; m. about 1798 JESSE STOWELL of Littleton. They emigrated to Michigan and possibly later to Canada.
xvi. LYDIA (possibly, as mentioned in Jackson's "History of Newton").

29. ISAAC[4] WINCHESTER (Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 19 Oct. 1721, died at Tewksbury before 1747, one of his descendants giving the date as 6 July 1741. He married DEBORAH ———, who after his death married secondly, at Roxbury, 2 Feb. 1747, Jerathmiel Wheeler of Brookline; and, as she was then called of Brookline, she was probably originally a resident of that town.

Isaac Winchester must have moved after his marriage to Tewksbury, for he died there and his only child was born there.

Child:

72. i. LEMUEL,[5] b. at Tewksbury 13 May 1740.

30. DANIEL[4] WINCHESTER (Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 9 Feb. 1732/3, died at South Brimfield (now Wales) 4 Oct. 1797, aged 64. He married at Coventry, Conn., 28 Nov. 1751, RUTH PALMER, who died 26 Sept. 1801, aged 68.

He was chosen to a minor town office at Brookline 1 Mar. 1756, and about 1758 moved to that part of Brimfield which was later incorporated as the town of South Brimfield and is now the town of Wales. There for forty years he was a prominent citizen, and was styled storekeeper and gentleman. He kept the usual country store, and was active and influential in town affairs. He was a selectman in 1772, 1774, 1776, 1777, and 1788, a delegate to the Provincial Congress at Salem 7 Oct. 1774, and a representative from South Brimfield in the State Legislature in 1785 and 1787.

Child:

i. JOHN,[5] b. and d. at Coventry, Conn., 29 May 1752.

31. MOSES[4] WINCHESTER (Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]) was born at Brookline 8 Oct. 1737. He married at Roxbury, 25 Oct. 1757, MARY AMES.

There was a Moses Winchester who had brief service in the Revolution as a private in the Army around Boston, between July 1779 and 1 Jan. 1780; and another record gives a Moses Winchester of South Brimfield, who enlisted 1 July 1780 and served 5 months and 17 days at West Point. Either or both of these records may refer to Moses[4] Winchester (31), but it is not absolutely certain that they relate to him.

Children:

i. ISAAC,[5] bapt. at Roxbury 29 Jan. 1758.
ii. MARY, bapt. at Roxbury 20 Sept. 1761.
iii. SARAH, bapt. at Roxbury 27 May 1764.
iv. ELIZABETH, bapt. at Cambridge 18 May 1766.
v. LUCRETIA, bapt. at Roxbury 14 Aug. 1768.
vi. MOSES, bapt. at Roxbury 1 Mar. 1772.
vii. CHARLES, bapt. at Roxbury 7 Aug. 1774.

SOME RECORDS OF THE VERMONT COOLIDGES

Communicated by GEORGE WALTER CHAMBERLAIN, M.S., of Malden, Mass.

BELOW is printed the genealogical information about the Coolidges of Vermont, down to 1909, that is found in the copies of the records of births, marriages, and deaths and of gravestone inscriptions now on file and indexed in the office of the Secretary of State at Montpelier, Vt., whither they have been sent, in accordance with the Vermont laws, by the clerks of the various towns in the State. In editing these records for publication the surname Coolidge has been omitted, but other forms of the name, such as Cooledge, Coolige, etc., when they occur instead of Coolidge, have been given in parentheses. The customary abbreviations (b., m., d., ch., s., dau.) have been used for born, married, died, child, son, and daughter; and, except in the marriage records, the name of the place where the original record was found, preceded by a dash, follows the entry. These records may be regarded as addenda to the article entitled "The Early New England Coolidges and Some of Their Descendants," which was published in the REGISTER for October 1923.

THE POLKS OF NORTH CAROLINA AND TENNESSEE

By Mrs. Frank M. Angellotti of San Rafael, Calif.

36. John[6] Polk (John,[5] Capt. John,[4] William,[3] William,[2] Robert[1]), born, probably in the Greenbrier District of western Virginia, 25 Oct. 1798, died in Madison Co., Tex., 14 Feb. 1864. He married first, probably in Tipton Co., Tenn., 28 Oct. 1825, his first cousin, Cynthia Springs[6] Polk (13, v), born, probably in western Tennessee, 25 Feb. 1801, died in Leon Co., Tex., 28 Aug. 1855, daughter of Charles and Margaret (Baxter); secondly, 30 July 1856, Mrs. Mary (Floyd) McIlhenny, who died 22 June 1859; and thirdly, at Leona, Leon Co., Tex., 10 Dec. 1861, Nancy Newsome, born in Georgia 2 Nov. 1842, died at Madisonville, Tex., 14 July 1865, daughter of Nathaniel and Susan (Jones) of Georgia, who had migrated to Texas.

On 16 Aug. 1828 his father, in a deed recorded in the register's office of Maury Co., Tenn. (Book iv, page 163), "for the love and affection he bore him," conveyed to him land; and this conveyance probably accounts for the absence of his name from his father's will, as it was, no doubt, considered his share in the family fortune. He transferred this land on the same day to his brother, Evan Shelby Polk (35).

He moved to Texas with the family of his uncle, Charles Polk (13), in 1839, and lived successively in San Augustine, Leon, and Madison Counties. He was a planter and stockman, and was grand master of Rising Star Chapter No. 9, a Masonic lodge at San Augustine, Tex.

Children by first wife:

i. Isaac Carlo,[7] b., probably in Tipton Co., Tenn., 15 Oct. 1826; d. unm. in Texas 18 Mar. 1852. He served in the Texas Legislature.

Broocks, b. near Columbia, Tenn., 12 Oct. 1829, d. in San Augustine Co., Tex., 16 Apr. 1901, s. of Gen. Travis Green and Elizabeth Ann (Morris).† John H. Broocks served in the Mexican War in 1846, under General Taylor, in Capt. O. M. Wheeler's company; and throughout the Civil War he served in the Confederate Army, first as captain of a company which he had raised in San Augustine in 1861 and afterwards as major and colonel. His service was principally in Ross's brigade. His brother, James A. Broocks, who succeeded on his promotion to the command of the company, led it and was killed in the battle of Thompson's Station, Tenn. John H. Broocks was a planter in San Augustine. Children (surname Broocks): 1. A daughter, b. and d. in 1855. 2. Travis Green, b. in 1856; d. in 1859. 3. Cynthia

*This Burleson family was of Welsh origin, and was descended from Aaron[1] Burleson, who came to North Carolina in 1726 and reared seven sons and six daughters. All his sons served in the Revolution, three falling in battle and the youngest, Capt. Edward Burleson, being captured by the British and shot, when on his way to be married. At the end of the Revolutionary War one of the sons, Aaron,[2] set out for Kentucky, but was killed by the Indians at Clinch River, in Tennessee. His son Aaron[3] was killed at Campbell's Station, Tenn., but the other sons, James,[3] Joseph,[3] and John,[3] pressed on to Kentucky, and thence moved to Tennessee. In 1816 Joseph[3] moved on to Missouri, but returned to Tennessee, and then moved to Texas in 1829. He was the father of Col. James Marcus Burleson, the husband of Margaret Olivia Polk (36, ii). Soon after the Civil War the Burlesons moved to Navarro Co., Tex., with the exception of Col. James Marcus Burleson, who remained in San Augustine Co. In 1889 Rev. Rufus Burleson, D.D., president of Baylor College, Tex., published a pamphlet on the Burleson family, in which some of the prominent members of the family are mentioned. The family played an important part in the early history of Texas.

†Gen. Travis Green Broocks moved from the neighborhood of Columbia, Tenn., to San Augustine Co., Tex., in 1838, with his wife and sons, John H., Moses A., and James A. He was a contractor and a merchant before settling down on his plantation, and he owned nearly one hundred slaves. He fought in the early Texan wars, and died in San Augustine Co. in 1865, "aged 56 years."

†The name Cearley is variously spelled in the Colonial records of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and later in Virginia, where Edmund Cearley's great-grandfather, William, Sr., held a land patent in Lunenburg County, issued to him in the name of King George II on 5 July 1751, and also in North Carolina, whither the family removed after the Revolution, the forms that have been found including Carley, Carly, Carlye, Cearley, Cerly, Kearley, Kerley, and Kerly.

Land was surveyed in Virginia for William Kerly, Sr., in 1743 and for William, Jr., in 1748 (Stith's Virginia Surveys). The patent of 1751 is on file at Richmond, Va. (Patent Book 30, p. 470), and shows that King George II, through "our trusty and well-beloved Lewis Burwell," issued to William Kerly, 5 July 1751, "in the twenty-fifth year of our Reign," a patent of land "in our County of Lunenburg," touching Byrd's line, "with all woods, swamps, marshes and low grounds, meadows, feedings, and his due share of all veins, mines, and quarries, as well discovered as not discovered, within the grounds aforesaid, . . . and the rivers, waters, and water courses therein contained, together with the privilege of hunting, hawking, fishing, fowling, and all other profits, commodities, and hereditaments whatsoever to the same or any part thereof belonging or in any wise appertaining. To have and to hold, possess, and enjoy the said Parcel of land and all other the afore-mentioned Premises, and every part thereof, with their lands and every of their appurtenances, to the said William Kerly, his heirs and assigns forever, to be held of us, our Heirs and Successors, as of our Manor of East Greenwich in the County of Kent, in free and common soccage, and not in Capite or Knight's service. Yielding and paying unto us, our Heirs and Successors, for every fifty acres of land, and so proportionally a greater or lesser quantity than fifty acres, the Fee Rent of one Shilling yearly, to be paid on the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, and also cultivating and improving three acres of every fifty of the Tract above mentioned within three years after the date of these Presents. . . . In witness whereof we have caused these letters Patent to be made. Witness our trusty and well-beloved Lewis Burwell, Esqr., President of our Council and Commander-in-Chief of our said Colony and Dominion at Williamsburg."

William Kerly, the grantee under this patent of 1751, sold the land in 1756, but, as William Carley (also spelled Cereley and Careley), received another grant in 1760, which is on file in the land office at Richmond, Va. (Land Grants, vol. 2, p. 563, where it is indexed under William Carly), and which reads as follows:

"George the Second [etc.]. Whereas by one patent under the seal of this our Colony and Dominion of Virginia, bearing date xxv day of June, one thousand seven hundred and forty-seven, there was granted unto William Buttrom One certain Tract or Parcel of Land Containing One hundred and seventy acres, lying and being then in the County of Brunswick, now Halifax, on the South Side of Banister River, and bounded as followeth, to wit; Beginning at a Hiccory on the said River, thence South Eighty-one degrees, West sixty-two poles to a Red Oak, Thence South Fifty-two degrees, West Sixty poles, to a pine, thence North thirty-two Degrees, West one hun-

Cearley was a planter in Arkansas, and early in 1859, with his family and a party of friends, who had assembled for the journey at St. Joseph, Mo., he started to cross the plains and mountains to California. They took with them mules as a speculation. They were delayed on the plains by their cattle being stampeded and their mules stolen by Indians, and they reached western Nevada too late to finish the crossing that year, being deterred by tales of the unfortunate and tragic fate of the Donner party. They remained in Washoe Co., Nev., until the spring of 1860. On reaching California, they remained for a very short time at Stockton, and then moved to Vallejo's Mills, where Edmund Cearley bought land and spent the rest of his life. He was a farmer and an express owner. There were other Southern people in this community, and among them he became a prominent Democrat. Both he and his wife are buried in Odd Fellows' Cemetery, Irvington, Calif.

Thence down the said River, as it meanders, to the Beginning. Which said Tract or Parcel of land was granted on condition of paying our Quit Rents and cultivating and Improving as in the said patent is expressed. And Whereas William Buttron failed to pay such Quit rents and to make cultivation and Improvements, and William Carley hath made humble Suit to our Lieutenant Governor and Commander-in-Chief of our said Colony and Dominion and hath obtained a grant for the same. Therefore know ye that for divers good causes and considerations, but more especially in consideration of Twenty Shillings of good and lawful money for Our use, paid to our Receiver General in this our Said Colony and Dominion, we have given, granted, and confirmed, and by these presents for our own heirs and successors do give, grant, and confirm unto the said William Cereley, and to his heirs and successors, Do Give, Grant, and Confirm unto the said William Careley, and to his heirs and assigns forever, all the said tract or Parcel of Land and every part and Parcel thereof, with all [etc.]. Witness our trusty and well-beloved Francis Fauquier, Esquire, our lieutenant governor and commander-in-chief of our said Colony and Dominion at Williamsburg, under the seal of our said Colony, the fifteenth day of July, One thousand seven hundred and sixty, In the thirty fourth year of our reign. Fran: Fauquier."

In 1760 there were granted to James Careley, brother of the above-named William, 400 acres of land in Halifax County.

In 1783 the land granted to William Carley in 1760 was sold, but in the deed William and his wife Martha wrote their surname Kerley.

William Kerly (or Carley), Sr., married Martha Carter; and in his will, proved at Wilkesboro, Wilkes Co., N. C., in the March term of 1796, he names his sons William, Joseph, John, and Larkin, and his daughters Lucy, Martha, Sarah, and Wilmoth. He married, 6 Feb. 1800, Mary Barnes, born 20 Dec. 1781, died near Taylorsville, N. C., 12 Nov. 1864, daughter of Solomon and Elizabeth (Murphy). In his will, proved at Wilkesboro, Wilkes Co., N. Solomon Barnes, father of the wife of Larkin Cearley, was of New England ancestry, the family having migrated via Virginia to North Carolina, where they settled in the old Wilkes County (now Alexander County). He was well-to-do, brought with him to North Carolina cattle, sheep, and slaves, and built a stone house, part of which was standing in 1880. In his will, proved in the February term of 1807 and on file in Wilkes Co., N. C., he calls himself "planter," gives to his wife Elizabeth "the plantation on which I now live," with all his personal estate and slaves, names his children, and leaves to those of his children "who have not yet had their portion" an aggregate of 640 acres of land and other property. *Rev. John H. Babcock, father of George Babcock, was a descendant of James[1] Babcock, who was admitted as an inhabitant of Portsmouth, R. I., 25 Feb. 1642, was prominent at Westerly, R. I., took part in the "Swamp Fight" in King Philip's War, and was a deputy to the Colonial Legislature in 1682 and 1684, through John,[2] Job,[3] Job,[4] Josiah,[5] and Rev. Deodatus,[6] D.D., his father, who was for many years rector of Christ Church, Ballston Spa, N. Y., where a beautiful window has been placed in his memory by relatives and friends. (Cf. the Babcock Genealogy.) George Babcock's mother, Margaret Pierce (Bull), was daughter of Judge Bull of Ballston Spa.

†Giuseppe Angellotti was born in Italy, and participated in the revolutionary uprisings there in 1848–9. He was in Rome at the time of the fighting in defence of the Roman Republic, his sister Geltruda being then a nun in that city. He fought with the Volunteers for a few weeks preceding the fall of Rome, and joined in the retreat of the Four Thousand, under Garibaldi, as far as San Marino. When this force was disbanded, he escaped, secured passage a little later on a sailing vessel, and went to Montevideo. Thence, when the news of the discovery of gold in California had reached him, he sailed around the Horn to San Francisco. Not caring for the work in the mines, he settled in Marin County, where his first deed of land, recorded in Deed Book 1, is dated 5 Oct. 1852. His name appears frequently thereafter in deeds, sometimes in the Spanish form, José, and later in the English form, Joseph. He was a landowner, merchant, and hotel owner, and resided in Marin County until 1883, when he went on a business trip to Mexico, contracted yellow fever, and died at Guaymas, in the State of Sonora, 22 Sept. 1883. He was buried at Guaymas. Besides their son, Frank Marion Angellotti, Giuseppe and Lois Frances (Osgood) Angellotti had a daughter, Emma Teresa, b. 11 Dec. 1865, d. at St. Helena, Calif., 15 Jan. 1899, bur. in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael, Calif., who married (1) at Calvary Presbyterian Church, San Francisco, 16 Sept. 1885, the pastor, Rev. *Charles Thomas Rogers was born, probably in Wake Co., N. C., about 1795, and died at South Harpeth, Williamson Co., Tenn., 26 Sept. 1824. He married at Fall Creek, Rutherford Co., Tenn., 9 Apr. 1817, Elizabeth Hutton, daughter of John M. While still in his teens he ran away from home, because of a boyish misunderstanding, and went to Tennessee. In the War of 1812 he enlisted at Franklin, Williamson Co., 20 Dec. 1813, in Capt. Matthew Johnston's company, Col. Nicholas T. Perkins's regiment, First Tennessee Mounted Volunteers. In the fight at Enotochapco Creek, 24 Jan. 1814, he was wounded in the right arm, was discharged from the service 8 Feb. 1814, and returned to Franklin. At his death, which was caused indirectly by his wound, after several years of poor health, he left his family in straitened circumstances; for, although his children were entitled to a considerable inheritance from their grandfather's estate in North Carolina,

Rogers was passed on the plantation of his maternal grandfather, in Weakley Co., Tenn. He was educated at home, at "subscription schools" in the neighborhood, at private schools at Fulton, Ky., and at McKenzie College. During the Civil War his maternal grandfather died, and all of this grandfather's lands, except the widow's dower in the home and 200 acres besides, were sold to pay security debts which he had incurred in helping his neighbors weather the storm of war. In young manhood Leonidas Gideon Rogers entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, serving first in the West Tennessee Conference and in Dec. 1882 in the Northwestern Conference. For a short time he was in the White River (Ark.) Conference. Residence, Dallas, Tex. Children (surname Rogers): 1. Leonidas Winfield, of Austin, Tex., A.B. (Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex., 1909), b. at Groesbeck, Limestone Co., Tex., 15 May 1883; m. at Mineola, Tex., 23 Dec. 1914, Marcia Butts, dau. of John Henry and Lelia (Lawrence); he was on the staff of the Galveston News, 1911, principal of the high school, Mineola, Tex., 1911–1914, teacher of history in the high school at Dallas, 1915–1917, superintendent of schools, Huntsville, Tex., 1918, and special State supervisor of rural schools, 1919–1922; no children. 2. Ethel Olivia, of Dallas, A.B. (Southwestern University, 1908), b. at Burnett, Tex., 18 Feb. 1885; unm. 3. Fannie Tabitha, A.B. (Southwestern University, 1909), b. at Wheatland, Dallas Co., Tex., 19 Mar. 1887; m. at Dallas, 16 June 1920, Dr. William Saundors Baldwin, s. of Dr. Benjamin Joseph and Willie Catherine (Saundors); residence, Mineral Springs, Tex.; no children. 4. Wilmot Polk, of Berkeley, Calif., b. at Rice, Navarro Co., Tex., 16 Jan. 1889; m. at Gate, Beaver Co., Okla., 1 June 1910, Edna Sarah Beardsley, b. at Ottawa, Kans., 3 Oct. 1888, dau. of William Lincoln and Maggie Oliver (Miller) Beardsley and granddaughter of Col. Ezra Marvin and Sarah (Lemmon) Beardsley of Rock Island, Ill.; he was educated at Weatherford College and Southwestern University; he enlisted at Weatherford, 4 June 1907, in Co. G, Fourth Infantry, Texas National Guard, and was discharged 4 June 1910; soon after they were ignorant of their rights, since their father had never communicated with his father's family after running away from home. The children of Charles Thomas and Elizabeth (Hutton) Rogers were: 1. John Henry, b. in Mar. 1818. 2. Zane Mira, m. ——— Allen. 3. Mark Washington, b. in Maury Co., Tenn., 19 Oct. 1822. 4. James William.

As these children grew up, John Henry was apprenticed to a printer and Mark Washington to a saddler. In the late fifties John Henry Rogers, who was then on the staff of the St. Louis Republican, in looking through some old files of that newspaper, came across an advertisement for his father or his heirs, which had been inserted in the paper in the early thirties by the executors of the estate of Charles Thomas Rogers's father. He immediately took steps to establish the right of his father's family to share in the inheritance, and about 1860 went to North Carolina and entered suit to have his father's share in the estate distributed to the latter's heirs. Before the case came to trial the Civil War broke out, John Henry Rogers died in 1863, the estate became impoverished by the emancipation of the slaves, and the heirs of Charles Thomas Rogers did not prosecute their claims further.

Mark Washington Rogers married in Weakley Co., Tenn., 11 Sept. 1844, Sarah Tabitha Mitchell, daughter of Rev. Matthew Freeman Mitchell. Soon afterwards he migrated, with his wife, to White Co., Ill., where John Henry Rogers and others of the family settled. GENEALOGICAL GLEANINGS IN ENGLAND
I

Contributed by G. Andrews Moriarty, Jr., A.M., LL.B., of Newport, R. I., and communicated by the Committee on English Research

[To the present issue of the Register the Committee on English Research communicates the first of a series of articles contributed by G. Andrews Moriarty, Jr., Esq., Chairman of the Committee, and consisting for the most part of abstracts of records relating to the English ancestry and connections of various early settlers of New England which are not sufficient to serve as foundations for such extended articles as have appeared in recent years in the Register under the title "Genealogical Research in England." These records, however, are of considerable interest and importance in supplying additional information about families whose histories have already been published in the Register or elsewhere or in furnishing clues which may be helpful in further research. Most of them were collected personally by Mr. Moriarty during his stay in England in the winter of 1920–21 and again in the late winter and spring of 1923, and others have been found and copied by searchers working under his immediate direction and at his expense. A few items have been secured from other investigators by gift or purchase. This collection of records has been generously placed at the disposal of the Committee by Mr. Moriarty, whose longer articles on the English ancestry of New England families which have been printed in the Register from time to time during the last six years have been highly appreciated by those interested in English genealogical research. Comparatively few wills are included in these records, for the bulk of the material has been taken from documents in the Public Record Office, London, where the greater part of Mr. Moriarty's research work was done. — Editor.]

Haskett

In the Register, vol. 77, pages 71–77, 110–133, there were published records and a pedigree relating to the English ancestry and family connections of Stephen Haskett of Salem, Mass., including numerous documents pertaining to the lawsuits in which various members of the Haskett family in England were involved and especially to the cases arising from the contest for the estate of Elias Haskett of Henstridge Marsh, co. Somerset (who died in Feb. 1696/7), of which the nephew of the deceased, Elias Haskett, son of Stephen of Salem, Mass., was finally appointed administrator cum testamento annexo. The following records throw additional light on the history of this family. Among them may be found the marriage record of Stephen Haskett, the emigrant to New England, and numerous interesting depositions in cases to which Elias Haskett, son of Stephen, was a party and in some earlier cases. These records supply also further details about the movements of Stephen Haskett before he went to New England, and confirm the conjecture of the previous article that William Dussett or Duffett* married a niece of Elias Haskett of Henstridge Marsh. The deposition of Elias Haskett the Elder, of Henstridge, baker, "aged about 60," proves that the approximate date for his birth (namely, 1642) given in the pedigree (REGISTER, vol. 77, page 132) is correct.

1659 Stephen Heskett and Elizabeth Hill married 2 August.

[This record places the marriage of Stephen Haskett some seven years earlier than the approximate date ("about 1666") assigned for it in REGISTER, vol. 77, p. 128.]

FROM PROBATE RECORDS

The Will of WILLIAM ALBERT of Winterbourne Strickland, co. Dorset, dated 10 August 1639. To my wife Anne, to my sons Richard and William, [and] to my unmarried daughters, Elizabeth, Anne, and Joane [sundry bequests]. "I give and bequeath unto my eldest daughter Sarah which is married to Ellis Haskett the some of tenn pounds upon condition that it come not to her husbands handes but to remaine in my executors or one of theire handes to her use and to be disposed of after her owne discretion." To each of my grandchildren 20s., to be employed for their benefit, "soe as it come not to theire father's hands," to be paid them at their marriages or at the age of twenty-one years. Executors: my wife Anne and my son Richard. Overseers: Edward Heighmore, clerk, and William Mace. Witnesses: John Blanchard, James Prevet, Julyan Hunt. Proved 24 October 1639 by the executors named in the will. (P. C. C., Harvey, 156.)

[From this will it appears that the wife of Ellis or Elias Haskett (Cf. REGISTER, vol. 77, p. 131, No. 5 of the pedigree) was Sarah, eldest daughter of William Albert of Winterbourne Strickland, co. Dorset.]

FROM THE RECORDS OF THE COURT OF REQUESTS*

1639. THOMAS HASKETT of Todbere, co. Dorset, husbandman, complains that, whereas one Richard Combe of West Orchett [West Orchard], husbandman, about November, 12 Charles [November 1636], was seised of a messuage or tenement and garden and orchard, with appurtenances, in West Orchett, either for the life of the said Richard Combe or for many years then yet to come, determinable at the death of the said Richard and worth £40 per annum, the said Richard, wishing to marry his daughter Elizabeth Combe with the said Haskett, well knowing that Haskett had a good estate of inheritance of lands and tenements, of good value, in the county of Somerset, induced the said Haskett to become a suitor for the said Elizabeth, and the said Richard then and there did promise that, upon the marriage, the said Thomas and Elizabeth should have the use of the said Richard's dwelling house in West Orchett and of a meadow called Greene Cliste, Broad Lands, and Ryebrook, from the Feast of the Blessed Virgin Mary† next following, to wit, in 1639. About Lady Day in 1637 the complainant intermarried with Elizabeth Combe, his now wife, and sold to Richard Combe a horse, which the defendant promised to pay for. The complainant has continued to live upon the premises, but now the said Richard Combe, conspiring with one Andrew Combe, his son, Robert Lanninge, and William Card, both of Orchett, to do your poor subject out of his agreement and also of his moneys, goods, boxes, deeds, etc., about Easter last past came to your subject's house when he was from home, and, waiting until your subject's wife was out of doors upon her necessary affairs, the said Andrew did shout out the said Elizabeth and your subject and refused them and still refuses them entrance or to let them take their goods. The said Andrew falsely and wickedly has worked upon the weakness, submissiveness, and feebleness of Richard Combe by reason of his old age. Your subject had by agreement brought thither his goods, which the said defendants are keeping. (Court of Requests, uncalendared, 58, Part I (660), Charles I, 1639.)

[Thomas Haskett, the complainant in this case, was probably the Thomas Haskett who was baptized at Marnhull, co. Dorset, 8 Apr. 1603, son of John of Marnhull and afterwards of Todbere, co. Dorset. Cf. REGISTER, vol. 77, pp. 74, 133. This record reveals the name of the wife of Thomas.]

FROM PLEA ROLLS*

1655. Dorset. WILLIAM HASKETT, late of Henstridge, co. Somerset, gentleman, was summoned to answer Robert Jones, gentleman, and Bridgett his wife, late called Bridgett Burbidge, in a plea that he owed them £80, which he unjustly detains. They say, by their attorney, John Cole, that on 30 April 1650, at Blandford, William Haskett by his obligatory bill, bound himself and his heirs in the sum of £80, to pay the said Bridget, whilst she was unmarried, at the dwelling house of Robert Burbidge, gentleman, in Sturminster Newton, £41. 12s., on 1 November following. This he refused to do. William Haskett, by Robert Burbidge, his attorney, came and said nothing in bar of the plea. It is considered that Robert Jones and Bridgett shall recover their debt and damages, and William is in mercy, etc. (Plea Roll 2658, m. 1282, Trinity Term, 1655.)

1655. Somerset. WILLIAM HASKETT, late of Taunton, co. Somerset, gentleman, otherwise called William Haskett of Yenston in the parish of Henstridge, co. Somerset, gentleman, was summoned to answer Jonathan Cooth in a plea that he should pay him £56 which he owes him, as appears by the bond which William Haskett made at Taunton on 28 February 1653. William Haskett, by William Talbot, his attorney, came and demanded that the condition of the bond should be read. The condition is that William Haskett mortgaged to Jonathan Cooth for two years, if the said William or Rebecca his wife should live so long, his copyhold tenement formerly called Brynes and now called the Leases and Longgoare, together with a Fursie close adjacent to Hooke lane, called Hurne, all which premises lie in Yenston and are in the possession of William Haskett and contain about forty acres. [Certain conditions as to the sowing of the land.] If William and Rebecca shall die before the end of two years, then Henry Smith shall pay any money still owing to the said Jonathan. William Haskett says that he ought not to be charged with the debt, because the writing is not his deed. They put themselves upon the country. Adjourned till Trinity Term. (Plea Roll 2659, m. 1606*d*, Trinity Term, 1655.)

[The William Haskett of this and the preceding record is the William who m. (1) Joanna Hurd and (2) Rebecca ———. Cf. the Haskett pedigree, 1, v (REGISTER, vol. 77, p. 127).]

Were you a witness?

6. Was Elias Haskett of a sound mind when he made this will? How long after did he live? Was the reading of the will in the testator's presence opposed by anyone? Is William Duffett the witness the same as William Duffett the defendant? Was he told that he could not be a witness to the will, and what did he answer?

Depositions of witnesses taken at Henstridge on Monday, 23 September 1700, on behalf of the plaintiff.

Amy Hopkins of Henstridge, widow, aged 53, says that she knew Elias Haskett, deceased, well. He was about 60 when he died at his house in Henstridge, about three years ago.

4. She attended him during his last sickness, which was a fever. He was often light-headed, but never spoke of making his will.

Thomas Browne, a witness for the defendants and now examined for the plaintiff, says:

4. He made the will quoted, and believes that the testator was of sound mind when it was made, and afterwards, as he was told by a woman who nursed him, named Jane Shearing, afterwards married to one Parsons. The testator lived about four days after the will was made. When it was made, he said that he would give to his brother and children beyond sea some legacies, as he had done by a former will, but that he believed that they were all dead.

Alice, wife of Joseph Eyres, late Alice Carley, aged about 30, says:

3. She knew Elias Haskett for a year before his death, as she lived with him as his covenant servant. He died 14 February 1696 [1696/7] in his house at Henstridge Marsh.

4. He was never sensible, but always light-headed. She never heard him wish to make his will.

6. She was asked by William Duffett, the defendant, on 13 February 1696 [1696/7], to sign a paper that he shewed her, one Thomas Browne being also present there. He afterwards told her that it was a will, but did not say whose will. No one else signed it when she put her mark, which she did in her master's bedroom; but he did not see her do it, as he was very ill and the curtains of his bed were close drawn.

Susannah Hobbs of Henstridge, widow, aged about 30, says:

3. She has always known Elias Haskett. He died 14 February 1696 [1696/7], aged about 55, as she believes.

4. She saw him during his sickness, and the day before his death, when he was very light-headed.

6. He was quite incapable of making a will. She has been told that William Duffett's wife and children had several legacies given them by the will made 13 February 1696/7.

Elias Haskett the Elder of Henstridge, baker, aged about 60, says:

4. He was with Elias Haskett for about three hours on the Sunday before his death. He had a fever and was light-headed at intervals. He never mentioned making a will, but said that he had business to go abroad.

Charles Mackarty of Henstridge, servant to the plaintiff, aged 32, says:

7. That a few days ago he was sent by his master to fetch Thomas Browne of Stalbridge, co. Dorset, weaver, to speak with him. When he came, this deponent talked with him about Elias Haskett's will, which was written by the said Thomas Browne, and asked him if the testator was sensible when it was made, to which Thomas Browne replied that he was not.

Elizabeth Warde of the parish of St. Thomas, co. Devon, widow, aged about 59, says:

1. She knows the plaintiff, but not the defendants.

2. She knew Stephen Haskett, formerly of Exeter, co. Devon, for fifty years. He came out of the eastern parts of Somersetshire, but from what parish she does not know. He was bound an apprentice to one Thomas Oborne, a soapboiler of Exeter, and served seven years apprenticeship with him. He afterwards married Elizabeth Hill, spinster, and lived for some time with his said wife in Exeter, and had one daughter called Elizabeth. Afterwards he went to Ireland, as he told this deponent on his return. He then stayed in Exeter about half a year, and then went to New England. About two or three years after he sent for his wife and child, then in Exeter, to come to him there, which they did. She knows that they arrived safely, because she received a letter from Stephen Haskett's wife, dated in New England.

John Bingham of Exeter, soapboiler, aged about 60, says:

2. He well knew Stephen Haskett, who was the only brother of Elias Haskett, late of Henstbridge [sic], deceased. Deponent was a schoolfellow of Elias Haskett at Henstridge. Deposes the same as last witness. He has been told by several of his acquaintance who came from New England that Stephen Haskett was settled in Salem in New England, and did first on his arrival there trade on fishing, and afterwards used the trade of soapboiling. It is about forty years since Stephen Haskett lived in Exeter. He died in New England.

Josias Burgesse of Topisham, co. Devon, soapboiler, aged about 63, says:

2. He knew Stephen Haskett when he was an apprentice in Exeter, about forty years ago. He told the deponent that he was born in Henstridge and had a brother Elias. He was present at the marriage of the said Stephen to Elizabeth Hill, which took place in the Church of St. Sidwell in Exeter. He gave away the bride, and afterwards gave them a wedding dinner at an inn there. Stephen Haskett stayed in Ireland about six months, and then went again into Ireland, and from thence to New England. The master of a vessel from New England came to this deponent with a request to him from Stephen Haskett that he would buy necessary clothing for his wife and child and ship them direct to him in New England. They were not to be delivered to his wife, because he was doubtful whether she would come over to New England to join him. The deponent thinks that the wife and child sailed in the same ship as the clothing. He has several times received greetings from the wife of Stephen Haskett, sent by friends who have come from New England, in one of which communications she told him that her husband was dead. Stephen Haskett had several children born at Salem. He believes the plaintiff to be one of his children or very nearly related to him. Stephen Haskett's wife is still living in Salem.

John Ellery of the parish of St. Thomas the Apostle, co. Devon, sergemaker, aged about 48, says:

1. He has known the plaintiff for seven years, but does not know the defendants.

2. He did not know Stephen Haskett, but was very well acquainted with Elizabeth, his widow. He visited her several times in Salem, about seven years ago, when she told him she was an Exeter woman. She also told him that her husband was dead and had left one son and five daughters, and that the plaintiff, Elias Haskett, then present, was the only son she had then living by her said deceased husband. He became well acquainted with both mother and son. About three years later this deponent was in Bridgetowne in Barbadoes, where he met the plaintiff, Elias Haskett, then living some distance from the said town, and renewed acquaintance with him. He has been meeting him lately in Exeter, and they have discussed their former acquaintance in New England and Barbadoes. The plaintiff is the same person as he met there. He first met Elizabeth, widow of Stephen Haskett, in New England about ten or eleven years ago, when she told him that she had an only son, then at sea, which son this deponent saw the next time he went to New England, which was about seven years ago.

Interrogatories to be administered to witnesses examined on behalf of William Duffett and his wife and others, defendants.

1. Do you know the parties? Did you know Elias Haskett of Henstridge, deceased?

2. Of what lands in Henstridge was Elias Haskett seised in fee simple, and what goods, etc., did he possess?

3. Did he send for you to take his instructions concerning the making of his will? Did you read it to him, and did he understand it? Who were present, and who witnessed it? Declare what you know.

4. Did the relict and executrix of Elias Haskett survive him? Did he deliver to her all his personal estate, and did she die in possession thereof? Did the plaintiff try to wrest from her her claim thereto?

5. After Elias Haskett's death into whose custody did his estate come? What has the plaintiff taken of the same?

6. How did the plaintiff get from the defendants possession of any part of the real estate of Elias Haskett, and what part did he get?

Witnesses for the defendants.

Thomas Browne of Stalbridge, co. Dorset, weaver, aged about 53, says:

1. He has known the plaintiff for about a year and the defendants about twenty years and Elias Haskett for about three years before his death.

2. 3. Elias Haskett sent for him to make his will, and shewed him a former will. He gave him an account of several parcels of land in Henstridge which he wished to devise. He believes that Elias died possessed of goods to the value of £500. He made the will, and read it to the testator, who was then sensible, and who signed it in the presence of this deponent, William Duffett, Alice Carley (who held the testator up in bed whilst he signed), and of his wife, who all (except his wife) were witnesses to it. He remembers several small legacies in it, and considerable ones to Wm. Duffett's wife and children. He bequeathed messuages and lands to Elias, one of the sons of Wm. Duffett, and to ——— Buggis, who now lives in the house in which Elias Haskett died. Of this will he made his wife Mary sole executrix. By his former will Elias Haskett bequeathed £100 to his brother beyond the seas, if he should return. To this will Wm. Douch of Stalbridge, Edward Young of Henstridge, and Susanna Duffett of Stalbridge Weston, spinster, were witnesses. He does not remember the date of this former will.

Edward Young of Henstridge, yeoman, aged about 50, says:

1. He has known the plaintiff ever since he came into this country, about a year and a half ago, and the defendants, Wm. Duffett and Mary his wife, about ten years, and Elias Haskett about twenty years before his death.

2. Elias died possessed of lands in Henstridge — one parcel worth £10 yearly and another parcel held by lease worth 50s. yearly. His goods were worth £630.

3. He has heard that he was sensible when his said will was made.

4. When he came to the funeral of Elias Haskett, he found that the relict and administratrix of the deceased had died that morning.

5. After their deaths one part of his real estate was possessed by Nicholas Buggis and Elias Haskett, both of Henstridge, and the other part by Wm. Duffett, one of the defendants. All the bills, bonds, and specialities were locked up in a trunk and deposited with Anthony Rogers of Henstridge, the keys of which were intrusted to this deponent, till, on an order from the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, he delivered them up to Nicholas Shirley of Bagber in Sturminster Newton, attorney at law.

6. The plaintiff has some part of the testator's real estate in his possession, and Nicholas Buggis rents one other part, and Elias Haskett of Henstridge rents or occupies another part. At the assizes held at Taunton, twelve months before, there was a trial at common law brought between the plaintiff and the defendant, Wm. Duffett, when the latter, feeling that he was not so well provided as he should be, referred the matters on his part to Mr. Bingham of Exeter and to this deponent. They at the assizes gave their opinion verbally, which was that the plaintiff should pay Wm. Duffett £40, for which Wm. Duffett was to deliver up to him that part of the estate which was bequeathed to Wm. Duffett, for which the said William gave him a bond for the quiet enjoyment thereof.

Jane, wife of John Parsons of Henstridge, yeoman, aged about 40, says:

3. She visited Elias Haskett on the Saturday before his death, when he told her that he had made his will on the previous day. The next day, being Sunday, his servant Alice Carley came to her house and told her that her master had made his will on the previous Friday, to which she had been a witness, and that in it she had been left a legacy. This deponent visited him again on the following Tuesday and found him quite sensible. She did not see him again until half an hour before his death, which took place on the following Friday.

5. Mary, the relict, died on the Tuesday after her husband's death. She believes that, after he made his last will, he delivered into his wife's possession all his bonds, etc.

Jane, wife of Richard Parsons of Keynton Magna, co. Dorset, white baker, aged about 22, says:

3. On Friday in the sickness of Elias Haskett Alice Carley sent for her to help nurse him during the night. She met Thomas Browne of Stalbridge and Wm. Duffett, the defendant, her then master, coming from the house. When she reached the house, Elias told her that he was very well, and asked for roasted apples, bread, and butter, of which he ate plentifully. The next morning he sent them to move his cattle from one close to another. Alice Carley told her that her master had made his will on the previous day, and had left, among other legacies, the ground below and above his dwelling house, called Greene Close, Marsh Close, Long Close, and two others, called Broade Close and Whitefeild Lane, to Elias, son of Wm. Duffett, and the close called Side Hill to Mary, wife of the defendant Duffett.

Frances Strong of Stalbridge, widow, aged 36, says:

3. She visited Elias Haskett on Shrove Tuesday, being the Tuesday after he had made his will and before the Friday on which he died. She reproved him for discussing his worldly affairs, such as his sheep and cattle, with his servant Alice, on which he was silent for a considerable time, and then fetched a great sigh and in an audible voice prayed very devoutly and sensibly for about half a quarter of an hour. She had lived in his house for about one and three-fourth years, during which time he usually prayed in his own family. She stayed till next day with him, and found him quite sensible. When she left, he asked her to go to Wm. Duffett and his wife and tell them that he wished to speak to them, "for they must be the persons that must look after their Aunt (meaning his wife) when he was dead."

John Smith of Henstridge, yeoman, aged about 63, says:

2. Much the same as Edward Young deposed.

3. He saw Elias Haskett on the Saturday before he died, when he told him that he had made his will on the previous day. He saw him again on Sunday and Monday. On Sunday he went for him to Dr. Wattson, who was attending him, and fetched some physic. He was quite sensible all those three days.

5. Nothing new.

Robert Dann of Exeter says:

To the last interrogatory, that at Christmas, a year ago, he was at the house of Mr. Wm. Berkenhead of Henstridge, with Mr. Elias Haskett, the plaintiff, and Elias Haskett the Elder of Henstridge, baker, when the latter told the plaintiff that Alice Carley was a witness to Elias Haskett's will. He asked where she was now, and was told that she was newly married in Dorsetshire. The next morning, when going to Stalbridge, this deponent met Elias Haskett the Elder and Alice Carley, with her husband, as he supposed. The same day he went to the house of Elias Haskett the Elder, and found in a room together the plaintiff, Elias the baker and his wife, and Alice Carley. The plaintiff asked her if she knew anything about his uncle's will. She said that she was sent by him to fetch Wm. Duffett of Stalbridge, because he wished to make his will. She brought him and one Browne to write the will. The plaintiff asked her to do him a kindness concerning the will, and said that, if she would, she should never want as long as she lived. He asked her to go with him next day to make affidavit that he was not in his right senses when the will was made, and that she did not see it signed. He asked Elias Haskett the Elder to give her a piece of gold for him, which he at first refused to do, but afterwards did. This deponent told him that it would be dangerous if it was discovered. He replied that he would say it was given her as a legacy, under the will. The plaintiff asked this deponent to go with Alice the next morning to the alehouse, to spend a shilling for her there, to keep her in the same humour. She promised to make affidavit, "as she hoped to get more by the plaintiff than by the other rogues, for they had almost starved her," which she accordingly did before a master in Chancery. The plaintiff also gave Amy Hopkins, another witness, a new gown, and said that he would tamper with Thomas Browne. (Chancery Depositions before 1714, 622/36.)

[Duffett et al. v. Haskett, circa 1700]

Interrogatories to be administered to witnesses to be examined on behalf of William Duffett and others, plaintiffs, against Elias Haskett, defendant.

1. Do you know the parties? Did you know Elias Haskett, late of Henstridge, yeoman, deceased?
2. What lands, goods, and chattels did the said Elias Haskett, deceased, possess?
3. Did the said Elias Haskett make his will before his death? What do you know about it?
4. Did his widow survive him, and did he deliver to her his personal estate?
5. After his death, into whose hands did his estate come? What part of them [sic] has the defendant got into his custody?
6. How did the defendant get such possession from the plaintiffs?
7. What else do you know?

Depositions of witnesses taken at the house or inn of John Munnings, called The Bell, in Sherborne, co. Dorset, 5 October 1700.

Thomas Browne of Stalbridge, co. Dorset, yeoman, aged about 53, deposes much as in the former suit [i.e., Haskett v. Duffett et al., 622/36].

Nicholas Shirley of Bagber in the parish of Sturminster Newton, gentleman, aged about 38, says:

5. After several disputes between persons who claimed nearness of kin to Elias Haskett, the testator, and to his wife, one Mary, wife of Lewis Crumsey, came to this deponent for advice about the right of administration to the said testator's personal estate. On examining the matter he considered that she was the nearest of kin. This was examined in the Prerogative Court, when counsel was retained by all the parties claiming, and Mary Crumsey proved her pedigree and was granted an administration out of the same court. She possessed herself of about £500 or £600. Some time after the defendant, coming into England, declared that he was the son of Stephen Haskett of Salem in New England, who was brother to Elias Haskett, the testator. He said that he had the greatest right to the administratory estate of the testator, he being his uncle. A commission was sued forth and witnesses examined, and, on the whole matter being heard before the Court of Delegates, the administration of Mary Crumsey was made void and given to the defendant. She delivered up to the defendant all that remained of the said personal estate, after legacies and law expenses were paid, which amounted to about £400.

Frances Stronge of Stalbridge, widow, aged about 36, says the same as before [622/36].

Jane, wife of Richard Parsons of Keynton Magna, co. Dorset, baker, aged about 21, deposes as before [622/36].

Edward Younge of Henstridge, gentleman, aged about 50, says:

2. 4. The same as before [622/36]. He believes that all the real estate of which the testator died possessed is now in the hands of the defendant.
6. [Answers as in 622/36.]
7. It being reported that Amy Hopkins of Henstridge had sworn that Elias Haskett was not sensible in any of his last sickness, she was asked the reason for saying so. She utterly denied that she had so said, for she was not with him, and knew nothing of it till after his will was made.

Jane, wife of John Parsons of Henstridge, aged about 39, deposes as before [622/36].

John Smith of Henstridge, gentleman, aged about 63, says much the same as before [622/36]. He adds that Elias Haskett, deceased, told him that he had made him a trustee of his will, and William Duffett, one of the plaintiffs, and Henry Snooke were to be his partners. The testator was then of sound and perfect mind.

Nicholas Buggis of Henstridge, tailor, aged about 34, says:

2. Elias Haskett in his lifetime was seised in fee of a tenement and lands in Henstridge, worth yearly £16 or £18, and was possessed of a leasehold estate called Sidehills, worth yearly about 50s. His personal estate was worth about £746. He knows this because he made an inventory of the goods.

3. He believes that the testator bequeathed £100, to be divided equally between the five children of William Duffett, the plaintiff.

4. Mary, the wife of the testator, died in actual possession of his goods, bonds, securities, etc., which he gave her, before his death, in a box or cabinet.

5. The defendant, Elias Haskett, is now possessed of all the testator's real estate, except one small close called Hurle Oake, worth about 40s. yearly, which he gave up to Elias Haskett the Younger of Henstridge, baker, as it was bequeathed to him by the said will. He believes that the defendant has possessed himself of part of the personal estate of the testator.

William Hedditch of Gillingham, co. Dorset, cordwinder, aged about 35, says:

Some of the goods of Elias Haskett came into the possession of Dorothy Hedditch of Gillingham, widow, his mother, to the value of £22. 15s. 6d.

Interrogatories to be administered to witnesses produced on behalf of Elias Haskett, defendant.

[These interrogatories are practically the same as those in the case of Haskett v. Duffett et al., 622/36. The will of Elias Haskett, deceased, is described again at great length, as in Interrogatory 5. Interrogatory 2, concerning Stephen Haskett and his family, is omitted in this list. No answers have been found to these interrogatories on behalf of Elias Haskett, the defendant in this suit, but a reference (S Oc 170) which cannot be identified, is probably to the missing answers.] (Chancery Depositions before 1714, 1023/8.)

Metcalf

For many years the statement has repeatedly appeared in print that Michael Metcalf, the dornick* weaver, of Norwich, co. Norfolk, England, and later of Dedham, Mass., was the son of Rev. Leonard Metcalf, parson of Tatterford, co. Norfolk, and that he was baptized at Tatterford 3 Sept. 1586. An examination of the parish registers of Tatterford proves this statement to be an error, for on 3 Sept. 1586 Leonard Metcalf, son of Leonard, was baptized there. This error was probably made by some zealous American who could not read the sixteenth-century writing but was determined to find the parentage of the redoubtable Michael. All that can be said at present is that the parentage of Michael Metcalf is unknown. He was, however, probably born about 1592, since in his examination on embarking for New England, in Apr. 1637, his age was given as 45. (Cf. Pope, "Pioneers of Massachusetts," page 312, and Savage, "Genealogical Dictionary," vol. 3, page 203.)

Dornick* or dornock, a coarse sort of damask, originally made at Tournai (in Flemish, Doornick), Belgium.

FROM A MANUSCRIPT IN THE POSSESSION OF THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

[In the introduction prefixed to the first instalment of this record a brief description of the manuscript was given, followed by the statement: "As yet, however, it has not been possible to identify positively the writer of the record, although it may be said that he was probably an engraver of coffin plates." (REGISTER, vol. 77, page 227.)

Since that statement was published, Mr. Walter Kendall Watkins of Malden, Mass., a recognized authority on the antiquities and family histories of Boston and vicinity and Chairman of the Society's Committee on Collection of Records, has succeeded in discovering the identity of the writer of the record and has confirmed the conjecture made in the REGISTER that he was an engraver of coffin plates.

In the Suffolk Probate Files are papers relating to the administration of the estate of Allen Foster, the faithful apprentice of the writer of the record, who died 23 June 1810, aged 22. He is called in the probate records Allen Foster, tinman, and one item in the account is from William Howe. The Boston Directory of that date contains the name of William Howe, tin plate worker, of 11 Marshall Lane; William Howe's name appears also on the cover of the record of deaths; and the facts brought to light by Mr. Watkins show that he was the man who kept the record and that his father and grandfather also were tin plate workers. Additional proof of the identity of the writer of the record is supplied by a copy of the first part, down to and including the death of Mrs. Lydia Dana, Aug. 4, 1809, which is in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society and which the Editor, through the courtesy of Mr. Julius Herbert Tuttle, Librarian of that Society, has been enabled to compare with the original record. The label on the second page of the cover of the copy reads: "Given to the Massachusetts Historical Society by William Howe August, 1816." On the first page of the copy are the words: "A record of the Coffin Plates, made by W^m. Howe, of Boston, from 1799, to 1809. Presented to the Mass. Hist. Soc. by Cap^t. W^m. Howe." On a flyleaf at the end of the copy are the words: "The number of Names is near 3500 most of which I wrote the Plates myself — W^m H." The copy owned by the Massachusetts Historical Society is not in the same handwriting as the book in the possession of the New England Historic Genealogical Society; but the statement about the number of names, signed "W^m H.," is written by the same hand that wrote the record now appearing in the REGISTER, the hand, namely, of William Howe.

Mr. Watkins in his researches found that in the inventory of the estate of Joseph Howe, tin plate worker, grandfather of William Howe, which was taken in 1781, there are listed boxes of tin plates, punches, a set of coffin tools, and a parcel of coffin furniture, the latter amounting to £96. Joseph Howe, father of William Howe, was also a tin plate worker. He married Sarah Davis, and died in 1818. His shop was in Marshall Lane, and the inventory of his estate discloses presses, stamps and dies, and composition metal, from which coffin plates were made. The house in which the Howe family lived for a generation was on the north corner of Hanover Street and Marshall Lane, and the site is known to Bostonians by reason of the "Boston Stone" set in the foundation of the present building, on the Marshall Street side. This stone was also in the foundation of the building that preceded the present one.

*An error for Sarah.
†Apparently an error for Ann.

William Howe, the writer of the record, was born in 1782, married in 1803 Mary Harvey, and had a daughter named Cordelia, who married in 1829 George Augustus Elliot and died in Roxbury, leaving a son and a daughter. William Howe joined the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in 1806, became a sergeant in 1807, an ensign in 1812, and a captain in 1814, and was made an honorary member in 1822. Previously he had been a member of the Winslow Blues. The place and date of his death have not been ascertained.

William Howe's father had a brother John, who was a printer and was in partnership with Richard Draper in publishing the Massachusetts Gazette. On the evacuation of Boston by the British John Howe removed to Halifax, N. S. His son, Joseph Howe, who was born at Halifax in 1804 and died there 1 June 1873, was a printer, a newspaper editor and owner, and a prominent Liberal leader in Nova Scotian politics. He held various public offices, and about three months before his death was appointed Lieutenant Governor of Nova Scotia. He was a corresponding member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society from Oct. 1858 until his death. Cf. memoir of Joseph Howe, in REGISTER, vol. 28, pages 209–210. — EDITOR.]

VISCOUNT BRYCE

By Alfred Johnson, A.M., Litt.D., of Brookline, Mass.

Right Hon. James Bryce, Viscount Bryce of Dechmont, D.C.L., LL.D., Litt.D., F.R.S., O.M., G.C.V.O., of Hindleap, Forest Row, co. Sussex, England, scholar, historian, statesman, diplomat, and friend of the United States, an honorary member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society since 1890, was born at Belfast, Ireland, 10 May 1838, the eldest son of James and Margaret (Young) Bryce, and died at Sidmouth, co. Devon, England, 22 January 1922, in the eighty-fourth year of his age.*

His ancestors of the Bryce name were Scots, and the family settled at Dechmont Hill, in Lanarkshire, Scotland, in 1659, where they were small landowners. Two of the Bryces fought on the side of the Covenanters, when they were defeated by Monmouth at Bothwell Bridge in 1679; and one of these fighters, who died about sixty years later, left a son John, who was the last of the family to live at Dechmont. This John Bryce married Robina Allan, whose family had possessed at one time considerable property near Airdrie in Lanarkshire, but had lost most of it in the seventeenth century because they favored the cause of the Covenanters. John and Robina (Allan) Bryce were the great-grandparents of Viscount Bryce.

His grandfather, Rev. James Bryce, was born at Airdrie 5 December 1767, and died at Killaig, co. Londonderry, Ireland, 24 April 1857, in his ninetieth year. He married Catherine Annan of Auchtermuchty in Fifeshire. He was educated at the University of Glasgow, and in 1795 was ordained minister of the Antiburgher Secession Church at Wick in Caithness. Soon, however, he was accused before the synod of latitudinarianism, and was suspended from his ministerial functions for two years. After his restoration to service in the ministry he disliked so much the intolerant spirit in theological matters that prevailed in Scotland that he accepted an invitation to go to Ireland, and at last, in 1805, was settled as minister of the Antiburgher congregation at Killaig, near Coleraine, co. Londonderry. Here he differed from the other ministers of his denomination by refusing to accept the conditions attached to the distribution among the Presbyterian ministers of the regium donum, an annual endowment paid by the lord lieutenant, and became the founder of a branch of the Presbyterian Church called the Associate Presbytery of Ireland, which finally united with the Scottish United Presbyterian Church.

James Bryce, third son of Rev. James Bryce and father of the subject of this memoir, was born at Killaig 22 October 1806, received his early education from his father and his eldest brother, Rev. Dr. Bryce, and afterwards entered the University of Glasgow, where he was admitted to the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1828, having won especial distinction in classical studies. Not having the financial means to study for the legal profession, as he had intended to do, he became a teacher, and was appointed mathematical master in the Belfast (Ireland) academy. In 1836 he married Margaret Young, eldest daughter of James Young of Abbeyville, co. Antrim, Ireland. In 1846 he was appointed a teacher in the high school of Glasgow, and held this position until 1874, when he resigned. He taught with marked success mathematics and geography, and was especially interested in geology and natural history, writing many important papers embodying the results of his geological researches in the north of Ireland, in Scotland, and in northern England, which were published in the transactions or proceedings of various learned societies in the United Kingdom. He was also the author of "A Treatise on Algebra," an introduction to "Mathematical Astronomy and Geography," "A Cyclopædia of Geography," and a work on the geology and antiquities of Arran and the other islands of the Clyde. He advocated the teaching of natural history and natural science in schools, and gave voluntary instruction in these subjects, in which there was then no provision for regular instruction in the Scottish high schools. In 1858 the University of Glasgow conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. After withdrawing from his work as a teacher at Glasgow he went to reside in Edinburgh, and continued his geological field work in the Highlands of Scotland until his sudden death by accident at Inverfarigaig, on the shores of Loch Ness, 11 July 1877, when some loose stones, disturbed by the blows of his hammer, caused masses of rock to fall on him, killing him instantaneously.*

Without doubt the mental and physical characteristics of Lord Bryce's sturdy Scotch and Irish ancestors had a considerable influence on his life and career. His longevity and his remarkable retention of physical and mental vigor may be partly explained by the principles of heredity, for in both his paternal and maternal lines are to be found, among his immediate progenitors, striking examples of vigorous old age. The learning and the literary tendencies of his father and paternal grandfather should not be overlooked in accounting for his work as a scholar and author. His sympathetic understanding of the Irish problem, his advocacy of home rule, and his success as Chief Secretary for Ireland were doubtless largely due to the fact that his mother was an Irish woman.

The future viscount, born when his father was a master in the academy at Belfast, was only about eight years old when the family moved to Glasgow. His formal education in his youth was acquired at the Glasgow High School and at Glasgow University, and afterwards he held a scholarship at Trinity College, Oxford, where he was admitted to the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1862, taking a first in classics and later a first in history, and in the same year, also, was elected a fellow of Oriel College. But his love of nature, his delight in flowers and fields and forests, in valleys, hills, and mountains, his training in habits of close observation, his knowledge of botany and geology, were in no small measure the result of his walks in his boyhood days with his father and uncle through the countryside, over the moors and mountains, and along the lake shores of Scotland. His first book, published in 1859, was a work on botany, "The Flora of the Island of Arran."

He continued his academic studies at the University of Heidelberg in 1863; and in 1864, when only twenty-six years of age, won recognition as an historian by publishing "The Holy Roman Empire," which, originally written as an Arnold prize essay at Oxford, in its completed form revealed and illuminated the historic significance of the Mediæval Empire, up to that time an obscure and little-known institution to the English reader of history. The book became an indispensable guide to historical students in Great Britain and in America, and has appeared in many English and American editions and also in German, French, and Italian translations, the author having added supplementary pages after the establishment of the new German Empire in 1871. His studies in preparing this essay, his travels in Germany, and his residence at a German university led to a grasp of the German language which often stood him in good stead in later life. In 1865 Mr. Bryce was admitted to the degree of Bachelor of Civil Law, in 1867 he became a barrister of Lincoln's Inn, and in 1870 he received from Oxford the degree of Doctor of Civil Law. He continued in the practice of his profession until 1882, although his reputation as an eminent scholar and historian had gained for him in 1870 the chair of Regius Professor of Civil Law at Oxford, which he held until 1893, serving also from 1870 to 1875 as professor of jurisprudence at Owens College, Manchester. At Oxford he was a leading personage among the Academic Liberals for many years prior to his entering Parliament.

During these years of professional and academic pursuits, as well as in later life, when public service claimed so much of his time, Mr. Bryce travelled extensively in foreign lands. In 1870 he made the first of several visits to the United States, and many years afterwards his wanderings led him to South Africa and to South America. On his vacations in Europe and in the Near East mountain climbing became one of his two favorite means of recreation, the other being angling; he scaled the Schreckhorn and other Alpine peaks, as well as some of the noted heights in the Pyrenees, and in 1876 conquered the snow-capped summit of Ararat, pressing on alone with grim determination to the highest point of the world-famed mountain after the last of his Cossack guides had deserted him when an elevation of 13,600 feet had been attained. A graphic account of this adventurous expedition may be found in his "Transcaucasia and Ararat," published in 1877, and his journeys in South Africa and South America bore fruit in his "Impressions of South Africa," 1897, and his "South America: Observations and Impressions," 1912, a book which is one of his best literary works and well illustrates the breadth of his sympathies and the maturity of his judgments. His achievements as an intrepid and intelligent mountaineer were recognized in his election to the presidency of the Alpine Club, a position which he held for the years 1899–1901, and he was also an honorary fellow of the Royal Geographical Society.

Mr. Bryce's political career began in 1880, when he was elected to Parliament, as a Liberal, for Tower Hamlets, a division in the eastern part of London inhabited chiefly by German Jews, whom he was able to address in their own language. He represented this London constituency from 1880 to 1885; and then, when the boundaries of his district had been changed by the Reform Bill of 1884, he was elected for the southern division of Aberdeen, and continued to be returned for this Scottish constituency until 1907, when he exchanged a parliamentary for a diplomatic career. His knowledge of educational problems was utilized by placing him on important commissions to study the conditions of the public schools, while his familiarity with modern history and international relations made him helpful to the Government in the conduct of foreign affairs. In 1886 he was appointed by Mr. Gladstone Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and upon him devolved the duty, since the Secretary for Foreign Affairs (Lord Rosebery) was a member of the House of Lords, of representing this department in debates and questions in the House of Commons, a duty which he fulfilled with brilliant success during his short term of office, from February to July 1886, when the defeat of the Liberals in the appeal to the country on the Irish home rule issue was followed by the resignation of the Gladstone ministry. The general election of July 1892 gave a majority in the House of Commons to the combined forces of the Liberals and Irish Nationalists, and Mr. Bryce was sworn of the Privy Council in Great Britain on 18 August of that year and served in Mr. Gladstone's last Cabinet, 1892–1894, as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, a position with merely nominal duties, which allows its holder to give his time to the service of the Government in dealing with all sorts of public and political matters. On the resignation of Mr. Gladstone as prime minister in March 1894, on account of the infirmities of old age, the Queen selected Lord Rosebery as his successor, and in the reorganized Liberal Cabinet Mr. Bryce held the office of President of the Board of Trade until the overthrow of the Liberal Government in the following year. In 1894 also he was chairman of the Royal Commission on Secondary Education, and prepared a comprehensive and notable report on this subject. He was an earnest advocate of home rule for Ireland; his travels in Russia and the Near East had given him pronounced views on the Eastern Question and he shared Mr. Gladstone's dislike of the Turks; and he became a severe critic of the conduct of the Boer War and the terms of its settlement. On the return of the Liberals to power in 1905, with Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman as prime minister, he accepted the important post of Chief Secretary for Ireland, continuing in this office, with a seat in the Cabinet, until his appointment, in February 1907, as His Majesty's ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the United States, a position which he held during six eventful years and which may be regarded as the crowning honor of his career.

In selecting Mr. Bryce for the important post of ambassador at Washington, the British Government departed from its long-established custom of filling the higher diplomatic positions by promoting men who had been trained to the profession of diplomacy by years of service in the ranks; but probably no person could have been appointed more acceptable to all classes and professions in the United States or better qualified to promote and maintain close relations of friendship between the two nations than James Bryce. Certainly no British statesman or diplomat had a greater knowledge of American history, government, and politics than he, or was more in sympathy with the spirit of American institutions.

An intimate acquaintance with the United States, which had begun with his first visit to this country, in 1870, and had been developed more and more in his subsequent visits, in which he came much in contact with the leaders in American education and especially with members of college and university faculties, had resulted in the publication, in 1888, of Mr. Bryce's greatest contribution to political science, "The American Commonwealth," a masterly and authoritative presentation, in two volumes, of American government — national, state, and local, with illuminating chapters on the practical workings of American politics and scholarly essays on educational and social subjects. The story of the activities of the notorious Boss Tweed and his associates in New York City was told with such frankness that a revision of this part of the book became necessary in order to escape serious legal complications. This great work has gone through numerous editions and revisions, and has been accepted by universities and colleges, in its complete form or in an abridgment, as an authoritative textbook on American institutions. Its author, however, said that he wrote it for the instruction of Europeans, and that it never occurred to him that it would be read by more than a few persons on this side of the Atlantic. He further stated that five-sixths of the materials of the book were obtained from conversations with statesmen in the halls of Congress, with fellow guests at dinner parties, and with chance acquaintances from all walks of life and in various parts of the country, and from his personal impressions and observations. During his residence at Washington as the ambassador of his sovereign he revised and rewrote this book to such an extent that the edition published in 1910 was practically a new work.

By virtue of his acquaintance with eminent Americans, of his scholarly attainments, and of the prestige of his "American Commonwealth," Mr. Bryce was already well known and highly esteemed in the United States, and as ambassador he did more than any Englishman of our time to strengthen the ties of friendship between the United States and Great Britain. Unlike the old-fashioned professional diplomat, he relegated secret diplomacy to the scrap heap, and announced that he held candor to be the keynote of success in his new calling. Accordingly, during his stay in Washington, he discussed freely and publicly many questions that concerned the relations of the United States with the British Government. His American quality of making friends and of being at home with all sorts of people, coupled with an affability and a willingness to meet and talk with all comers in a friendly way, at all times, on whatever subjects interested them, whether of a national or local nature, added much to his personal popularity and influence throughout the country. "He was the only British Ambassador," said President Lowell, at a meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society, "who understood that the object of a diplomat is less to negotiate with governments than to charm a people, and he did it." Both in his private relations and in his public addresses, of which he delivered a very large number, he succeeded admirably in conveying to the American people the impression that he represented both a friendly and a kindred power, and that his mission was one of peace and good will. A selection of his addresses delivered on various public occasions in the United States was published in 1913, under the title of "University and Historical Addresses," a book which is a striking tribute to his intimate contact with American life and affairs and shows the unique position which he occupied both as a friendly and privileged critic and at the same time as an accredited representative of a foreign power. These addresses cover a wide range of subjects, such as the Beginnings of Virginia, the Landing of the Pilgrims, the Tercentenary of the Discovery of Lake Champlain, the Constitution of the United States, the Character and Career of Abraham Lincoln, National Parks, the Mission of State Universities, and Hints on Reading and on Public Speaking. These titles alone, selected from the list of more than a score in the book, throw some light on the cause of his great popularity as an occasional or Commencement speaker.

Over and above the prestige of his high office, it was the personality of the man himself that so widely impressed the American people. His deep and sincere interest in us, our origins, and our institutions, and his sympathetic interpretation of us to ourselves won for him an affection accorded to few foreigners since our history began. "No one in our time," said Mr. Asquith in 1913, "has contributed more largely to create and foster this [friendly] temper between the two great kindred peoples than our distinguished ambassador, . . . Mr. Bryce."

Among the questions to the settlement of which Mr. Bryce, as British ambassador, contributed were the controversy about the Newfoundland fisheries, which was referred to the Hague Tribunal, and various disputes between the United States and Canada. He also handled in behalf of his government the negotiations for a general Anglo-American arbitration treaty in 1908. In the later years of his tenure of office as ambassador the failure of the negotiations for reciprocity between the United States and Canada and the complications arising from the subject of the Panama Canal tolls brought to him much anxiety and disappointment; but, notwithstanding, his diplomatic career at Washington was a conspicuous success, and his retirement from this post in 1913 called forth remarkable and universal expressions of the esteem in which he was held in this country. His return to England was followed, 28 January 1914, by his elevation to the peerage as Viscount Bryce of Dechmont, this title preserving the name of the early home of the family in Lanarkshire, Scotland.

The literary work to which Lord Bryce planned to devote himself after being relieved of the arduous duties of his diplomatic post was interrupted by the new problems and tasks arising from the World War. Although he was in his seventy-seventh year, he accepted an appointment as chairman of a special commission to investigate the subject of atrocities committed by the Germans in their invasion of Belgium; and after a thorough examination and careful weighing of the evidence this commission issued a voluminous report, showing that in Belgium the Germans had been guilty of innumerable violations of the laws of humanity. In many ways, also, in the course of the war, Viscount Bryce was active in efforts to ameliorate the lot of the hapless victims of the frightful conflict, especially the Armenians and the Poles.

The last years of his life were marked by a resumption of his activities as an author and lecturer in the field of history and political science. In his "Modern Democracies," which was published in two volumes in 1921 and was dedicated to President Lowell, "His Friend and Fellow Worker,"* the actual operation of democratic institutions was clearly set forth by the master of political philosophers. "The Study of American History" was an inaugural lecture, delivered at the Mansion House, London, 27 June 1921, by Lord Bryce, as the first holder of The Sir George Watson Chair of American History, Literature, and Institutions, which was established by the Anglo-American Society and is to be held alternately by British and American scholars for terms of two years each. It had been a matter of deep regret and disappointment to him, as his letters to his American friends showed, that owing to his advancing years and to the strain which he had undergone during the World War he was debarred from accepting the urgent invitation extended to him to be present at the celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth; but in the summer of 1921 he felt able to make what proved to be his last visit to the United States, coming to attend the Institute of Politics at Williams College and delivering at this gathering of men eminent in history, political science, international law, and practical statesmanship a notable series of eight lectures on "International Relations," in which he discussed the effects of the World War in the Old World and reviewed the methods proposed for removing causes of international strife and for averting war. Even at the age of eighty-three his interest in problems of government and international relations was unabated, and very few men have enjoyed a longer period of intellectual productivity or reaped more honor and immediate personal recognition and satisfaction from their labors.

During his long career as a scholar, statesman, and diplomat British and foreign universities vied with one another in showering upon him their honorary degrees. His own university, Oxford, had conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Civil Law in 1870, and he received the same degree from Trinity University (Toronto, Canada) in 1897. In the preceding year (1896) the University of Budapest had bestowed on him the degree of Doctor of Political Science. As early as 1883 the University of Edinburgh had admitted him to the degree of Doctor of Laws, and the same degree was given to him in 1886 by the University of Glasgow, in 1887 by the University of Michigan, in 1902 by the University of St. Andrews, in 1904 by Columbia University, in 1906 by the University of Aberdeen, in 1907 by Washington University (St. Louis, Mo.), Princeton University, the University of Chicago, and Harvard University, in 1908 by the Universities of Jena and Wisconsin, McGill University, and Williams College, in 1909 by the Universities of Leipsic and California, in 1910 by the University of Buenos Aires, in 1911 by Union College (Schenectady, N. Y.), in 1912 by the Universities of Adelaide and Brisbane, and in 1914 by the University of Oxford. The degree of Doctor of Letters was conferred on him by Victoria University (Manchester) in 1897, by the University of Cambridge in 1898, and by Harvard University in 1909.

In addition to his honorary membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society Lord Bryce's name appeared on the rolls of numerous learned societies both in Great Britain and in other countries. In 1894 he became a fellow of the Royal Society of London, in 1885 he had been made a corresponding member of the Società Romana di Storia Patria, in 1891 he was elected a corresponding member of the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences (a branch of the Institute of France) and became a foreign member of the same organization in 1904, and in 1896 he was admitted a foreign member of the Royal Academies of Turin and Brussels, in 1903 a foreign member of the Royal Academy of Naples, and in 1904 a foreign member of the Reale Accademia dei Lincei of Rome. He was also a corresponding member of the Imperial Academy of Sciences of St. Petersburg and a foreign member of the Royal Academy of Stockholm. In the United States he was an honorary foreign member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, a member of the American Philosophical Society, a corresponding member of the Massachusetts Historical Society from 1882 to 1896, an honorary member of the same society from 1896 until his death, and an honorary member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society from 1911 on. Memberships in various orders were bestowed on him by his own and foreign sovereigns, among which may be mentioned the Prussian Order for Merit, of which he was a knight, the Order of Merit of Great Britain, of which he was made a member in February 1907, and the Royal Victorian Order, of which he became a Knight Grand Cross on 1 January 1918. His London club was the Athenæum.

Other positions of honor and responsibility were held by Viscount Bryce after he had won recognition in the fields of scholarship and politics, such as membership in the Senate of the University of London in 1893, honorary membership in the Faculty of Law of the University of Santiago, the presidency of the British Academy, 1913–1917, and membership in the board of trustees of the National Portrait Gallery. He was also one of the British members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague.

Lord Bryce lived only a few months after his return to England from his last visit to America. He revised for publication his lectures on "International Relations," and about the beginning of the new year went to Sidmouth, a much-frequented resort in Devonshire, on the English Channel, where the climate was mild. His heart was beginning to cause trouble, but he continued to be active and energetic until somewhat suddenly, on 22 January 1922, the end came, and not only his native land which he had served so faithfully but also the great daughter republic in the West with whose people, institutions, and life he was so well acquainted were overwhelmed with grief.

A biographical sketch of Viscount Bryce that failed to dwell on the charm of his personality would indeed be incomplete. He was one of the most genial and companionable of men. Though he was a sound and brilliant scholar, he was far removed from the bookworm or recluse. He enjoyed life in all its ramifications. His London home was noted for its hospitality, and the large circle of friends who accepted his invitations was constantly augmented by interesting and eminent persons, in every field of intellectual endeavor, whom he had met in his extensive travels or who sought his acquaintance. With each he had something in common, and from him each invariably carried away something informing and stimulating. Master of the leading languages of the civilized world, he met and conversed with many of the most notable and influential people of his time, and he was ready to share his universal knowledge of men and things and places with every one, be he a chance acquaintance of a journey or a self-appointed correspondent from some distant country. He possessed the rare faculty of correlating his learning with modern, every-day life in such a way as to illuminate every subject on which he wrote or spoke. Above all, he was never dull. His vitality, energy, and versatility, his editorial feeling for the tastes and comprehension of his hearers, were such as to enable him to arrest and hold their attention.

Many stories might be related of his humor and ready wit. The crooked streets of Boston did not escape his kindly and amusing satire, and in his Lowell Institute lectures in 1903 his audiences were carried away by his happy faculty of combining the grave with the gay. In these lectures he revealed a wider knowledge of America and of Americans than was possessed by the average listener even in those Boston audiences.

To the kindliness of his nature and the generous, prompt, and painstaking manner in which, even to the last, he was always ready, however busily occupied, to place his extensive knowledge of our country and its history and of the varying characteristics of its different States at the disposal of younger and less experienced students, the writer of this memoir can bear grateful testimony. He appeared to feel a kinship with all those whose interests and studies were similar or allied to his own, and he was every ready to share his knowledge and attainments with them.

From his address delivered before the Harvard Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa it may be seen that Viscount Bryce's real interest was not in the past per se but in the past only as it bore on the present and the future. In the study of history he found the promise of the great movement of human progress toward liberty of speech and action and toward that reign of international peace to which he looked forward so eagerly and confidently before the World War, but of the advent of which in the immediate future he was by no means so sure in the closing years of his life.

Still, he loved humanity, and his interest in people, as well as peoples, persisted to the end. The vivacious, keen mind, the bright, twinkling eye, and the high hopes of youth never deserted him. He looked on life as he looked on the world, in its entirety, and his wide vision gave him faith in the higher destiny of man. Ever a traveller, he not only drank deeply of the pleasures of the road as he traversed it, but with the alert expectancy of the voyagers of old he looked forward confidently to the marvels of an unknown but better world.

Viscount Bryce married, 23 July 1889, Elizabeth Marion Ashton, who was born in 1854 and survives her husband, the second daughter and second child of Thomas and Elizabeth (Gair) Ashton of Hyde, Cheshire, and Ford Bank, Didsbury, Lancashire. The family of Ashton of Hyde has been settled in Cheshire since the sixteenth century, and the father of Viscountess Bryce, Thomas Ashton, who was born 8 February 1818 and died 21 January 1898, was justice of the peace for Cheshire and Lancashire, deputy lieutenant for Lancashire, and high sheriff in 1883, and received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Victoria University, Manchester. He married, 14 April 1852, Elizabeth Gair, who died 1 January 1914, daughter of Samuel Stillman Gair of Penketh Hall, Liverpool. Thomas Gair Ashton, of Hyde, Cheshire, eldest son and third child of Thomas Ashton and brother of Viscountess Bryce, was born 5 February 1855, gained the degree of Master of Arts at University College, Oxford, has been justice of the peace for Lancashire, Cheshire, and Sussex, represented in the House of Commons the Hyde division of Cheshire, 1885–86, and the Luton division of Bedfordshire, 1895–1911, and on 28 June 1911 was raised to the peerage as Baron Ashton of Hyde. He has issue.

Viscount Bryce died childless, and at his death, therefore, the peerage became extinct. His brother, John Annan Bryce, M.A. (Glasgow), B.A. (Oxford), formerly an East India merchant, justice of the peace for the Island of Bombay, a member of the Legislative Council of Burma, and an explorer in Upper Burma and Upper Siam, was a director in banks, railways, and other corporations, a member of the Council of the Royal Geographical Society, and in 1906 and subsequent years a Liberal member of the House of Commons for Inverness Burghs.

Mrs. Emilie Sniffen (Lesher) Firth, of South Orange, N. J., a resident member since 1920, was born in New York City 25 April 1854, the daughter of Stephen Rosson and Emilie Theresa (Sniffen) Lesher, and died at South Orange 26 April 1922.

Her father was born at Amenia, Dutchess Co., N. Y., in 1829 or 1830; and her mother, the daughter of Allan Mead and Eliza (Lawrence) Sniffen and a descendant of the Lawrences of Long Island, was born in New York City 26 September 1835.

She was educated in private schools in New York City, and was married, 19 February 1879, to John Firth, son of William Firth. Their children were: Emilie Thérèse, the wife of Howard R. Townsend of Oyster Bay, Long Island; Caroline Lesher, the wife of Edward H. Wright of Newark, N. J.; Marion, the wife of Garron Throop Geer, son of Dr. William Montgomery Geer of New York City; Beatrice, the wife of William Bernard Littell of Newark; John Malcolm, who married Louise Rodman, the daughter of Randolph Rodman of Virginia; and Stuart Mortimer.

Cyrus Henry Brown, of Andover, Mass., a resident member since 1911, was born at North Stonington, Conn., 24 November 1829, the son of Cyrus Williams and Elizabeth Stewart (Babcock) Brown, and died at Andover 19 May 1922.

He traced his descent in two lines from Thomas[1] Brown of Lynn, Mass., who was born, probably in England, about 1628, married Mary Newhall of Lynn (born about 1637, daughter of Thomas Newhall, one of the earliest settlers in Lynn), and died 28 August 1693. They had fifteen children, of whom three, namely, Thomas,[2] John,[2] and Eleazer,[2] migrated to Stonington, Conn., before 1688, settling in the southern part of what is now North Stonington, a town set off from Stonington in 1807. From John[2] Brown of Stonington, carpenter, who was born at Lynn in 1664 and married at Stonington, in October 1692, Elizabeth Miner (born in April 1674, daughter of Ephraim and Hannah (Avery) Miner and granddaughter of Lieut. Thomas and Grace (Palmer) Miner of Stonington), Cyrus Henry Brown was descended through Jedediah,[3] who was born 28 April 1709, married, 27 November 1728, Abigail Holmes (born 28 February 1703, died 6 June 1732), and died 15 January 1732, Jedediah,[4] who was born at Stonington 14 March 1729, married, 19 December 1751, Mrs. Anna Holmes, and died 31 October 1791, Roswell,[5] who was born at Stonington 27 August 1760, married there, 6 September 1786, Esther Williams (born 10 December 1768), and died 27 October 1799, and Cyrus Williams[6] of North Stonington and Chesterfield, Conn., farmer, who was born at Stonington 30 November 1788, married at North Stonington Theda[5] Brown (born at Stonington 16 April 1786, died 30 November 1863), and died at North Stonington 18 August 1861. Theda Brown was descended from Thomas[1] Brown of Lynn, through Thomas[2] of Stonington, who was born at Lynn about January 1654, married, 8 February 1677, Hannah Collins, and died at Stonington 27 December 1723, the father of ten children, Daniel[3] of Stonington, who was born at Stonington 9 October 1696, married first, 21 June 1721, Mary Breed of Stonington, by whom he had eight children, and died 30 August 1771, and Nathan,[4] farmer, her father, who was born at Stonington 20 June 1738, married there, 17 September 1761, Lydia Dewey (born 23 April 1744, died 19 May 1800), and died 3 November 1831, having had a family of ten children. Cyrus Williams[6] and Theda (Brown) Brown had six children, of whom the eldest was Dea. Cyrus Williams,[7] of North Stonington, farmer, who was born at North Stonington 11 March 1806, married there, 12 December 1826, Elizabeth Stewart Babcock (born at North Stonington 28 December 1806, died there 22 September 1886, daughter of Stephen and Elizabeth (Stewart) Babcock), and died 30 November 1875. He was the father of ten children, including the subject of this memoir. Cyrus Williams[6] Brown served in the War of 1812, responding to the call for the defence of Stonington, 9 and 10 August 1814, and for his services he received from the United States Government a warrant for 160 acres of land. His son, Dea. Cyrus Williams[7] Brown, served as a member of the Board of Selectmen of North Stonington, and was elected to represent the town in the General Assembly of Connecticut in 1857 and 1860. He was a deacon of the Second Baptist Church there.

Cyrus Henry Brown was educated in the public schools of North Stonington and in private schools for three years, taking a full preparatory course for teaching at the Connecticut Literary Institution at Suffield, Conn. He taught six years in the public schools of Connecticut and Rhode Island, and travelled for one year on horseback in the South, selling books and thus enjoying an opportunity to see the country. After his marriage he removed, in 1856, to Brighton, Mass., and for forty-one years was engaged in the provision business in Brighton, Brookline, and Boston, where he and his wife were members of the Brighton Avenue Baptist Church. For twenty-two years he was superintendent of the Sunday school of this church. In March 1897 he moved to Westerly, R. I., where his wife died in the following autumn; and he then went to reside with his eldest daughter, Mrs. George H. Utter of Westerly.

From this time on he devoted himself to compiling "The Brown Genealogy," dealing with the three sons of Thomas[1] Brown of Lynn, Mass., who settled in Stonington, and with their descendants. This was published in 1907; and he next took up the records of his great-grandfather, Nathaniel Babcock, Sr., a descendant of James Babcock, who settled in Portsmouth, R. I., in 1642. In connection with this work he collected a vast amount of material that had never before been printed. The results of these labors were preserved in the Babcock–Main genealogy, published in 1909, when the compiler was eighty years old. He then started on his third volume of genealogical work, "The Brown Genealogy," volume 2, taking up the records of Nicholas Brown, who settled in Lynn, Mass., in 1630, and also the records of Charles Browne, who settled in Rowley, Mass., in 1647, and his descendants.

This book was published in 1915, when Mr. Brown was eighty-six years of age. He spent the closing years of his life with his daughter, Mrs. Abbott, of Andover, Mass.

Of him a friend has written: "His natural strength, practically unabated at the time of his death, his ruddy cheeks and ungrayed hair belying his years, his alert faculties and keen interest in world happenings, his wide reading and gifted pen, with his indefatigable use of it, made him nothing short of a marvel. His sense of humor, his gift at story telling of the times of yore, or of the present, made him a most charming companion, and his lovableness as a good and true man made family and friends vie with each other in doing him honor."

Mr. Brown married at Hopkinton, R. I., 23 March 1856, Sarah Catherine Maxson, born at Hopkinton 4 March 1837, died at Westerly 1 October 1897, daughter of Horace and Lovina (Lamphear) Maxson. They had six children, born during their residence in Brighton and Boston, as follows: 1. Elizabeth Lovina, who married in Boston, 19 May 1880, Hon. George Herbert Utter, B.A. (Amherst, 1877), LL.D. (Alfred (N. Y.) University, 1906), of Westerly, R. I., printer and newspaper publisher, aide on the staff of Gov. Augustus O. Bourn of Rhode Island, 1883–1885, member of the Rhode Island General Assembly, 1885–1889 (Speaker, 1888–89), member of the Rhode Island Senate, 1889–1891, Secretary of State of Rhode Island, 1891–1894, Lieutenant Governor of Rhode Island, 1904, Governor of Rhode Island, 1905–06, Representative in Congress, as a Republican, from the Second District of Rhode Island for the term 1911–1913, born at Plainfield, N. J., 24 July 1854, died 3 November 1912, before the expiration of his congressional term, son of George Benjamin and Mary Starr (Maxson) Utter; four children. 2. Henry Edwin, of Brighton, Mass., who married in Boston, 3 December 1890, Caroline Campbell Rollins, daughter of Lot M. and Delia S. (Campbell) Rollins, and died in 1909; two daughters. 3. Katherine Mabel, who married in Boston, 23 October 1895, John Lewis Howard of Melrose, Mass., civil engineer, born in South Boston 30 April 1866, son of John Henry and Georgianna M. (Packard) Howard; two daughters. 4. Wilfred Merrill, of Boston, who married at Stonington, Conn., 11 September 1906, Annie Cutler Bradley, daughter of Edward E. and Lois Chadwick (Gates) Bradley of Stonington. 5. Horace Clifford, of Melrose, Mass., who married at Westerly, R. I., 30 December 1902, Aldeane Kilmer, daughter of Richard P. and Caroline A. (Cutler) Kilmer; one son. 6. Grace Emily, who married Chester D. Abbott of Andover, Mass.

Mrs. Ann Maria (Higgins) Swift, of Chicago, Ill., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1919, was born at Eastham, Mass., 13 August 1843, the daughter of Joshua and Maria Holmes (Cobb) Higgins, and died at her home in Chicago 19 May 1922.

She was a descendant of Richard[1] Higgins, who came to New England in 1632/3 and was one of the founders of Eastham in 1644, through Benjamin,[2] 1640–1690, Ichabod,[3] 1662–1728, Ebenezer,[4] born in 1701, Elkanah,[5] 1729–1815, Joshua,[6] 1775–1860, and Joshua,[7] her father, who was born at Eastham 12 February 1812 and died in 1852. Her mother was born at Eastham 11 June 1811, the daughter of Scotten and Phebe (Knowles) Cobb.

In her eighteenth year, after a short period of teaching in a district school, she was married, 3 January 1861, to Gustavus Franklin Swift of Barnstable, Mass., who was born at West Sandwich, Mass., 24 June 1839, the sixth son of William and Sally Sears (Crowell) Swift and seventh in descent from William Swift, the founder of the family in New England, who died at Sandwich in January 1644. At Barnstable Mr. Swift opened a butcher shop, and Mrs. Swift looked after the account books of the embryo industry. From this beginning the business grew rapidly, and was removed first to Brighton, Mass., and then, in 1875, to Chicago, where it developed into the famous packing house of Swift & Company. In Chicago the family resided on the South Side, close to the site of the packing industry. Devoted as Mrs. Swift was to the rearing of her children and to her husband's business, she found time for the altruistic services in the community which characterized her entire life. She was largely instrumental in the upbuilding of the Union Methodist Episcopal Church and an important factor in the church life of Saint James's Methodist Episcopal Church.

On 29 March 1903 Mr. Swift died, leaving his widow in possession of the priceless heritage of a name famous for accomplishment and industry. In his will his confidence in his wife's business and charitable sagacity was emphasized by a clause in which he bequeathed to her a fund of which the distribution was left entirely to her judgment. During the nineteen years between the death of her husband and her own decease she kept open house for the friends she loved, still spending, nevertheless, a large part of her time and money for the benefit of those who sought her help, and giving freely to individuals and to institutions where investigation and judgment justified the gift. In her will she bequeathed more than half a million dollars to charitable institutions.

"Mrs. Swift's entire life," it has been said, "had a purpose. She cherished her opportunities to make of duty a beloved devotional. This quality is reflected in her home life, in her place in the community and in the important part she played in the building up of a great industry."

Mr. and Mrs. Swift were the parents of the following eleven children, of whom eight survive their mother: 1. Louis Franklin, of Lake Forest, Ill., who was born at Sagamore, in that part of Sandwich, Mass., which is now the town of Bourne, 27 September 1861, married, 9 September 1880, Ida May Butler of Chicago, has been president of Swift & Company, packers, of Chicago, since 1903, and is an officer in several other financial and industrial organizations. 2. Edward Foster, of Chicago, who was born at Barnstable, Mass., 12 November 1863, married, 28 March 1887, Hortense Newcomer of Shannon, Ill., daughter of Theodore Philip and Anne (Connelly) Newcomer, is a vice president of Swift & Company, and, like his elder brother, an officer in many other corporations. He has succeeded to his mother's Pilgrim Tercentenary membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society. 3. Lincoln Foster, born 6 April 1865, died 22 August 1867. 4. Annie May, born 10 February 1867, died 23 April 1889, in her twenty-third year. 5. Helen Louise, born 20 March 1869, the wife of Francis Neilson, now of Chicago, a well-known author, critic, editor, playwright, actor, and stage director, and a member of the British Parliament, 1910–1915, who was born at Birkenhead, co. Chester, England, 26 January 1867. 6. Charles Henry, of Chicago, born at Lancaster, Mass., 27 December 1872, unmarried, a vice president and director of Swift & Company. He served in the World War as a major and lieutenant colonel in the Ordnance Department, both in Washington and with the American Expeditionary Forces overseas. He became a Pilgrim Tercentenary member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society in 1920, and is the donor of a tablet in memory of his immigrant ancestor, William Swift of Sandwich, which has been placed on the wall of the stair hall of the Society's building. 7. Herbert Lincoln, born in April 1875, died 19 October 1911. 8. George Hastings, of Boston, who was born in Chicago 1 March 1878, married, 11 February 1907, Lucile Darst Casey of Chicago, daughter of Edwin Augustus and Mary Eleanor (Darst) Casey, and is connected with various packing and provision companies in which Swift & Company and the Swift family are interested. He has been a life member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society since 1916. 9. Gustavus Franklin, of Chicago, who was born 1 March 1881 and married Marie Fitzgerald. 10. Ruth May, born 21 November 1883, the wife of Jeremiah D. Maguire. 11. Harold Higgins, of Chicago, Ph.B. (University of Chicago, 1907), born in Chicago 24 January 1885, unmarried, a vice president and director of Swift & Company and a trustee of the University of Chicago. He was a member of the American Red Cross mission to Russia in 1917, and served in the World War as a captain in the Adjutant General's Department, 1918.

Henry Clay Jackson, of Boston, elected a resident member in 1900 and made a life member in 1902, was born at North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Mass., 19 April 1838, the son of Ephraim and Lucy (Wilde) Jackson, and died in Boston 21 May 1922.

His father, the son of Barnard and Bathsheba (Keith) Jackson, was born 16 January 1811, in that part of Bridgewater which was incorporated in 1821 as the town of North Bridgewater and is now the city of Brockton; and his mother was born at South Braintree, Mass., 3 September 1809, the daughter of Atherton and Lucy (Packard) Wilde.

In 1855, when seventeen years old, he came to Boston and entered the dry-goods business, and in due time became the head of the firm of Jackson, Mandell & Daniels, wholesale dealers in dry goods. After a successful career he retired from the firm in 1893, at the age of fifty-five. He was then elected president of the National Bank of North America, and proved equally efficient as leader of this institution, which went into voluntary liquidation in 1898, when its affairs were found to be in much better shape than those of many other banks which closed at that time.

Mr. Jackson was a director of the Old Colony Trust Company, a trustee, vice president, and member of the investment committee of the Home Savings Bank, and vice president and director of the Massachusetts Mohair Plush Company. He was a member of the Boston Art Club and of the University Club.

He married, 15 August 1860, Maria Amanda Moulton, daughter of Alvah and Mary (Dalton) Moulton. She died 19 December 1907; and his nearest surviving relative is his brother, Paul W. Jackson of Braintree.

Col. Josiah Granville Leach, LL.B., of Philadelphia, Pa., a resident member since 1896, was born at Cape May Court House, N. J., 27 July 1842, the son of Rev. Joseph Smallidge and Sophia (Ball) Leach, and died at his residence in Philadelphia 27 May 1922.

He was a descendant of Lawrence Leach, the American founder of the Leach family, who came to Salem, Mass., in 1629 in the same fleet with Higginson; and another of his ancestors was William[2] Manning of Cambridge, Mass., who, with Dea. John Cooper, was appointed in 1672 by the overseers of Harvard College to receive contributions for the erection of a new building for the College and to have charge of the work, the building, when completed several years later, being known as Harvard Hall.* His mother, a native of Holden, Mass., was seventh in descent from John Ball of Concord, Mass.

Colonel Leach received his early education from private tutors and in private schools of his native city. He engaged in newspaper work, but in 1862 he left it to join the Union Army as sergeant in the Twenty-fifth New Jersey Infantry. His gallant conduct at the Battle of Fredericksburg won him the position of sergeant major and later he was promoted to a second lieutenancy. Much of his time during this period was devoted to organizing soldiers' aid societies for the purpose of providing clothing and hospital stores for the sick and wounded.

Taking up the study of law, he was graduated in 1866 from the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and, being admitted to the Philadelphia bar on 17 March of that year, he entered upon the practice of his profession, in which he continued until his death. He was not conspicuous as a trial lawyer, but devoted himself to work before the Orphans' Court and to conveyancing, drawing wills, and managing estates. He had the notable record of having been the attorney for five generations of one family. He never undertook any criminal work, which was extremely distasteful to him, and in the matter of fees he was always considerate of the financial condition of his clients, charging them little, if anything, if they were poor.

Politics had fascinated him at an early age, and when only eighteen he had delivered campaign speeches in support of Lincoln and Hamlin; yet he seemed disinclined to hold office, serving only one term in 1876 in the Pennsylvania Legislature and declining a renomination. In the presidential campaign of 1880 he took an active part in support of Garfield, and raised and was elected captain of one of the companies of the Young Republicans, a campaign marching club, composed chiefly of young men of the best Philadelphia families. In 1889, however, he accepted from President Harrison the appointment as appraiser at the port of Philadelphia, and his management of this office, which he relinquished in 1890, was highly praised.

In 1887 he was appointed commissary general of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, with the rank of colonel, and at the time of the Johnstown flood he was called on to organize the relief work in that city. He remained an officer of the National Guard until 1890.

Colonel Leach was a careful investigator and prolific writer on historical and genealogical subjects. His regard for accuracy and his ability to furnish documentary proof of his statements were remarkable. To him Pennsylvania owes a debt of gratitude for the preservation of the memory of many noteworthy events in her history. He had the distinction of being the first to suggest that the fourteenth of June be recognized as Flag Day, sharing the honors of establishing this day with his fellow citizen, the late John Woolf Jordan, LL.D., a corresponding member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society.*

His writings include "Memoranda Relating to the Ancestry and Family of Hon. Levi Parsons Morton," "Memorials of the Reading, Howell, Yerkes, Watts, Latham, and Elkins Families," "Genealogy of Harry Alden Richardson," "History of the Bringhurst Family; with Notes on the Clarkson, De Peyster, and Boude Families," "History of the Penrose Family of Philadelphia," including the life of the late Senator Boies Penrose, "History of the Girard National Bank of Philadelphia," "Chronicle of the Yerkes Family, with Notes on the Leech and Rutter Families," and "Some Account of Captain John Frazier and His Descendants, with Notes on the West and Checkley Families." He edited "The Journal of the Reverend Silas Constant," "Annals of the Sinnott, Rogers, Coffin, Corlies, Reeves, Bodine and Allied Families," "Some Account of the Tree Family," "John Redington of Topsfield, Massachusetts, and Some of his Descendants, with Notes on the Wales Family," "The First Provincial Council of Pennsylvania and Its Members," and "Some Account of the Pawling Family of New York and Pennsylvania."

He was one of the leaders in organizing the Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania, and since 1913 was its president. He was historiographer of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania for over twenty years, a founder and historian of the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the Revolution, chairman of its membership committee from the organization of the society in April 1888 until April 1921, a member of its Board of Managers, and its honorary president at the time of his death, a deputy governor general of the Society of Mayflower Descendants, a councillor and president of the Colonial Society of Pennsylvania, a member of the Society of Colonial Wars, a founder and councillor of the Old Planters' Society of Massachusetts, a founder of the Cape May Genealogical Society, and a member of a number of other historical associations. He believed firmly in the efficacy of the hereditary-patriotic societies in arousing an interest in the study of history.

Colonel Leach was a member of St. Peter's Church (Protestant Episcopal) of Philadelphia.

His biographer says of him: "The strongest factors in his life were . . . his love for work and his love for his fellow-men. His industry was unceasing; his desire to help others unbounded."

He married in Philadelphia, 5 October 1866, Elizabeth R. Whilldin, who died in January 1922, daughter of the late Capt. Wilmon Whilldin, a wealthy steamboat owner of Philadelphia. Four children survive them: Josiah Granville Leach, Jr., Dr. Wilmon Whilldin Leach, Meredith Biddle Leach, and Annie Adele Leach.

Andrew Marcellus Kidder, of Somerville, Mass., a resident member since 1895, was born at Charlestown, Mass., 20 May 1845, the son of Andrew Bradshaw and Sarah Elizabeth (Tufts) Kidder, and died at Somerville 9 June 1922.

The Kidder family had lived in Medford from Colonial times. James Kidder, grandfather of Andrew Marcellus, was long the toll keeper of the Medford turnpike, and was in the very midst of the stirring happenings of the earlier days. The Tufts family, also, was among the earliest settlers of this territory. When Mr. Kidder was an infant his father removed to Somerville, and for nearly fifty years the family made their home at 198 Washington Street, removing in 1895 to Summit Avenue.

Mr. Kidder received his education in the old Prospect Hill schoolhouse, under the instruction of the well-known teachers, Irene Locke, Charles S. Lincoln, and Oren S. Knapp. Then he went to work for his father, was admitted later to the Boston firm of A. B. Kidder & Son, music typographers, and continued there until his retirement from business some twenty-five years ago.

His delicate health in early life made him averse to all forms of outdoor exercise, although for a number of years he was a member of the Lexington Golf Club. He became a director in the Somerville National Bank at its establishment, and gave to it painstaking and valuable service through many years. He was a member of the Central Club of Somerville from its formation in 1886 and of the American Whist Club of Boston.

Mr. Kidder, who never married, made his home with his sister until her death in 1916. He was known for his hospitality and delightful companionship, born, it may be, largely of his sympathetic feeling and his unassuming character. One who knew him long and well wrote: "It was a pleasure to know him and call him friend. I cannot remember ever having heard, of all those who knew him, one man or woman speak an unkind word regarding him."

His brother, Arthur T. Kidder of Somerville, survives him.

Louis Ellsworth Laflin, C.E., of Princeton, N. J., a life member since 1921, was born at Pittsfield, Mass., 23 March 1861, the son of George Hinman and Mary Minerva (Brewster) Laflin, and died at Princeton 2 September 1922.

He traced his descent from Charles Laflin, who removed in 1749 from Oxford, Worcester Co., to that part of Westfield, Mass., which was set off in 1775 as the town of Southwick. There he died on 29 December 1762, and Agnes, his widow, died there 29 November 1767. Charles Laflin's son Matthew, who purchased most of his father's real estate in 1757 and died at Southwick 15 March 1810, married at Westfield Lucy Loomis, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Morley) Loomis. He was repeatedly elected moderator in the town meetings, "raised minnetmen," and was sergeant, lieutenant, and captain. His son Matthew, a soldier and a public-spirited citizen, who was born at Westfield (Southwick) 1 July 1765 and died at Southwick 21 December 1828, married Lydia Rising, born 13 July 1767, died at Southwick 21 January 1853, daughter of Amos Rising, who came to Westfield (Southwick) in 1770. The third Matthew Laflin, son of Matthew and Lydia (Rising), was born at Southwick 16 December 1803, and died in Chicago, Ill., 20 May 1897. He married first, at Lee, Mass., 8 February 1827, Henrietta Armenia Hinman, born at Lee 20 June 1805, died at Canton, Conn., 12 February 1834, daughter of Ransom and Mary (Battle) Hinman; and secondly Katherine King, who died in 1891. He was the senior partner in the Laflin & Rand Powder Company, and went to Chicago in 1837 to sell powder; but in 1846 he gave up this business and engaged in the buying and selling of real estate. He built the Bull's Head Tavern, and established the first stockyards in Chicago and the first transportation line there, on West Madison Street. He was instrumental in starting the Chicago Water Company, and was always in favor of public improvements. His son by his first wife, George Hinman Laflin, a paper merchant for many years, was born at Canton, Conn., 19 January 1828, and died at Pittsfield, Mass., 24 July 1904. He married at Pittsfield, 3 September 1851, Mary Minerva Brewster, born at Lenox, Mass., 24 January 1832, daughter of Dr. John Milton and Philena (Higley) Brewster and a descendant of Elder William Brewster of the Mayflower. They were the parents of the subject of this memoir.

Louis Ellsworth Laflin was educated at private schools in Chicago, namely, at H. H. Babcock's Chicago Academy until 1874, at Stanley Waters's Chicago Latin School until 1876, and at Ira W. Allen's Academy until 1878. In the fall of the last-mentioned year he entered the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N. Y., where he was graduated as a civil engineer in 1882.

Mr. Laflin began the practice of his profession as assistant engineer of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, 1882–1885. In 1886 he was employed by the Greenwood Gold Mining Company, and then engaged in mercantile pursuits until 1892, when he essayed the study of architecture in Paris, at the Atelier Redon, Ecole des Beaux Arts, 1892–1895. On his return home he took up business again as an officer and manager of estates, and held many positions as director and trustee of banks, schools, and corporations, chiefly in Chicago, but he served also as a trustee of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

He was much interested in genealogy, and prepared a work on the descendants of his ancestor Charles Laflin, which remained unpublished.

Mr. Laflin married at Plainfield, N. J., 22 October 1885, Josephine Knowland, daughter of Frederick and Sarah Cadwalader (Logan) Knowland, who survives him, together with two sons, Louis Ellsworth, Jr. (Princeton, 1922), born in Chicago 23 March 1898, and Lloyd Alan, born in Chicago 13 January 1903. Two older children, Lawrence and Florence, twins, were born at Plainfield, N. J., 11 August 1887, and died, the son on 2 February 1902 and the daughter on the day of her birth.

James William Sullivan, of Boston, a resident member since 1913, was born at Bradford, Me., 30 November 1848, the son of Capt. James and Ann Matilda (Shaw) Sullivan, and died at Brookline, Mass., 24 September 1922.

His great-grandfather, Ebenezer Sullivan, 1753–1799, was a captain and brevet major, serving in the Fifteenth Regiment, Massachusetts Continental Infantry, and was subsequently aide-de-camp to his brother, Maj. Gen. John Sullivan of the Continental Army, while James William Sullivan's grandfather, John Sullivan, 1773–1818, and his father, James Sullivan, who was born at Portsmouth, N. H., 23 January 1810 and died in 1871, were sea captains. His mother was born at Portsmouth 14 August 1819, the daughter of William and Nancy (Drisco) Shaw.

He was educated in the public schools of Portland, Me., and at Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College in the same city, and for many years was employed in Boston, where at one time he was with the W. B. Clarke Company, booksellers, stationers, and engravers, on Tremont Street, near King's Chapel.

He was a member of the Society of the Cincinnati, and had been its treasurer.

His sister, with whom he had enjoyed congenial and close companionship since the death of their parents many years ago, survived him.

Mrs. Emma Frances (Upham) Almy, of East Brookfield, Mass., a resident member since 1918, was born at East Brookfield 22 May 1861, the daughter of Alonzo and Maria (Hyde) Upham, and died there 11 October 1922.

She traced her descent from John[1] Upham and his wife Elizabeth of Weymouth, Mass., 1635, and later of Malden, Mass., through Phineas[2] of Malden (who was mortally wounded in King Philip's War, in the Great Swamp Fight of 19 December 1675, while serving as lieutenant in the company of Capt. Isaac Johnson of Roxbury, and died in the following October) and his wife Ruth (Wood), John[3] of Malden and his wife Abigail (Hayward), Ezekiel,[4] Nathaniel,[5] Maj. Jacob,[6] and Alonzo,[7] her father, who was born at Sturbridge, Mass., 31 July 1821. Her mother was born at Sturbridge 18 June 1831, the daughter of Abijah and Sally (Moore) Hyde, granddaughter of Othniel Hyde, and great-granddaughter of Benjamin Hyde, Sr., who, with his five sons, Abijah, John, Othniel, Lemuel, and Joshua, took part in the Revolutionary War.

She attended the public schools in Brookfield and the Hitchcock Academy at Brimfield, Mass., and studied art and painting in oils under several eminent teachers. She was greatly interested in art, history, and genealogy, and was a member of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. In 1916 she became a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal Church, being confirmed at All Saints' Church, Worcester, Mass.

She was married, 25 December 1883, to Edward Clark Almy, son of Capt. Eber C. and Charlotte A. (Brownell) Almy, and they had one child, Beatrice Hyde Almy.

Henry Cole Quinby, A.M., LL.B., of New York City, elected a resident member in 1893 and made a life member in 1919, was born at Lake Village, in the town of Gilford (now Lakeport, in the city of Laconia), N. H., 9 July 1872, the son of Henry Brewer and M. Octavia (Cole) Quinby, and died at his residence in New York City 23 October 1922.

His paternal ancestry has been traced from Robert[1] Quinby, who appears in the records of Salem, Mass., in 1646, became a respected resident of Salisbury and Amesbury, Mass., and was, perhaps, a son or nephew of William Quinby, who arrived at Salem about 1638.* This Robert married Elizabeth Osgood, daughter of William and Elizabeth Osgood of Salisbury, and was killed by Indians in the Amesbury massacre of 7 July 1677. From Robert[1] Quinby the line of descent runs through Robert[2] of Amesbury, who married Mary ——— and died in 1715, Joseph[3] of Amesbury, who married, as his first wife, Rachel Morrill and died about 1745, Joseph,[4] who was a shipbuilder, migrated from Massachusetts to Falmouth (now Portland), Me., before 1740, married Mary Haskell, and died in 1776, Capt. John[5] of Falmouth, a shipbuilder and shipowner, who was born at Falmouth 12 May 1760, married Eunice Freeman, and died 27 September 1806, Moses[6] of Stroudwater (now a part of Portland), Me., lawyer and farmer, A.B. (Bowdoin, 1806, being a member of the first class, numbering seven men, which was graduated at that college), who was born 19 April 1786, married Anne Titcomb, and died 6 May 1857, Thomas[7] of Stroudwater and Biddeford, Me., civil engineer, who was born at Stroudwater 15 December 1813, married Jane Elizabeth Brewer, and died 18 June 1885, and Hon. Henry Brewer,[8] who was born at Biddeford, Me., 10 June 1846 and was the father of the subject of this memoir.

*In the "Genealogical History of the Quinby (Quimby) Family" William Quinby is called William[1] and Robert is called Robert,[2] although it is admitted in the book that the exact relationship of Robert to William is unknown.

Hon. Henry Brewer[8] Quinby received his early education in the public schools of Biddeford, at the New Hampton (N. H.) Literary Institution, and at the Nichols Latin School at Lewiston, Me., entered Bowdoin College in 1865, and received there the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1869 and the degree of Master of Arts, in course, in 1872. He was employed as an accountant at Lakeport, N. H., from 1869 to 1877, and held a position under the United States Government, as special agent in the Quartermaster's Department of the Army, from 1877 to 1883. In this period he lived in Washington, D. C., in various places in Missouri, and in Pennsylvania. He also studied medicine, and the degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred on him by the Columbian University (now the George Washington University) in 1880. In 1909, when he was Governor of New Hampshire, Dartmouth College bestowed on him the honorary degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Laws, and the latter degree was also conferred on him by his own alma mater in the same year. In 1911 he was made an overseer of Bowdoin College. From 1883 on he was engaged in business at Lake Village, and became after a while the head of the Cole Manufacturing Company, founded by his father-in-law, Hon. Benjamin J. Cole, which had an extensive plant in the Lakeport section of Laconia, N. H. He also became president of the Laconia National Bank and of the City Savings Bank of Laconia. His public service in New Hampshire began in 1872, when he was a member of the staff of Gov. Ezekiel A. Straw, with the rank of colonel. A Republican in politics, he represented the town of Gilford in the lower branch of the State Legislature in 1887 and 1888, and in 1889 and 1890 he represented the Fourth Senatorial District in the State Senate. In 1891 and 1892 he was a member of the Governor's Council, serving as chairman of the State Prison Committee. In 1892 he was one of the delegates at large from New Hampshire to the Republican National Convention at Minneapolis, and in 1896 he was chairman of the Republican State Convention. In 1897 he was appointed a member of the Board of Trustees of the New Hampshire State Hospital, and was several times reappointed to this position in later years. In 1900 he was an unsuccessful candidate, in the Republican legislative caucus, for the Republican nomination for United States Senator. Three times he refused to contend for the Republican nomination for the governorship of New Hampshire, but in 1908 he was induced to accept it, was elected, and served as Governor for the term 1909–10. In 1912 he was the Republican candidate for United States Senator, but the schism in the party that resulted from the activities of the followers of Colonel Roosevelt led to a deadlock in the Legislature, which was finally broken by the election of a Democrat. His wife, whom he married at Lake Village, N. H., 22 June 1870, was M. Octavia Cole, who was born at Lake Village 22 December 1845 and died in 1920, the daughter of Hon. Benjamin James and Mehitable Aborn (Batchelder) Cole of Lakeport and a descendant of several well-known men of the Colonial period.

Through his great-great-grandmother, Mrs. Eunice (Freeman) Quinby, wife of Capt. John[5] Quinby, Henry Cole Quinby traced his ancestry back to Elder William Brewster of the Mayflower, Gov. Thomas Prence of the Plymouth Colony, Gov. Thomas Dudley of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, President John Rogers of Harvard College, Maj. Gen. Daniel Dennison of the Colonial forces, and many other New England men of distinction in Colonial days.

When a small boy Henry Cole Quinby was sent to various schools in different parts of the United States, since his father's duties as special agent in the Quartermaster's Department led to frequent changes in the location of the family headquarters. Thus about 1878 he attended a kindergarten at Boonville, Mo., conducted by Mrs. De Haven, about 1879 he was a pupil at the Franklin School, a public school in Washington, D. C., and in 1880 he was enrolled in the Misses Tompkinson's school at Harrisburg, Pa. In 1881 he was sent to the Holderness (N. H.) School for Boys, and afterwards attended, 1882–1884, the public schools at Stroudwater, Me., and Lake Village, N. H. Entering the Chauncy Hall School, Boston, he was prepared for college, completing the preparatory course and graduating there in 1889. In the same year he began the study of law in the office of E. A. and C. B. Hibbard at Laconia, N. H., but laid this study aside and entered Harvard in 1890. There he spent the academic years 1890–1893, and received in 1894 the degree of Bachelor of Arts, cum laude. In his school days he had founded and edited two school papers, and at Harvard he was for several years manager of the Harvard Advocate. He was enrolled in the Harvard Law School, 1893–1895, and was admitted to the degree of Bachelor of Laws in 1896. Twenty years later, in 1916, Bowdoin College bestowed on him the honorary degree of Master of Arts.

Mr. Quinby was admitted to the bar in Boston, but entered upon the work of his profession in New York City, in the office of Hon. Joseph Hodges Choate, of the law firm of Evarts, Choate & Beaman. There he remained until the appointment of Mr. Choate as ambassador to Great Britain in 1899, when he opened his own office, and continued to practise law in New York until his death.

Many other interests besides his work in the law laid claim to Mr. Quinby's time and energy. To the theatre, to its people, and to its problems he was especially devoted. He was a member of the Players' Club and counted among his intimate friends many well-known actors and playwrights; he enjoyed a wide reputation as a dramatic critic; his judgments on the merits of new manuscripts carried great weight; and from time to time he took part in nonprofessional performances given by the Amateur Comedy Club, of which he had been a member since 1898 and was at one time vice president.

His interest in genealogical research began at an early age and was maintained to the end of his life. In 1893, the year of his election to membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society, when he was still an undergraduate at Harvard, he wrote that he had devoted considerable time to the compilation of genealogical lines, among which were those of Quinby, Cole, Batchelder (of New Hampshire), Dole, Titcomb, Frost, Brewer, and Slemons. In 1906 he published the "Quinby Chart: Ancestors of Thomas Quinby, of Stroudwater, Maine, and his Wife, Jane Elizabeth Brewer." In 1907 he joined the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, and served in subsequent years as a member of various committees of that organization. In the same year also appeared the first volume of New England Family History, an illustrated genealogical magazine which he established chiefly for the purpose of bringing to light material which might be helpful to him in the preparation of his genealogical magnum opus, a history of the Quinby family. Four volumes of this magazine were published, ending with the year 1912, Mr. Quinby being the editor and chief contributor. In 1915 he brought out the first volume of his "Genealogical History of the Quinby (Quimby) Family in England and America," a book of over six hundred pages, profusely illustrated; and the second volume of this work was just ready for the press at the time of the compiler's death.

His appreciation of the work of the hereditary-patriotic societies in promoting genealogical research and in emphasizing the debt of the Nation to its founders was shown by his activities as a member of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of New York, to which he was admitted in 1897 and of which he became a life member in 1915. He served on the Board of Assistants of this organization, 1916–1918, and at the end of his term was chosen governor of the Society, holding this office by annual election every year from 1918 until his death and doing much to promote the growth of the Society's library. He was a member also of the New England Society, the New Hampshire Society, of which he was president at the time of his death, the Harvard Club of New York, the Midday Club, the Boston Philatelic Society, the Bar Associations of the City and the State, and other organizations, including the Union League Club of New York, in which he was a member of the Library Committee from 1902 to 1911, secretary from 1914 to 1919, and vice president from 1920 until his death.

During the World War Mr. Quinby was chairman of the National Executive Committee of the American Defense Society, and helped in suppressing newspapers published in the German language and in combating German propaganda.

Although he was a Republican and had a large circle of acquaintances among men of prominence in that party, he did not enter into active politics. In religious affiliations he was an Episcopalian.

Mr. Quinby married first, in Boston, 7 November 1895, Maria Coffin Stimpson, who died 26 June 1896, daughter of Oliver and Cora (Doane) Stimpson; and secondly, at Bridgeport, Conn., 6 November 1907, Florence Adelaide Cole, daughter of Charles Ward and Amanda Maria (Hoag) Cole of Flushing, Long Island. Mrs. Quinby is the author of "Equestrian Monuments of the World," published in 1913, in the preparation of which her husband collaborated with her. Mr. Quinby left no children, and his wife, his father, and his sister, Mrs. Hugh Nesbitt Camp (Candace Ellen Quinby), alone of his immediate family survive him.

Mr. Quinby died suddenly, while still in the prime of life and engrossed in his manifold activities. Funeral services were held in Saint Bartholomew's Church, New York City, on 26 October 1922. "Everywhere," says his New York biographer, "his high graces of culture, refinement and personal charm, and his exceptional abilities had made and held for him respect and warm affection."

Frank Whitney, of Boston, a resident member since 1917, was born at Lynn, Mass., 2 July 1846, the son of Israel and Mary Hopkins (Flagg) Whitney, and died in Boston, unmarried, 30 October 1922.

He was a descendant of John[1] Whitney, who came to New England in the Elizabeth & Ann in 1635, with his wife Elinor and five sons, and settled at Watertown, Mass., through John[2] of Watertown, who came to New England with his parents and married Ruth Reynolds of Boston, Benjamin[3] of Watertown, who married Abigail Hagar, Daniel[4] of Watertown, who was born there 17 July 1700, married Dorothy Taintor, and died in 1775, Dr. Elisha[5] of Beverly, Mass., A.B. (Harvard, 1766), A.M. (ib., 1769), who was born at Watertown 27 February 1747, married (intention recorded at Ipswich, Mass., 22 June 1776) Eunice Farley, and died 22 February 1807, and Capt. Israel,[6] his father, who was born at Beverly 4 November 1797 and married there, 11 May 1826, Mary Hopkins Flagg, born at Beverly 21 July 1804, the daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Wilson) Flagg.

His early education was received at dames' schools, and afterwards, from 1854 to 1861, he was a pupil at the Chauncy Hall School, where he was prepared for college. He entered Norwich (Vt.) University in 1861, but spent only a year there, leaving the university in 1862 to take up a business career.

His first position was that of assistant in the office of William Perkins, merchant. In September 1862 he was employed by Israel G. Whitney & Company, merchants, with whom he remained until November 1868, when he went to Calcutta, India, as assistant to Whitney Brothers & Company, merchants. In 1872 he was made a resident member of the firm at Calcutta, and remained there until the firm gave up business in 1904. In his later years he resided in Boston.

Francis Henry Manning, of Boston, a life member since 1876, was born in Boston 26 August 1847, the son of Francis Cogswell and Abby (Howard) Manning, and died there 31 October 1922.

He traced his descent from Richard[1] Manning of Ipswich, Mass., and his wife Anstis, through Thomas,[2] who was born 11 February 1664/5 and died 14 May 1737, Richard,[3] Dr. Joseph[4] of Ipswich, A.B. (Harvard, 1725), A.M. (ib., 1728), who was born 16 March 1703/4, married, 14 November 1732, Elizabeth Boardman, and died 8 May 1784, Dr. John[5] of Ipswich, who was baptized 12 November 1738, married, 25 November 1760, Lucy Bowles, and died 25 October 1824, Capt. Richard[6] of Ipswich, who was born 9 January 1777, married, 14 October 1800, Lydia Pearson, and died 16 June 1815, and Francis Cogswell[7] of Boston, his father, who was born at Ipswich 11 November 1806, married Abby Howard (born in Boston), and died 11 January 1869.

He received his education at the Chauncy Hall School and the Quincy School of Boston, the Arnold Seminary of Bedford and later of Brewster, Mass., the Brimmer School and the Public Latin School of Boston, Wheeler's School in Grafton, Mass., and the English High School, Boston, at which he was graduated in 1862.

After graduation he entered the business of his father, who had come to Boston when a young man and had established himself in the wool trade, organizing the firm of Howland & Manning and afterwards forming a partnership with the late Matthew Luce of Boston, under the firm name of Manning & Luce. At the age of twenty-one Francis Henry Manning became a partner in the firm. After his father's death the firm name was changed to Luce & Manning, and as such it continued to be a widely known house for many years. Mr. Luce's death was keenly felt by Mr. Manning, and seven or eight years ago he retired from active business.

Much of his time in his later years was spent at the rooms of the Bostonian Society, of which he was a member, in the Old State House; but he always kept up his interest in the English High School, and seldom missed a winter meeting or a summer outing at Nantasket of the Old School Boys' Association.

Numerous philanthropic organizations of Boston aroused Mr. Manning's interest and enlisted his support; but his attention was especially directed to the work of the Robert B. Brigham Hospital for Incurables on Parker Hill, Roxbury.

He attended Emmanuel Church (Protestant Episcopal), and at one period of his life held membership in a number of Boston clubs; but he gradually relinquished these connections, retaining, however, membership in the Boston Athletic Association and the Union Boat Club.

Mr. Manning married, 5 October 1870, Charlotte Barrett Vose, youngest daughter of Hon. Henry Vose, A.B. (Harvard, 1837). Mrs. Manning died some twenty years ago, and their only child, Margaret, died ten years later. His nearest surviving relatives are two sisters, Mrs. George S. Selfridge (Annie F. Manning) and Miss Abby F. Manning, both of Boston.

Gen. Lucius Albert Barbour, of Hartford, Conn., a resident member since 1904, was born at Madison, Ind., 26 January 1846, the only son of Lucius and Harriet Louise (Day) Barbour, and died at Hartford 6 November 1922.

He was a descendant of Thomas[1] Barber, who came to New England in the Christian in 1635, aged 21, probably lived for a while at Dorchester, Mass., took part in the Pequot War, settled finally at Windsor, Conn., and died 11 September 1662. His wife Jane, whom he married 7 October 1640, died 10 September 1662. From him the line of descent is traced through his second son, Thomas[2] of Windsor and Simsbury, Conn., who was born 14 July 1644, married, 17 December 1663, Mary[2] Phelps (born at Windsor 2 March 1644, died 13 February 1725/6, daughter of William[1] and Mary (Dover) Phelps of Dorchester and Windsor), and died 10 May 1713, Samuel[3] of Simsbury, who was born 17 May 1673, married, 17 December 1712, Sarah Holcomb, daughter of Nathaniel and Mary (Bliss) Holcomb, and died 18 December 1725, John[4] of Simsbury, who was born 4 December 1719, married, 22 January 1746/7, Lydia Reed (born 18 November 1726, died 1 October 1806, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Hill) Reed), and died 27 December 1797, John[5] of Canton, Conn., who was born 29 November 1749, married Elizabeth Case (born 20 April 1752, died 26 May 1817, daughter of Josiah and Esther (Higley) Case), and died 3 November 1825, John[6] Barbour of Canton and later of Sheldon, N. Y., who was born 18 February 1783, married, 13 October 1803, Delight Griswold Case (born 15 October 1783, died 13 April 1811, daughter of Elisha and Delight (Griswold) Case), and died 24 November 1865, and Lucius[7] Barbour of Hartford, his father, who was born at Canton 26 July 1805, married, 23 April 1840, Harriet Louise Day (born at Westfield, Mass., 2 February 1821, died 26 September 1886, daughter of Albert and Harriet (Chapin) Day), and died 10 February 1873. His mother was seventh in descent from Robert[1] Day who came to New England in the Elizabeth in 1634 from Ipswich, co. Suffolk, England, aged 30, remained about two years at Cambridge, Mass., and then went to Hartford. From him and his second wife, Editha (Stebbins), the line runs through Thomas[2] of Springfield, Mass., who married Sarah Cooper, Samuel,[3] who married Marah Dumbleton, Josiah,[4] who married Elizabeth Bliss, Gideon,[5] who married Elizabeth Duncan, Ambrose,[6] who married Mary Ely, and Albert,[7] her father, who married Harriet Chapin.

When Lucius Albert Barbour was still in his infancy, his father moved to Hartford and soon became a well-known and highly honored resident of that city. The son was graduated at the Hartford High School in 1864, and, entering business, became a teller in the Charter Oak National Bank of Hartford. This position he resigned in 1870, and then spent two years in Europe. On returning to Hartford he was again employed by the same bank, and was advanced from one place of responsibility to another in its service, until he was made its president in 1910. Many years before this he had become connected with the Willimantic Linen Company, and in 1884 assumed the direction of its affairs as president and treasurer. He held also many other positions of trust, especially in prominent insurance and banking institutions.

A Republican in politics, he represented Hartford in the lower branch of the Connecticut Legislature in 1879. He had entered the military service of the State in September 1865, as a private in the Hartford City Guard, and, although out of the service from 1871 to 1875, he was, on reënlisting, rapidly promoted, until in 1878 he was commissioned colonel of the First Regiment, Connecticut National Guard. This command he resigned in November 1884; but in 1889 he was appointed adjutant general on the staff of Gov. Morgan Gardner Bulkeley.

He was a member of the Centre Congregational Church of Hartford, and belonged to the Military Order of Foreign Wars, the Society of Colonial Wars, and the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, as well as to several clubs.

General Barbour married, 8 February 1877, Harriet Elizabeth Barnes, who was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., 2 December 1849 and died 8 November 1899, daughter of Alfred Smith and Harriet Elizabeth (Burr) Barnes, her father being the head of the well-known publishing firm of A. S. Barnes & Company. His two children survive him, namely, Lucius Barnes Barbour of Hartford, B.A. (Yale, 1900), a resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society since 1907 and of the Society's Committee on Epitaphs since 1913, who has done much to promote the publication, under the auspices of various historical and patriotic societies in Connecticut, of the vital records of Connecticut towns, and Mrs. George A. Phelps (Harriet Burr Barbour) of Pelham Manor, N. Y.

Hon. Morgan Gardner Bulkeley, M.A., LL.D., of Hartford, Conn., a life member since 1917, was born at East Haddam, Conn., 26 December 1837, the son of Eliphalet Adams and Lydia Smith (Morgan) Bulkeley, and died at Hartford 6 November 1922.

His paternal line is traced from Rev. Peter[1] Bulkeley, who was born in the parish of Odell, Bedfordshire, England, 31 January 1582/3, the son of Rev. Edward Bulkeley, D.D., rector of Odell, and the descendant of an ancient and distinguished family. He was educated at Saint John's College, Cambridge, being admitted to the degree of Master of Arts in 1608, and succeeded his father as rector of Odell, whence, after twenty years of service, his nonconformist tenets led to his emigration to New England, whither his eldest son Edward had preceded him. He sailed on the Susan & Ellen, 9 May 1635, aged, according to the shipping lists, 50 years. His second wife, Grace Chetwood,* whom he had probably married in the latter half of 1634, sailed in the Elizabeth & Ann on the previous day, aged 33. Some of his children appear to have embarked on the same ship with their father, while others came in the ship with their stepmother. Going first to Cambridge, on his arrival in New England, he went in the following year to Concord, Mass., where he was installed as the first minister on 6 April 1637 and died 9 March 1658/9.

From Rev. Peter[1] Bulkeley and his second wife, Grace (Chetwood), the line of descent runs through Rev. Gershom,[2] A.B. (Harvard, 1655), A.M. (ib., 1658), who was born at Concord in 1636, married there, in October 1659, Sarah Chauncy, eldest daughter of President Chauncy of Harvard, became minister at New London and afterwards at Wethersfield, Conn., acquired a high reputation as a surgeon, and died 2 December 1713, Rev. John,[3] A.B. (Harvard, 1699), A.M. (ib., 1702), who was born in 1679, married Patience Prentice, was the first minister of Colchester, Conn., in 1703, and died in 1731, Hon. John,[4] B.A. (Yale, 1726), M.A. (ib., 1729), who married Mrs. Mary (Adams) Gardner, was a judge of the Superior Court of Connecticut, and died in 1753, Col. Eliphalet,[5] who married Anne Bulkeley, John Charles[6] of Colchester, who married Sally Taintor, and Eliphalet Adams,[7] B.A. (Yale, 1824), who was born at Colchester 20 June 1803 and died at Hartford 13 February 1872. He was the father of the subject of this memoir.

Eliphalet Adams[7] Bulkeley, after completing his college course, studied law, was admitted to the bar at Lebanon, Conn., and settled at East Haddam, where he practised his profession and became president of the local bank. While residing at East Haddam he was elected to the lower branch of the State Legislature and also served two terms in the State Senate. In 1846 he removed to Hartford, where he was appointed to the office of school-fund commissioner, was one of the organizers of the Republican party in Connecticut, and in 1857 was again elected to the Legislature, where he was chosen speaker (the first Republican speaker) of the House of Representatives. He was for many years associated in the practice of the law with Judge Henry Perkins, under the firm name of Bulkeley & Perkins. In his later years he was especially interested in life insurance, and took part in organizing the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, of which he was the first president, and the Ætna Life Insurance Company, of which also he was the first president, holding that position from 1850 until his death. He married Lydia Smith Morgan, who was born at Bozrah, Conn., 3 October 1806, the daughter of Avery and Jerusha (Gardner) Morgan.

Young Morgan Bulkeley was educated in the district schools of East Haddam, and after the removal of his parents to Hartford, when he was about nine years old, he attended the public schools of that city and entered the high school there. In 1851, however, when he was in his fifteenth year, he left school and entered the employ of the Ætna Life Insurance Company, in the lowly position of an office sweeper, at one dollar a week. Although his father was president of the Company, the boy was not content to wait for fortune to overtake him there, but six weeks later went to look for it in other fields. He accepted the position of bundle clerk and errand boy in the mercantile house of H. P. Morgan & Company of Brooklyn, N. Y., of which his uncle was the head, and there his ability and ambition raised him in seven years to partnership in the firm.

His business career was interrupted by the Civil War, at the outbreak of which he enlisted as a private in the Thirteenth Regiment, New York Volunteers, serving at the front under General McClellan, in the Army of the Potomac, before and during the Peninsular Campaign.

At the expiration of his military service he resumed business in Brooklyn; but on the death of his father, in 1872, he returned to Hartford and took charge of the financial interests of the family, which he managed with prudence and success. In 1872 he organized the United States Bank of Hartford, at first called the United States Trust Company, of which he was president from that year until 1879, when he resigned this position in order to accept the presidency of the Ætna Life Insurance Company, on the retirement of Thomas O. Enders, who had succeeded the first president, Eliphalet A. Bulkeley. He remained at the head of this widely known company until his death, and he was also active as an official in other important corporations, including the Ætna Fire Insurance Company, the Ætna National Bank of Hartford, and the Willimantic Linen Company.

A Republican in politics, he had been for many years, when he was a resident of New York State, a member of the Republican General Committee of Kings County, and he began his public service in Hartford as a member of the City Council in 1875, was an alderman in 1876, and held the office of mayor of Hartford for four successive two-year terms, 1880–1888. His salary and perhaps more than his salary as mayor he turned over to a fund for the relief and comfort of the poor of the city. In 1888 he was nominated by acclamation by the Republican State Convention for Governor of the State, for the two-year term beginning in 1889, and was elected by a large majority. In the gubernatorial election of 1890, for the following term of two years, in which Samuel E. Merwin was the Republican candidate and Luzon B. Morris the Democratic candidate, a dispute arose about the legality of rejecting some 1300 ballots, which the officials at the polls had refused to count, a majority of all the votes cast being necessary for the election of a Governor, according to the provisions of the Connecticut constitution of that day. The two branches of the Legislature disagreed, the Republican House wishing to canvass the votes and the Democratic Senate refusing to work with it, and therefore a deadlock occurred and it was impossible for the Legislature to elect a Governor, as it was authorized to do when there had been no election by the people. Governor Bulkeley, therefore, continued in office, since no successor had been chosen; but the Democratic candidate for comptroller, the only State officer who had been elected by popular vote, refused to admit him to the State House, and the Governor forced an entrance by the use of a crowbar. The question as to the Governor's right to the office was carried to the Supreme Court of the State, which upheld him in his contention and declared that he was Governor de jure and de facto. He continued to serve as Governor during the two years that followed his original term; but appropriations were held up by the Democratic Senate, which would not recognize his authority, the Governor of New York (David B. Hill) refused to extradite criminals on his requisitions, and other difficulties were strewn in his path by his political opponents. The Ætna Life Insurance Company, however, by its president, Governor Bulkeley, supplied money for the current expenditures of the State, and was repaid by vote of the next General Assembly. One result of these complications was the adoption of an amendment to the constitution of the State providing for the election of State officers by a plurality vote. From time to time Governor Bulkeley had received support as a candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator; and in 1905 he was elected by the Legislature, as the successor of Gen. Joseph Roswell Hawley, and served for the full term of six years, 1905–1911. He was always prominent and influential in the affairs of his party, and was a delegate to the Republican National Conventions of 1888 and 1896.

To every movement that in his judgment would promote the welfare of his city, his State, and the Nation he gave his loyal support. In 1913 he prevented a debenture bond issue of $67,000,000 by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. In the World War, during the sale of the Liberty Loan bonds, he succeeded in placing more than thirty per cent of the quota allotted to Hartford, and he gave to the employees of the Ætna Life Insurance Company and of the various industries of Connecticut special privileges in the way of subscriptions on the instalment plan. A prominent citizen of Connecticut has characterized him as a "patriot of the rarest type," and adds: "A leader in many political battles, he was generous in victory and defeat left no rancor. All in all a remarkable man, who deserved his successes and whose place will be hard to fill."

Governor Bulkeley received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from Yale University in 1889 and that of Doctor of Laws from Trinity College in 1917.

He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, of which he had been a department commander, the Massachusetts Commandery of the Loyal Legion, the Connecticut Society of the Cincinnati, the Connecticut Society of Sons of the Revolution, of which he had been president, the Military Order of Foreign Wars, the New York Society of Mayflower Descendants, the Connecticut Society of Colonial Wars, the Society of the War of 1812, and the Baronial Order of Runnymede, of which he had been marshal.

He was also prominent as a sportsman, having been the first president of the National Baseball League, when he was a Hartford alderman, and for more than thirty years an official of the National Trotting Association.

Governor Bulkeley married, 11 February 1885, Fannie Briggs Houghton of San Francisco, who survives him, with their three children, Morgan Gardner Bulkeley, Jr., B.A. (Yale, 1907), who in the World War was a major in the American Expeditionary Forces, Mrs. John Avery Ingersoll (Elenor Houghton Bulkeley), and Houghton Bulkeley.

A younger brother of Governor Bulkeley, Hon. William Henry Bulkeley, who was born at East Haddam 2 March 1840, also rose to high public office in Connecticut. He was educated in the public schools of Hartford, engaged in the dry-goods business in Brooklyn, N. Y., enlisted in 1861 in the Thirteenth New York Regiment, and in 1862 raised a company for the Fifty-sixth Regiment, New York Volunteers, and was elected its captain. When Lee invaded the North in 1863, he served in Gen. "Baldy" Smith's division until the regiment was ordered back to New York at the time of the draft riots of that year. In 1868 he returned to Hartford and founded the Kellogg & Bulkeley Company, lithographers, of which he was president; and he became an officer or director in several banking, insurance, and other corporations. In 1878 he purchased a large dry-goods store in Hartford, called "The Bee Hive," and carried it on most successfully. For five years he was a member of the Common Council of Hartford, being vice president for one year and president for another year; and then he was for more than seven years a very efficient member of the Board of Street Commissioners. He was commissary general of Connecticut from 1879 to 1881, Lieutenant Governor in 1881 and 1882, and represented Connecticut in 1881 as commissioner at the centennial celebration of the Surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown. In 1882 he was the Republican candidate for Governor, but was defeated by his Democratic opponent, Thomas M. Waller. Afterwards he removed to South Dakota, where he founded Forest City and was prominent in railroad circles and in the real-estate business.

James Pierce Stearns, of Brookline, Mass., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1919, was born at Brookline 10 February 1840, the son of Charles and Hannah Clapp (Pierce) Stearns, and died there 9 November 1922.

He was a descendant of Isaac Stearns, who came to Watertown, Mass., in 1630 from Nayland, co. Suffolk, England, where two of his children were baptized. Other children were born to him in this country, and he died 19 June 1671.

James Pierce Stearns was prepared for college at the Chauncy Hall School in Boston, and entered Harvard in 1856 as a member of the Class of 1860; but he left college at the end of his freshman year.

In the Civil War he rendered notable service as a soldier in the Union Army. Having previously been a member of the so-called "Boston Tigers," a company of the Massachusetts Militia, he was commissioned second lieutenant 1 October 1861, and was enrolled in Company K of the Twenty-second Massachusetts Volunteers. With this regiment, in the spring and early summer of 1862, he participated in the siege of Yorktown and in several battles of the Peninsular Campaign, including those at Hanover Court House, Mechanicsville, and Gaines's Mill. In the last-named battle, on 27 June, he was wounded and taken prisoner, being confined in the notorious Libby Prison at Richmond. In July of the same year, however, he was released on parole and exchanged. On 5 August 1862 he was promoted to be first lieutenant, being still attached to the Twenty-second Massachusetts Regiment. The wound received at Gaines's Mill, however, made necessary the amputation of his left leg, 23 September 1862, and this led to his discharge for disability, 14 February 1863. On 27 June of the same year he was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Veteran Reserve Corps, United States Army, and during the remainder of the war he was on duty at Hartford and New Haven, Conn., and on Davids Island, in Long Island Sound. On 30 June 1866 he was honorably discharged from the military service of the United States.

In December 1867 Mr. Stearns entered the employ of the Shawmut National Bank of Boston, of which he was made cashier in January 1875 and vice president in January 1894. In November 1898 the bank was absorbed in the National Shawmut Bank of Boston, of which Mr. Stearns became president. This office he held until May 1907, when he resigned, but remained in the service of the bank as chairman of its Board of Directors. He was connected as a director or trustee with other financial and business corporations, being in his home town a trustee of the Brookline Savings Bank. He was also a member of the Corporation of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and served on the Merchants' Municipal Committee, under Mayor Josiah Quincy, in 1896.

Mr. Stearns was catholic in his tastes. He was a shareholder in the Boston Athenæum, a patron of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, the Union Club of Boston, the Boston Art Club, and the Brookline Country Club.

He married in Boston, 27 June 1865, Elizabeth Shaw Bramhall of Boston, who died 22 October 1893, daughter of William and Betsy Bramhall. Of his four children three, all residents of Brookline, survive him, namely, William Bramhall Stearns, A.B. (Harvard, 1890), who was an aide, with the rank of captain, on the staff of Gov. David Ignatius Walsh of Massachusetts and is now with the banking house of Kidder, Peabody & Company of Boston, Mrs. Kate (Stearns) Page, and Mrs. Arthur Moore Morse (Helen Shaw Stearns). His second child, Mary Elizabeth, married Dwight Parker Robinson of Chestnut Hill, Mass., A.B. (Harvard, 1890), S.B. (Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1892), and died 30 November 1907.

William Widdicomb, of Grand Rapids, Mich., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1920, was born at Exeter, co. Devon, England, 12 July 1839, the son of George Widdicomb, and died at Grand Rapids 27 November 1922.

When he was three years old, the family came to this country and settled at Syracuse, N. Y. Here the boy attended the public schools until he was about fifteen years of age, when he began work with his father at the trade of cabinetmaking. In 1856 he went to Grand Rapids, where he obtained employment with the Winchester Furniture Manufacturing Company. In the following year his father, with the family, followed him to Grand Rapids, and with the assistance of his four sons established a small furniture factory in that city. The business prospered, in a humble way, until the breaking out of the Civil War, when all the sons enlisted in the Union Army.

William enlisted 28 July 1861 in Company B, First Michigan Infantry, was appointed sergeant 6 November 1861, and was made commissary sergeant 17 June 1862. He was promoted to be second lieutenant 27 June 1862 and first lieutenant in August of the same year. He was made regimental adjutant 15 October 1862; but on account of disability, incurred in the line of duty, he resigned and was honorably discharged, 10 March 1863. With his regiment, which was attached to the Army of the Potomac, he had participated in the Peninsular Campaign of 1862, including the Seven Days' Fighting before Richmond, in the Second Battle of Bull Run, 30 August 1862, in the repulse of Lee at Antietam, 17 September 1862, and in the deplorable engagement at Fredericksburg, 13 December 1862.

On his return from the war Mr. Widdicomb obtained work with various employers in Grand Rapids, and in January 1865 opened a small shop of his own, an enterprise in which his brothers Harry and John soon joined him. The business increased, and others were added to the firm, which changed its name from time to time and played a prominent part in giving to Grand Rapids its reputation as the leading furniture-producing city of the United States. In 1883 Mr. Widdicomb retired from the firm and became cashier of the Grand Rapids National Bank, where he remained until 1888. In 1886 he erected the Widdicomb Building, the first "skyscraper" in Grand Rapids, which he sold in 1920. From 1885 to 1894 he was engaged in the wholesale-grocery business with Amos Musselman, and did much to promote the coöperation and association of the wholesale-grocery men of Michigan.

In 1897, when the affairs of the Widdicomb Furniture Company were becoming somewhat embarrassed, Mr. Widdicomb was unanimously requested by its stockholders and creditors to resume the management of the business. Through his personal pride and his desire to preserve the family name from discredit, he accepted the charge, and by his financial acumen and ability as a manufacturer brought the company through its period of distress into prosperity. Finally, in 1915, he gave notice to the directors that he considered his work accomplished, and requested that he be allowed to withdraw from the position which he had been holding. His withdrawal led to the sale of the company to other parties in January 1916.

"Both in business and private life," writes one of his fellow citizens, "Mr. Widdicomb was held in the highest esteem for his sterling integrity and unswerving adherence to principle. He was one of the foremost pioneer furniture manufacturers of Grand Rapids, on whose fame that city's business was founded. Although his schooling had been very limited, he became scholarly through study and self-education. He was a model citizen, devoted to his family and fair in his dealings with others, freely giving to philanthropy and giving much in his own way for the relief of the distressed and needy."

Mr. Widdicomb belonged to the Michigan Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, of which he was elected senior vice commander in 1907, and he was a devoted Presbyterian, being at the time of his death a member of the Westminster Presbyterian Church.

He married first, 11 June 1863, Elsie P. Lee, who died 18 August 1871; and secondly, at Portland, Mich., 13 July 1872, Sarah Esther Hewett of Oswego, N. Y., who survives him, together with one son, William Widdicomb, Jr., four other children having died.

Charles Sumner Fellows, of Minneapolis, Minn., elected a resident member in 1862, made a corresponding member in 1878, and transferred to resident membership again in 1894, was born at Bangor, Me., 18 May 1838, the fourth child of Samuel and Susan (Jordan) Fellows, and died at Minneapolis 28 November 1922. In duration of membership he was, at the time of his death, the oldest member of the Society.

He was seventh in descent from Samuel[1] Fellows of Salisbury, Mass., who was born, probably in England, about 1619 (since he deposed 11 November 1679, aged about 60 years), was a proprietor of Salisbury, Mass., in 1639 and freeman in May 1645, was called planter and weaver, and died 6 March 1697/8. From Samuel[1] Fellows and his wife Ann, who died 5 December 1684, the line of descent is traced through Samuel[2] of Salisbury, who was born 13 January 1646/7, married, 2 June 1681, Abigail Barnard, was freeman in 1690, and died at Salisbury 5 December 1729, Samuel,[3] who was born at Salisbury in August 1683, married, 14 November 1710, Sarah Webster (born 15 September 1690), and died at Hampton, N. H., in 1714, Joseph,[4] who was born at Hampton between 1711 and 1714, married, 1 January 1737, Elizabeth Young, and died at Kingston, N. H., in 1796, Samuel,[5] who was born at Kingston 14 August 1738, married, 13 May 1761, Molly Ring of Salisbury, and died at Hawke (now Danville), N. H., 15 September 1778, Samuel,[6] who was born at Hawke 29 December 1766, married, in 1787, Hannah Merrill (born at Sandown, N. H., 28 April 1771, died at Bangor, Me., 5 December 1853), and died at Wiscasset, Me., 4 March 1820,* and Samuel,[7] who was born at Newbury, Vt., 28 March 1799, married, 21 February 1830, Susan Jordan (born at Cape Elizabeth, Me., 18 February 1798, died at Bangor 6 February 1875, daughter of Israel and Hannah (Deake) Jordan), and died at Bangor 16 December 1861, the father of the subject of this memoir.

Samuel[7] and Susan (Jordan) Fellows were the parents of four children besides Charles Sumner, of whom three (Helen Maria, born and died in 1830, Samuel Augustus, born 6 November 1833, and William Warren, born 6 September 1835) were older and one (Martha Ellen, born 19 June 1840) was younger than Charles Sumner.

His early education was received in the common schools of Bangor, and in 1854 he started out to make his own way in the world. The greater part of his mercantile life was spent in the grain business, but in his earlier years he often changed his occupation and his residence. In the winter of 1855–56 he came to Boston and entered the employ of Carter & Sanborn, bookbinders, but after a few months returned to Bangor and became a clerk in a shoe store. This occupation he followed for a number of years — in Bangor until 1859 and in Boston from 1859 to 1861. From 1861 to 1864 he carried on a grocery store of his own in Bangor, but he gave this up in the latter year to enter the grain business, in which he was engaged in Boston until 1869 and in Chicago from 1869 to 1878. In 1878 and 1879 he resided in Florida, being postmaster and storekeeper at Fairbanks in that State. In 1880 he was back again in Chicago, and was once more interested in the grain business until 1888, when he went to Minneapolis and embarked in the real-estate business, which claimed his attention until 1894. Then he came back to Boston, where in August 1894 he again took up the grain business. It was in this year that he exchanged his corresponding membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society for resident membership, which he had held from 1862 to 1878. He remained in Boston, however, only until 1896, when he returned to Minneapolis, where he spent the later years of his life as a grain dealer, as vice president of the Albert Dickinson Seed Company, and as treasurer of the Twin City Trading Company.

He was much interested in microscopic investigations, in collecting rare books, and in genealogical research, and he compiled a manuscript genealogy of the Fellows family. On 13 April 1908 he was elected a life member of the Minnesota Historical Society.

Mr. Fellows was unmarried. In his eighty-fifth year he was struck and killed by an automobile in Minneapolis, and his body was taken to Bangor for burial.

Francis Wood Carpenter, of Providence, R. I., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1919, was born in that part of Seekonk, Mass., which is now the town of East Providence, R. I., 24 June 1831, the son of Edmund and Lemira (Tiffany) Carpenter, and died at Providence 1 December 1922.

He was a descendant of William[1] Carpenter of Weymouth, Mass., who came to New England from Southampton in the Bevis in 1638, aged 62, was freeman 13 May 1640, and a representative in the General Court in 1641 and 1643, through William[2] of Rehoboth, Mass., who also came in the Bevis in 1638, aged 33, with his wife Abigail, aged 32, and four young children, and whose descendants for several generations lived at Rehoboth.

*The inscription on his gravestone in the Ancient Cemetery, Wiscasset, states that he was born 29 December 1765 and died 3 March 1820, "Æ. 55 yrs." Two young sons of Samuel and Hannah Fellows are also buried at Wiscasset. Cf. Register, vol. 72, pp. 243–244.

He was educated at the Seekonk Academy, and was then prepared for college by an uncle who was a minister in Massachusetts. But he did not go to college, for Gilbert Congdon of Providence, an iron and steel merchant, offered to take him as an apprentice, and he thus entered, in 1848, the business which was to be his chief occupation through life. In 1854 he was admitted into partnership with Mr. Congdon, under the firm name of G. Congdon & Company. Three years later the name was changed to Congdon & Carpenter, and in 1870 to Congdon, Carpenter & Company. In 1892 the business was incorporated as the Congdon & Carpenter Company, with Mr. Carpenter as president, a position which he held up to the time of his death. He was also interested in the manufacture of horseshoes, and was for a long time president of the Rhode Island Perkins Horseshoe Company.

Mr. Carpenter was identified with banking interests also, and was president of the American National Bank for twenty-eight years. He was director, besides, in many other corporations in the city, one of which was the Providence Washington Insurance Company, and he was well known for his sagacity and judgment in business matters.

For many years he was a member of the Central Congregational Church of Providence, served for twenty years on its Finance Committee, and was active in the development and progress of all departments of the church work. When the new church was built on Angell Street, Mr. Carpenter was a generous contributor to this undertaking, and the mural decoration in the apse was his gift. At a later date he gave the stained-glass, triple window in the west transept, which will be a lasting memorial to him. He was also always interested in the Young Men's Christian Association, of which he was president for several years. He was a constant contributor to many of the city charities, to foreign and home missions, and to the large schools for the colored people in the South.

Mr. Carpenter was a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, the Rhode Island Historical Society, the Rhode Island School of Design, the Republican Club of Rhode Island, the Squantum Association, the Hope Club, the Anawan Club, and the Oquossoc Angling Association at Indian Rock, Me., where he had a camp and was accustomed to spend a month every spring trout fishing, as long as his health permitted. He had travelled extensively in the United States for recreation.

Mr. Carpenter married first, in 1853, Anna Davis Barney; and secondly Harriet Zerviah Pope of Providence, who survives him. By his first wife he had six children, namely, Edmund (deceased), Anna Elizabeth (deceased), Clara (deceased), Frank (deceased), Mrs. Fenner H. Peckham (Mary A. Carpenter) of Providence, and Idelette Carpenter of Providence. By his second wife he had four children, all of whom survive him, viz., Harriet C., wife of Hiram H. Thayer of Minneapolis, Minn., and Gilbert C., Julia S., and Hannah T. Carpenter of Providence. At the time of his death he had seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Two sisters, Sarah Tiffany Carpenter of Providence and Mrs. Anna Elizabeth (Carpenter) Bebb of Illinois, also survive him.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stickney (Clapp) Cheney, of Boston, a life member since 1907, was born in Boston 23 August 1839, the daughter of Asahel and Elizabeth Searle (Whiting) Clapp of Dorchester, Mass., and died in Boston 11 December 1922.

She belonged to one of the oldest families in Dorchester, being a descendant of Dea. Nicholas[1] Clapp, who came to Dorchester, probably in 1633, as his name appears in the town records the next year, through Nathaniel,[2] Dea. Jonathan,[3] Noah,[4] A.B. (Harvard, 1735), A.M. (ib., 1738), town clerk of Dorchester for more than forty years, Dea. Ebenezer,[5] and Asahel,[6] her father, who was born 27 December 1799 and died 12 January 1867.* Her mother, who was born in Boston 1 December 1818 and was married to Asahel Clapp, as his second wife, 2 February 1837, was the daughter of George and Elizabeth (Searle) Whiting and a descendant of Rev. Samuel Whiting, who was born in Boston, Lincolnshire, England, 20 November 1597, the son of John Whiting, mayor of that borough, was matriculated at Emmanuel College, Cambridge, in 1613, was admitted to the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1616 and to that of Master of Arts in 1620, was after some years rector of the parish of Skirbeck, adjoining Boston, and came to New England in 1636, where he became pastor of the church at Lynn, Mass., and died 11 December 1679. His second wife, Elizabeth St. John, whom he married in England 6 August 1629 and from whom Mrs. Cheney was descended, was a daughter of Oliver and Sarah (Bulkeley) St. John of Cayshoe, Bedfordshire, a sister of Oliver St. John, who was an opponent of King Charles I and became chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas in England under Cromwell, and a niece of Rev. Peter Bulkeley, the first minister at Concord, Mass.

She was married, 6 June 1865, to Benjamin Pierce Cheney of Boston, who was born at Hillsborough, N. H., 12 August 1815 and died at his beautiful country estate in Dover, Mass., 23 July 1895, the son of Jesse and Alice (Steele) Cheney and seventh in descent from John[1] and Martha Cheney, who came to Roxbury, Mass., with several children, in 1635, and removed in the following year to Newbury, Mass., where the father was a prominent citizen and town officer. As a young man Mr. Cheney was a stage driver in southern New Hampshire, and rose to be manager of an extensive system of stage lines leading from Boston through New Hampshire and Vermont into Canada. In 1842 he entered, with others, into the express business, between Boston and Montreal, and gradually built up a vast system of express routes owned by the United States & Canada Express Company, which in 1879 was merged into the American Express Company, in which he was the largest stockholder and served for several years as director and treasurer. He amassed a large fortune, was interested in other express companies, in railroads, and in financial corporations, and acquired an influential position in business and financial circles. He was a generous benefactor of Dartmouth College, from which he received in 1880 the honorary degree of Master of Arts, and a liberal contributor to charitable and public objects. He was a life member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society from 1870 on, and a brief memoir of him, by the late Rev. Charles Henry Pope, A.M., with his line of descent from John[1] Cheney and a more detailed account of his career, may be found in the Register, vol. 50, pp. 95–96, and in "Memorial Biographies of the New England Historic Genealogical Society," vol. 9, pp. 275–277.

After Mr. Cheney's death Mrs. Cheney continued his philanthropic activities and contributed largely to organized and unorganized charities in Boston and at Peterborough, N. H., where she had a second country residence besides the Dover estate, and where she was, in the last five years of her life, especially interested in the construction of a hospital in memory of her husband, her last gift to the New Hampshire town. She did not live, as she desired, to see it finished, but in two codicils to her will she provided for the completion of the work. In 1907, on her election to membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society, the Council placed her name on the roll of life members, in recognition of her generosity in giving to the Society one hundred and seventy copies of Pope's "Pioneers of Massachusetts," the proceeds from the sales of which form the Cheney Memorial Book Fund, the Ebenezer[6] Clapp, the compiler of this book, who was a resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society from 1871 to his death, 12 June 1881, was an uncle of Mrs. Cheney, and the late Henry Austin Clapp, A.B. Mr. and Mrs. Cheney were the parents of the following five children: 1. Benjamin Pierce Cheney, Jr., of Boston, A.B. (Harvard, 1890), who married at Covington, Ky., 23 February 1898, Ida Lewis, known on the stage as Julia Arthur. 2. Alice Steele Cheney, now Mrs. William Hewson Baltzell of "Elm Bank," Wellesley. 3. Charles Paine Cheney, A.B. (Harvard, 1892), who married at New Britain, Conn., 27 April 1893, Mary Ward Lyon, and died at Colorado Springs, Colo., 3 February 1897, leaving three children; his elder son, Charles Ward Cheney, A.B. (Harvard, 1915), served in the World War in the American Expeditionary Forces, going overseas as a private in the Fourteenth Engineers and being promoted to the rank of second lieutenant of Engineers and later to that of first lieutenant, before his return to the United States, while his younger son and third child, William Halsall Cheney, A.B. (Harvard war degree, posthumous, 1920), went overseas in the World War as a sergeant in the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, was commissioned as first lieutenant, Aviation Section, and was killed in an airplane accident at Foggia, Italy, 20 January 1918. 4. Mary Cheney, now Mrs. Arthur E. Davis of "Greystone Farm," Dover, Mass. 5. Elizabeth Cheney, now Mrs. Carl Frederick Kaufmann of Boston.

Professor Smith was assisted by members of the Choral Art Society of the Boston University School of Theology and School of Religious Education and Social Service, with Mr. Gladstone Jackson as tenor soloist and Miss Grace M. At the request of the President, the Recording Secretary read a letter from the President of the Tokyo Imperial University, dated 6 November 1923 and addressed to the President of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, in which the help of this Society and of kindred organizations was asked in securing gifts of books for the library of the Tokyo University, to replace books destroyed at the time of the recent terrible earthquake in Japan.

NOTES

It having come to the attention of this Society that certain genealogists and publishers have used the name of the Society in connection with their own enterprises, the Society again desires to state that it has NO genealogical representatives in this country or in England, nor is it in any way connected with any publications other than those that it issues over its own name at 9 Ashburton Place, Boston.

Captain Lowell's Company of Matrosses, 1778. — By order of the General Court of Massachusetts, 12 Mar. 1778, a company of matrosses was authorized, to consist of 80 men and to be stationed at Falmouth and Cape Elizabeth, Me., until 1 Jan. 1779.

In 1830 Enoch Morse of Cumberland Co., Me., applied for a pension on account of service in this company, of which Abner Lowell was captain, William McLellan lieutenant, and Dudley Cammett ensign. Lieutenant McLellan served but six months, and was succeeded by Peter Merrill. Although several men testified to the same service, the existence of the company could not be proved, as no list of the company could be found in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Morse's application, therefore, was not granted, and he died in 1836.

In 1848 Happy Morse, widow of Enoch Morse, applied for a pension on the record of service previously claimed by her husband. Among the depositions in this case is one made by Enoch Moody of Portland, Me., who states that he was administrator of the estate of his father, William Moody, reputed to have been a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and that he found numerous papers among his father's effects. He continues: "On one of the papers found among the memoranda of my father relating to his military services, I find the following list of soldiers which I have no doubt were the non-commissioned officers and soldiers of Captain Lowell's Company in 1778." The names given by him are as follows:

Micah Sampson	Joseph Sylvester	Nathaniel Moody, Jr.
Harrison Brasier	Joseph Morse	Nathaniel Walker
John Clough	Enoch Morse	John Gooding, Jr.
William Moody	John Gooding	Elisha Turner
Robert Hilborn	Benjamin Stevens	Nehemiah Burnham
John Ramsey	Joseph Challis	Moses Brazier
Daniel Tucker	John Swan	James Knight
Nathaniel Moody	Josiah Shaw	Charles Hossack
Daniel Cobb	Benjamin Massey	Henry Wheeler
Peter Merrill	Robt. Page	Wm. Pittman
Saml Proctor	Daniel Marble	Thomas Cammet
William Jenks	Saml Gookin	Saml Bradbury
Paul Cammett	John Pettengill	Saml Lowell
Saml Hodgkins	James Cox	Danl Brooks
Saml Tobie	Joshua Ilsler	Josiah Haskell
John McFarland	Moses Noyes	Danl Freeman
Joseph Thomas

Other depositions in this case were made by Daniel Cobb, Joseph Thomas, and Josiah Haskell, all of whom testified to service in Capt. Abner Lowell's company, of which Enoch Morse was a member. Robert Hilborn and Daniel Brooks are mentioned as being of the company.

Others who knew of the company and its men while they were in service were Rev. Elijah Kellogg, Elias Thomas, Joshua Lowell, Silas Howell, and David Ross, who testified from 1832 to 1835.

The data given above were taken in January 1924 from the papers pertaining to the pension applications of Enoch and Happy (Thomas) Morse.

Historical Intelligence

HERALDRY. — The Committee on Heraldry of the New England Historic Genealogical Society strongly recommends that all coats of arms which can be proved to be authentic be offered for record with this Society. The arrangements for the making and preservation of such records are complete, and the volume of recorded arms has been begun by the entry therein of a number of well-authenticated coats. Printed forms and directions for the making of applications may be obtained from the Committee, and all communications on this subject should be addressed to the Committee on Heraldry, New England Historic Genealogical Society, 9 Ashburton Place, Boston.

Without taking any position with reference to the propriety of assuming arms, the Committee will be glad to examine arms or heraldic devices which any person or organization desires to assume, and give advice as to whether the same are heraldically correct or whether they violate a right of exclusive use heretofore acquired by others.

HONORS AND KNIGHTS' FEES. — All students of the history, topography, and genealogy of mediæval England will welcome the first volume of a most valuable contribution to mediæval local history, by William Farrer, Litt.D., entitled "Honors and Knights' Fees," printed in 1923 for the author by Spottiswoode, Ballantyne & Company, Ltd., of London. The fact that the book has been written by Mr. Farrer, the noted student of Norman England, is sufficient to vouch for its value. In it the author has undertaken an entirely new treatment of local topography, for instead of treating the subject of local history geographically he approaches it from the feudal unit of the fee. In this way he clears up many points that a county historian, writing from the point of view of the parish as a unit, could never do.

Mr. Farrer starts with the great fiefs of the Domesday Book that afterwards became honors, and traces the history of each fee held in them by the various subtenants down to the reign of Edward I. Among the important fees treated in the first volume are those of Peverel, Wahull, Bidun, and Curcy. The work represents a vast amount of careful, scholarly labor, and is supplied with an excellent index. The second volume will appear soon.

Records at Dublin, Ireland. — In a letter recently received by Mr. Charles Knowles Bolton, Librarian of the Boston Athenæum, Miss J. O'Farrell, a record agent of Dublin, gives the following information about the records that are still available in genealogical research there, in spite of the losses suffered in the political disturbances not long ago.

"The Registry of Deeds is quite intact. It contains registrations of marriage settlements, leases of lands, and a few wills, all dating from 1708. Then the Ulster Office of Arms is also intact, and there are numerous manuscripts relating to genealogy in the library of Trinity College. There are also numbers of parish registers still retained in the custody of many Protestant churches; but, in cases where the registers had been sent to the Public Record Office, they have been destroyed. In fact, everything which existed in that office is gone, except a few documents in which there is no continuity. The memorials in the Registry of Deeds are of great help, when lands have been held by families, as they show the names of the families that held them at different times. There is, however, more trouble now in compiling a family history than formerly."

Nebraska Genealogical Society. — The Nebraska Genealogical Society, of Lincoln, Nebr., has emerged from its period of organization and is now at work in earnest. It is publishing a quarterly magazine, The Nebraska and Midwest Genealogical Record, which is now in its second year, and is endeavoring to increase its membership, gather a genealogical library, and secure endowment funds. Donations of books for its library will be appreciated, and should be sent to Miss Mabel Lindley, Secretary, 1715 South 20th Street, Lincoln, Nebr.

Warren County, Pa. — A department devoted to the history and genealogy of Warren County, Pa., is published in each number of The Sheffield Observer, a weekly newspaper. Correspondence should be addressed to Byron B. Horton, Sheffield, Pa., who has charge of this department.

Genealogies in Preparation. — Persons of the several names are advised to furnish the compilers of these genealogies with records of their own families and other information which they think may be useful. We would suggest that all facts of interest illustrating family history or character be communicated, especially service under the United States Government, the holding of other offices, graduation from college or professional schools, and occupation, with places and dates of birth, marriage, residence, and death. All names should be given in full if possible. No initials should be used when the full name is known.

Coney. — John, baptized at Boston, co. Lincoln, England, 17 June 1628, the son of John and Elizabeth (Hawkredd) Coney, the English ancestry having been traced, died in Boston, Mass., 24 Dec. 1690, by Mrs. Mary Lovering Holman, 39 Winsor Avenue, Watertown, Mass.

D'Entremont. — Sieur Philippe Mius, born in France in 1601, according to historians, his French ancestry having been traced, died at Pubnico or Port Royal (now Annapolis), Nova Scotia, in 1700, by H. Leander d'Entremont, P. O. Box 135, Peabody, Mass.

Jennison. — Robert, born at Colchester, co. Essex, England, in 1607, came to New England in 1630, by H. L. Jennison, 625 Linn Avenue, Portland, Oreg.

Murdock. — Robert, of Newton, Mass., born in 1665, died in 1754, by Rear Admiral Joseph Ballard Murdock, U. S. N., Retired, Danbury, N. H.

WILLIAM STREETER RICHARDSON

By Robert Dickson Weston, A.B., of Cambridge, Mass.

William Streeter Richardson, a resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society since 1906, a life member since 1911, and a generous benefactor of the Society, who gave to its affairs much time and thought while he lived, and left it a substantial bequest by will, died at his home in that part of the town of Canton, Mass., called Ponkapog, on 6 October 1923.

Mr. Richardson was born at 60 Allen Street, Boston, on 12 February 1852, and, therefore, was in the seventy-second year of his age when he died. On his thirty-eighth birthday, 12 February 1890, he had married Martha, a daughter of William Woodman of Fryeburg, Me., and a sister of Mrs. Thomas Bailey Aldrich. His wife had died twelve years later, in November 1902, leaving him at the age of fifty a widower and childless. In the years following the death of his wife he not only became an active member of this Society, but joined several social clubs: the St. Botolph, the Boston Art, and the Boston City Clubs. He also joined several patriotic societies: the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Wars, the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, and the Sulgrave Institution. Like a good Bostonian, he bought a share in the Boston Athenæum.

His immigrant ancestor in the paternal line was William[1] Richardson of Newbury, Mass., who was born in England about 1620, came to New England before 1642, married Elizabeth Wiseman in 1654, and died 25 March 1658. Between this immigrant ancestor and a descendant born in 1852 we should expect to find eight or nine generations, but our William Streeter was only sixth in descent from the first William of Newbury. The line runs thus: Sergt. Joseph[2] of West Newbury, born 18 May 1655; Caleb[3] of Newbury and Methuen, Mass., born 29 June 1704; Parker,[4] born at Methuen 7 March 1738; Bill[5] (sic), born at Methuen 12 June 1784, later of South Reading, Mass., and Boston; William Larkin,[6] born in Boston 12 April 1811; and William Streeter,[7] born 12 February 1852. Only one in this line (Parker) saw the light before his father was thirty, and three were born to fathers over forty years of age. These Richardsons of Methuen were sturdy yeomen, who tilled their own farms, built substantial houses, and left small estates.

William Streeter Richardson's mother was a daughter of Rev. Sebastian Streeter, for forty years pastor of the First Universalist Church in Boston. He had been a pioneer preacher of the Universalist faith, was a man of great eloquence, and was much beloved by his numerous followers. It seems likely that Mr. Richardson inherited many of his tastes and aptitudes from this reverend gentleman. He died in 1867, at the age of eighty-four, and was buried in Mount Auburn, where his monument stands. His wife was Ruth Richardson, a daughter of one Wyman Richardson, descended from the Richardsons and Wymans of Woburn, Mass. She survived Rev. Sebastian ten years, and died at the age of ninety. Her portrait shows a woman of extraordinary dignity and beauty. The Richardson and Wyman immigrants from whom she was descended both came from West Mill, Hertfordshire, England, a place that Mr. Richardson visited a few years ago, taking photographs of the village and of the old church where these progenitors of his had worshipped.

The line of his descent which specially aroused Mr. Richardson's romantic interest — I use the expression advisedly, because, if it excited his pride or vanity, the fact was cunningly concealed — was the Bulkeley line. His grandmother, the wife of Bill Richardson, was Elizabeth, the daughter of a soldier in the Revolution, Benjamin Badger by name, who lived at South Reading. Benjamin's wife was Naomi, the daughter of Joseph Emerson of Reading and Lynn, Mass. Their son, a brother of Elizabeth (Badger) Richardson, was the well-known portrait painter, Thomas Badger. Naomi's father, Joseph Emerson, was a great-grandson of Thomas Emerson of Bishops-Stortford, Hertfordshire, who was baptized there 26 July 1584 and emigrated to Ipswich, Mass., in 1638. He brought with him a son, Joseph, who also had been baptized at Bishops-Stortford and was Naomi's great-grandfather. He became the Rev. Joseph Emerson, and in 1665 married Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Edward Bulkeley of Concord, Mass., a son of Rev. Peter Bulkeley, the first minister of the church at Concord, who in Old England had succeeded his father, Rev. Edward Bulkeley, D.D., as rector of the parish of Odell in Bedfordshire and after serving there for a number of years had been ejected by Archbishop Laud. It is worth noting that Rev. Joseph Emerson and his wife, Elizabeth Bulkeley, were the great-great-great-grandparents of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The Bulkeleys of Odell were descended from Robert de Bulkeley, lord of the manor of Bulkeley in the county of Chester, who flourished at the end of the twelfth century. They were an ancient feudal family, and through their marriages Mr. Richardson could trace his descent from many a noble and knightly race. Thomas Bulkeley of Woore, who died in 1591, was the grandfather of Rev. Edward. He and his wife, Elizabeth Grosvenor, were buried in the church of Market Drayton, where their tablets can still be seen. This lady was a great-great-granddaughter of that Sir Robert le Grosvenor who was the respondent in the famous case of Scrope v. Grosvenor, in which the right to bear "Azure, a bend or" was tried in the Earl Marshal's Court. The poet Chaucer testified as a witness in this cause, the decision of which appears to have turned on which of the two families had been the first to assume that device. The case was decided in favor of Scrope. Consequently, the Grosvenors abandoned the "bend or." They have since used "Azure, a garb or," as in the arms of the present Dukes of Westminster, descended from the same Sir Robert through a brother of that Thomas Grosvenor of Drayton who was the great-grandfather of Elizabeth Grosvenor, wife of Thomas Bulkeley of Woore. I was amused to see in an English paper several years ago that His Grace the Duke of Westminster owned a horse that ran in one of the great races and that bore the name of "Bend Or," reminiscent of the arms anciently borne by the Grosvenors and of the controversy between Sir Robert le Grosvenor and Sir Richard le Scrope. Through Elizabeth Grosvenor Mr. Richardson inherited some of the proudest blood in England — that of the Charltons, Lords of Powys, the Mortimers, the Braoses, the Genevills, the Warrens, the Clares, Lacys, Audleys, Mainwarings, the Lords Zouche of Ashby, the Malpases, Staffords, Bassets, Corbets of Caus, Chetwynds, Peshalls, and Mascys. The list could be extended indefinitely.

In a big book which I have before me Mr. Richardson had written out his lines of descent from these and many other Norman families, and had illustrated the text with photographs of the castles they had built or held, the great houses in which they had dwelt, the abbeys they had founded, and the tombs where they had been buried. It is a fascinating record. Great was the pleasure he found in travelling through England and taking these pictures, which are not only beautiful in themselves but show the wealth and power of men who were his far distant kin. So long ago did many of them live that by this time they probably have thousands of descendants. Their blood, for what it may be worth, is part of the common heritage of Englishmen. But the following up of these lines appealed strongly to Mr. Richardson's poetic fancy and his romantic sentiment. He loved to think that these roots of his lay deep in the soil of Old England, and to trace them as far as they could be traced, even to the point where they had become the tiniest fibres contributing only infinitesimal amounts to the blood that flowed in his own veins.

Although I was closely associated with him for ten years in the Committee on Heraldry, and although he had illuminated the book of which I speak with the shields of arms belonging to many of the great families whom he could claim as kindred, he almost never mentioned the subject. I had to wait until after his death before I had an opportunity to examine records to which he had devoted so much time and thought. There was, to be sure, lying on his table a cigarette box that he had decorated with the Lacy, Clare, Audley, and Stafford shields, the gold garb of Grosvenor, and the silver bulls' heads of Bulkeley. I had painted for him the arms of Mascy and Genevill, and knew that he believed himself descended through Rev. Edward Bulkeley from all these great Norman families, but how, he never saw fit to disclose. These records of his were not made to be paraded publicly, but to be cherished privately. In respect to them he was singularly reticent.

It should be observed that his attitude towards the efforts of others to prove their descent from people of consequence in their day and generation was always generous. He begrudged no one success. On the contrary, it would have gratified him immensely if every one of us had been able to trace emigrant ancestors back to families of landed gentry or to noble Norman houses. From his point of view social position in the Old World had usually been gained by some sort of moral or intellectual superiority, and he liked to believe that the men who settled New England had drawn a substantial part of their strength from the upper and middle classes of English society.

The leisure and the means for indulging in pursuits of the kind I have described came to Mr. Richardson in the latter part of his life. His father had died in 1853, less than four years after his marriage, and about a year and a half after the birth of his only son. The widow was by no means rich, but was possessed of property sufficient to live on and to give her boy a college education. He had been partially prepared for college at the Allen English and Classical School at West Newton, had gone abroad with his mother to study music and languages, and was engaged in these studies at Dresden when a calamity befell them which threw his mother on the charity of her relatives and the young man on his own resources. A dishonest trustee had made away with all their property. The hope of a college education and of any career that a college education might have opened for him was gone. The years from the early seventies until his marriage in 1890 were years of poverty and struggle.

Possessed, as he was, of strong musical, literary, and dramatic tastes, and interested, as he seemed to many of us, only in subjects far removed from the mechanical, practical, and gainful, we cannot but be surprised to learn that he made his fortune by inventing a useful mechanical device and by manufacturing and marketing on a large scale articles that embodied his invention. Singularly enough, the Mr. Richardson we knew had fifty years ago conceived the idea of the familiar fastener, such as we find on our gloves, with its "bird-cage resilient ball," that snaps into a little socket. Hundreds of different uses for this device have gradually been discovered. The fruits of an invention are not always enjoyed by the inventor, and Mr. Richardson may not have enjoyed all the fruits that grew from his invention, but a goodly portion of them he himself gathered. In spite of many vicissitudes, in spite of the difficulties which as a poor young man he encountered in getting the value of his fasteners recognized and in obtaining the capital needed to manufacture and sell them, success was finally achieved. The Ball and Socket Fastener Company, which he had established, with a factory at Cheshire, Conn., and of which he was president, began to do a profitable business. In spite of a long, fierce patent suit brought and carried on by him in the nineties against an alleged infringer of his patents, a peaceful union of hostile interests was effected in a new corporation organized in 1901 and known as the United States Fastener Company. In this corporation he owned a large interest, and was its treasurer from the time it was organized until his death. Its business has always been profitable. The income which he derived from his old company and from the new was considerable. After 1901 he enjoyed ample means.

As a man of affairs he was of great service to the Society. He served as a member of the Committee on Ways and Means in 1913 and as a member of that committee and its chairman during the year 1915 and every year thereafter until his death; as chairman of the Committee on Sale of Publications for three years, 1914, 1915, and 1916; as a member of the Committee on Finance for the three years 1916, 1917, and 1918; as a member of the Council for the year 1915, when he was elected to fill a vacancy, and also for a full term covering the three following years; as a member of the Special Committee on Endowment and Members for the years 1919 to 1922 (both inclusive), until that committee went out of existence; and as a member of the Committee on Increase of Membership for the year 1923. Nor was the Society the only public institution that profited by his business experience and sagacity. He was for many years a trustee of the Massachusetts Homœopathic Hospital.

While Mr. Richardson was serving this Society on committees whose duty it was to guide its prudential affairs, he was also serving on two other committees which had to deal with matters of a very different sort. In 1913, when the Committee on Heraldry was increased from three to five, he was appointed a member and acted as its secretary until his death. To the work of this committee he gave an immense deal of time, an infinite amount of care, tact, and patience, and an enthusiasm which, notwithstanding his increasing infirmities, never abated. During 1922 and 1923 he was a most useful member of the Special Committee on Mural Memorials, and took great interest in making the Lincoln tablet a worthy memorial and in arranging the exercises for its unveiling. Mr. Richardson and I waited on Rev. Charles Edwards Park, D.D., and invited him to deliver the principal address on that occasion. Mr. Richardson was not a member of Dr. Park's church, or of any other church, and one strange outcome of this acquaintance, so brief and so casual, was that not many months later Dr. Park was the clergyman who conducted Mr. Richardson's funeral service in the chapel at Mount Auburn.

There is a wide difference between the qualities that made Mr. Richardson a useful member of the Society's Committee on Finance and those that made him a useful member of its Committee on Heraldry. His capacity to serve on both committees points to a striking peculiarity of his character. We often meet a man who possesses tastes or interests that are widely divergent and seemingly incongruous. Seldom, however, do we meet one whose thoughts flow in two channels so clearly defined as those in which Mr. Richardson's flowed, with so little intercommunication and in directions so contrary. He was two distinct persons, one mechanical and practical, the other artistic, literary, and romantic. I imagine that those who met him in business knew little of the romantic side of his nature, and I am sure that those who met him in the Committee on Heraldry were at most only dimly aware that he had ever given any serious attention to the making of money. They met a man whose mind appeared to be filled completely with music, art, literature of the imagination, and with that poetry, romance, and sentiment — some may term it whimsical and fantastic sentiment — to which shields of arms as the quaint, picturesque, and time-honored symbols of family stocks make their appeal.

We have seen that as a very young man Mr. Richardson went abroad partly to study music. He was no musician, but would play classical music on his pianola by the hour. He enjoyed pictures, and found a keen delight in the decorative part of heraldry. One form of art in which he was especially interested was dramatic art. He had more than dabbled in acting himself. In his early years, when struggling with his invention, he had engaged frequently in private theatricals. In February 1878 he took the part of Rip Van Winkle at the Globe Theatre in a performance given in aid of the American Society for the Elevation of the Stage. A newspaper of that time tells us that "a larger or more fashionable audience" had "rarely been gathered in the Globe Theatre;" that Mr. Richardson, "in the title rôle, surprised everyone by the ease and grace of his delineation, and by its fidelity to Mr. Jefferson's interpretation of the same character. It was not a burlesque, but a faithful copy of a great original. Indeed, throughout, Mr. Richardson did not suggest the novice, but rather implied that he was an experienced performer. . . . Certainly his powers of mimicry and observation are of no ordinary character, and his effort fully deserved the enthusiastic applause with which it was received." The dramatic critics of that day were nearly unanimous in praising the performance in similar terms. In the following year (1879) he went to Rhode Island, and with professional support acted the same part again in the Providence Opera House, this time to smaller audiences, but with equal praise from the critics.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich and Mrs. Aldrich were interested in the stage and in theatrical people. Mr. Richardson's accomplishments as an amateur actor led to an intimate acquaintance with the Aldriches and with Mrs. Aldrich's sister, whom after a protracted engagement he was at last able to marry. At their house he enjoyed meeting socially many distinguished actors and actresses — Jefferson, the "great original" he had so faithfully copied, Booth, Irving, Barrett, Mrs. Kendall, and others.

While he was acting he was also writing. He wrote a farce entitled "A Moment Too Late," which was acted in the City Hall at West Newton. I suspect that he himself took the leading part of Mr. Jingleton Breathless, though the programme before me does not give the names of the actors. And for some years he contributed to the newspapers bright stories and little poems, both sentimental and satirical. But these literary avocations, as well as acting, seem to have been abandoned as his business affairs assumed more importance. Manufacturing and litigation soon occupied too much of his time and put too heavy a tax on his energies to permit of recreations that required mental effort as well as leisure.

The cares of business, however, did not prevent him from enjoying books. It was natural that he should have been especially fond of dramatic and narrative literature. Shakespeare, Dickens, and Stevenson were his favorite authors — especially Stevenson. A tale well told moved him profoundly and afforded him exquisite pleasure. His taste was discriminating. He loved to dwell on a happy phrase or turn of thought.

Mr. Richardson was a lover of symbols. For him they lent color, poetry, and richness to life. They excited his imagination, stirred his emotions, called back the past. They spoke to his mind by their forms and colors through the eye, just as did music through the ear. What some symbols mean to "the general" all symbols meant to him. The cross appeals to all Christians as the symbol of their religion, the flag to all patriots as the symbol of their country. Religion and country are, of course, big things of the utmost importance, but little and unimportant things may have their symbols too. It is not difficult to perceive how a symbol of anything worth thinking about at all may by its form, its color, or its associations stimulate men's thoughts and arouse in them the feelings that the thing itself ought to arouse. Why, even the smell of a piece of tarred paper brings vividly before me to-day my grandmother's store closet, the shelves of which used to be covered with the stuff in order to keep away the ants. It afforded no protection, however, against the depredations of a small boy, and the smell of it still excites some of the sweetest recollections of my boyhood. A smell, a knickknack, an inarticulate sound, may in the twinkling of an eye present to the mind a better picture or arouse stronger emotions than pages of description or hours of eloquent speech. Men being what they are, it is folly for us to deny the power of symbols or shut our eyes to their charm. Mr. Richardson felt their influence more keenly, was more susceptible to their allurements, and in respect to this susceptibility of his was more simple-minded and outspoken than most of his fellows. To those who cannot comprehend these characteristics of the man, many of his tastes, interests, and pursuits must remain a mystery.

I have already remarked that a coat of arms was to him a picturesque symbol of a family stock. As such it interested him in proportion to the greatness and the worth of the men who had borne it. A coat of arms is sometimes called an "achievement," and he liked to fancy that this name had been given to it because it was the sign and emblem of what had been achieved by the man who had assumed it originally and by all his descendants who had borne or worn or used it since. A piece of eight served him as a symbol of "Treasure Island," one of his favorite stories, and he had found an old piece of eight and had had it set in the cover of his copy of the book. This he showed to me with boyish pleasure. He regretted the disappearance of the wooden Indian of the tobacconist and the pestle and mortar of the apothecary. The Indian had recalled the story of how Raleigh had found the red men smoking tobacco and had introduced the plant for weal or woe to the attention of his countrymen. The pestle and mortar said plainly that the doctor's prescription would be filled within. These signs spoke a language that Mr. Richardson liked better than the language of our commonplace printed words. He took great satisfaction in the insignia adopted and worn by the different divisions of our army in the Great War whenever those insignia happened to be appropriate and well designed. They proved that most men felt the influence of a symbol just as he himself felt it. They were nothing but the heraldic badges of feudal times put to a modern use. His imagination told him how full of meaning and inspiration the insignia of a division might become.

Mr. Richardson's face and figure, his dress, his manner, his speech, and the tones of his voice were all those of a shy, scholarly gentleman of literature and leisure. Nothing about him suggested the active man of business. He was pale, spare, and of about the medium height. Although it was obvious that his health was delicate, he never stooped or slouched, but walked with a firm, neat step, holding himself erect. His features were clean cut and expressive. In talking he employed facial expression to an unusual extent without much gesticulation. He dressed with care, but not in a way to attract attention. His clothes were the conventional clothes of his time. His manner, however, was that of two generations ago. It was noticeably more formal and more courteous than the ordinary manner of to-day.

His old-fashioned courtesy was especially conspicuous when he welcomed his friends to the snug little house in Pinckney Street where he lived with his devoted domestics. Their devotion was natural, for he showed them a degree of consideration equal to that which he showed his guests. His house, whether in Pinckney Street, or at Ponkapog, where he lived in the spring and autumn, or on the coast of Maine, where he spent his summers, was a delightful place to visit. The Committee on Heraldry usually met at the Pinckney Street house. There they always had afternoon tea and occasionally dined. The small but comfortable living room, with its books, its pictures of actors and actresses, its open fire, and above all the graciousness of their host, will be remembered fondly by them all. Yet, for the most part, he led a lonely life. He did not mingle easily with other men. He did not make many friends, and the hospitality which he extended to the members of the committee and which they enjoyed so much, was seldom extended to others.

His conversation at our meetings, or when he was talking with one other person, was uncommonly agreeable. He made just that amount of effort to convey his meaning in well-chosen words that flatters the person addressed without giving him an unpleasant impression that the speaker is straining for effect. He took the same pains to talk well, or write a letter well, that our grandfathers took. He seemed to feel that true politeness demanded this effort. It was of a piece with his old-fashioned courtesy. His talk, like his manner, belonged to a generation that has passed.

The range of subjects about which he discoursed or chatted was wide. I have dwelt so much on the romantic and sentimental side of his character that one might infer that romance and sentiment absorbed his thoughts. Nothing could be further from the truth. He loved them both, but was not dominated by them. They never carried him away. His feet were always on the ground. A hard New England common sense guided him to his conclusions and determined his actions. He was sentimental, but no sentimentalist, romantic, but no romancer. To sense and sensibility he attached the degree of importance that each deserves. This is illustrated by the relative proportions of the gifts to charities made by his will and by the form of his bequest to this Society. A great hospital was the principal object of his bounty. He gave the Massachusetts Homœopathic Hospital seventy-five thousand dollars on reasonable conditions, and, if the conditions were not complied with, then over in equal shares to Harvard College and the Sulgrave Institution; and he left this Society fifteen thousand dollars — ten thousand for its general purposes and five thousand for English research. Although the discovery of the birthplace and ancestry of any of our early settlers, making as it does one more definite tie between our New England and the England of Shakespeare, Milton, and Hampden, possessed for him a very high degree of sentimental value, and although his interest in English research was consequently very keen, he saw clearly that the general purposes of the Society were of greater moment, and he governed himself accordingly.

Helpful to the Society as such a gift must be, it does not begin to make good the loss that the Society sustained when he died. The wisdom he brought to its councils, the enthusiasm he inspired in its officers and members, were priceless. By all who had the good fortune to work with him on any business that concerned the Society's welfare he will ever be remembered with deep respect and warm affection.

JOHN WINCHESTER OF NEW ENGLAND AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS

By Henry Winchester Cunningham, A.B., of Milton, Mass.

32. Lieut. William[5] Winchester (John,[4] John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), of Reading and Southborough, cordwainer, miller, born, probably at Brookline, though possibly at Reading, 25 Apr. 1733, died at Southborough 19 July 1807. He married at Reading, about 1755, Hannah (Parker) Bancroft, daughter of Ebenezer and Harriet (Green) Parker and widow of Jacob Bancroft of Reading. She passed her last days with her son William at Leverett, where she died 21 Apr. 1823, aged 95, having been blind for twenty years.

William Winchester's father died when he was five years old, and he lived in childhood and young manhood with his mother at Reading. He removed to Southborough between 1760 and 1762. He inherited the military instincts of his grandfather, Capt. John[3] Winchester (5), and had long and active service in the Revolution, from his march on the Lexington alarm, as a lieutenant in the Battle of Bunker Hill, and down to May 1780, serving mostly as a first lieutenant.

Children:

i. Elizabeth,[6] b. at Reading 22 Sept. 1757; m. at Southborough, 24 Apr. 1777, Daniel Morse of Southborough.

73. ii. William, b., probably at Reading, in 1759 and bapt. at Lynnfield (then the Second Parish of Lynn) 10 Feb. 1760.

iii. Mehitable, b. about 1760; d. at Westborough about 1819; m. in 1790 Samuel Kingsbury of Dedham.

74. iv. Jacob Bancroft, b. at Southborough 6 July 1762.

v. John, b. at Southborough 5 Oct. 1764; d. young.

75. vi. John, b. at Southborough 6 July 1769.

vii. Submit, b. at Southborough 13 Jan. 1772; d. at Westborough in 1867, aged 95; m. 10 Oct. 1799 Job Newton.

viii. Bridget, b. at Southborough 8 June 1773; d. at Stow in 1867, aged 94; m. in 1790 Zacheus Robinson of Stow. Their descendants were prominent citizens of Brockton.

33. John[5] Winchester (Nathan,[4] John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), of Annapolis, N. S., farmer, born at Brookline 22 Sept. 1748, died at Annapolis 24 Jan. 1840, aged 92. He married, 17 Aug. 1781, Abigail Winslow, born in 1764, died 3 July 1843, daughter of John Howard and Abigail (Fenno) and sister of the Hannah Winslow who married his brother Josiah (34).

This is probably the man whom Sabine calls a Loyalist, but wrongly so, as he went to Nova Scotia fifteen years before the Revolution; and, as he was only twelve years of age at the time, Loyalist ideas could not have made much impression on him. Calnek, in his "History of Annapolis County," says that John lived on his father's place near Rosette, three miles from the town; but the father Nathan, in his will, bequeathed the life use of his real estate to his widow and after her to his son Isaac[5] (35). In his will, dated 24 Oct. 1839 and recorded 3 Feb. 1840, John is called "farmer" and "of Annapolis," and leaves the life use of his place to his widow, after her to his two unmarried children, John and Harriet, and then to his grandson, William Parks Winchester.

Children, born at Annapolis:

i. John,[6] of Annapolis, b. 11 Mar. 1783; died unm. 1 Feb. 1869. He lived with his sister Harriet.

ii. Beulah, b. 25 Dec. 1784; d. 9 or 28 Sept. 1814; m. Charles Halliday, and had issue.

76. iii. William, b. 2 Mar. 1789.

77. iv. James, b. 10 June 1791.

v. Maria, b. 15 July 1793; m. Artemus Odell.

vi. Abigail Fend, b. 22 May 1795; m. James W. Pratt. The copyist from the original records reported her middle name as "Fend," but it seems reasonable to think that it should have been read "Feno," as her grandmother was Abigail Fenno.

vii. Harriet, b. 12 Aug. 1797; d. unm. 26 Oct. 1874. She lived with her bachelor brother John.

34. Josiah[5] Winchester (Nathan,[4] John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), born, probably at Annapolis, N. S., after 1760, was probably dead in 1846, as he is not mentioned in his wife's will of that year. He married at Annapolis Hannah Winslow, born in 1766, died in 1846, daughter of John Howard and Abigail (Fenno) and sister of the Abigail Winslow who had married his brother John (33).

He settled on lands at the head of St. Mary's Bay, in Digby Co., N. S., where his descendants lived.

Children:*

i. Abigail,[6] m. Isaac Marshall.
ii. George Lefere, d. unm. He is not mentioned in his mother's will of 1846.
iii. Mary, b. in 1790; m. Capt. Benjamin Thurber.

vii. Amy, m. Gilbert Van Amburg. viii. Rachel, m. William Snow.
ix. William, m. Nancy Barnes.

35. Isaac[5] Winchester (Nathan,[4] John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), farmer, was born probably at Annapolis, N. S., about 1769 (in 1769, according to Calnek). Calnek states that he married, about 1801, Mary Morgan; but a grandson living in Massachusetts says that his wife was Elizabeth Kniffen of Bear River, N. S.

According to Calnek he was one of the early settlers in Clements, Annapolis Co., N. S., and some of his children and grandchildren lived there; but the grandson in Massachusetts states that Isaac lived at Smith's Cove, near Digby, N. S.

Children (as given by Calnek):†

i. Nancy,[6] m. (1) James Brown; m. (2) Jacob Roop.
ii. Sarah, m. in 1833 Edward Bryant.

iv. Margaret, d. unm. in 1855.
v. John, m. Mary Wade.
vi. Nathan, d. unm.
79. vii. Charles, b. in 1824. His mother was Elizabeth Kniffen.

36. Spencer[5] Winchester (Nathan,[4] John,[3] John,[2] John[1]) was born probably at Annapolis, N. S., about 1770. He married, 8 Mar. 1791, Frances Ann Emley, who died 24 July 1846, aged 72.

Calnek states that he was among the early settlers at Hillsburgh, N. S.,‡ and that his grandchildren were domiciled there; but he was certainly chosen a constable at Annapolis in 1797, and therefore must have been living there at that time.

Children:

i. Elizabeth Heming[6] (or Hanning), b. in 1791; m. 15 Sept. 1811 Thomas McCormick of Granville, N. S., b. in 1785.

80. iii. James Josiah (twin), b. at Annapolis 23 Jan. 1793.
iv. Thomas (twin), b. at Annapolis 23 Jan. 1793; d. unm.

*The statements about the children of Josiah[5] Winchester (34) have been taken almost entirely from Calnek's "History of Annapolis County."

†The baptismal register of Granville, N. S., gives the following three children of Isaac and Margaret Winchester, and the Isaac who is numbered 35 is the only Isaac in this branch at this period: 1. Anne, bapt. 20 Apr. 1794, aged 2 (?). 2. Charles, bapt. 8 Oct. 1797. 3. Sarah, bapt. 8 Sept. 1799.

‡The county of Digby was incorporated in 1837, being set off from Annapolis County. The division line ran through the town of Clements, and the part of Clements that was brought into the new county of Digby was called Hillsburgh.

x. Edward, d. unm.
xi. William, m. Eliza ———.*

37. William[5] Winchester (Nathan,[4] John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), of Granville, Annapolis Co., N. S., was born probably in Nova Scotia. He married at Granville, 30 Dec. 1790, Mary (Benson) Demont, daughter of Christopher Benson† and widow of William Demont.

Moses Winchester was a soldier in the Revolution in 1778, and in 1779 was one of the founders of the Baptist Church in the southwestern part of Hardwick. On 21 Apr. 1812 he conveyed his place in Hardwick, of about 95 acres, to his nephew Anson Winchester, who on the same day leased it to Moses and his wife during their lives.

39. Thomas[5] Winchester (Thomas,[4] Benjamin,[3] John,[2] John[1]), of Hardwick, born at Hardwick 9 Dec. 1763, died about 1812. *The Granville (N. S.) baptismal records do not mention several of the above-named children, but give in addition a Nathan, bapt. 25 Dec. 1792.

*There is a branch of the Winchester family who were pioneer settlers at Salt Lake City, Utah, and have excellent and carefully kept family records. They descend from a Benjamin Winchester of Vershire, Vt., who, they think, is identical with this Benjamin (41); but the writer, who has had extensive research made in Vermont, cannot reach the same conclusion. The records of the Utah branch of the family will be placed at the end of the genealogy.

†Walter Winchester of Shaftsbury, Vt., and Lydia Watson of Wardsboro, Vt., were married at Wardsboro 1 Apr. 1812. (Wardsboro records.)

He lived in the part of Brookline that is near Jamaica Plain, probably where his father lived. He served in the Revolution as a private in Capt. He was a soldier of the Revolution under Capt. Jonathan Gates at the Lexington alarm and again in Rhode Island in 1779. The historian of Ashburnham styles him "a man of unblemished character, modest and unassuming," and adds: "His life was a sermon of peace and good will to his fellow men."

It is said by one of his descendants that he was drowned in Boston Harbor by the capsizing of a boat, in which he was going from the city to Fort Independence, and it is believed that he was serving in the Navy at the time. He married at Bedford, 23 July 1797, being then of Watertown, ABIGAIL SIMONDS of Bedford, who lived at Templeton and Pepperell after her husband's death.

After his marriage he probably lived at Newton, where most, if not all, of his children were born, and then in Boston.

54. Edmund[5] Winchester (Stephen,[4] Stephen,[3] John,[2] John[1]), born at Newton 27 Mar. 1772, died in Boston 5 Feb. 1839. He married in Boston, 16 Oct. 1796, Prudence Skillings, baptized in Boston 28 Oct. 1770, died there 7 May 1834, daughter of John and Prudence (Clark) of Boston.

When he became of age, he left his father's farm in Newton and went into business in Boston, where he became a prosperous merchant. A few years later his brother Amasa joined him, later still his sons William P. and Stephen became his partners, and after that their two sons. He was the founder of the firm, well known in its day, of E. A. & W. Winchester, engaged in the wholesale provision and packing business, with a plant at Lechmere Point, East Cambridge. This was before the days of the huge establishments in the West; and the firm was one of the principal ones of its time and did a large domestic and export business. It supplied the United States Government with provisions during the War of 1812, when it was not easy for the Government to get credit. One of its by-products, the Winchester soap, was well known to the householders of New England in the first half of the nineteenth century.

He lived on Richmond Street, in the North End of Boston, and in 1820, 1821, and 1822 represented that part of the town in the Legislature; but he was essentially a business man and not an aspirant for public office. He was a director in the Merchants Bank of Boston. He was a man of ability and integrity, and was eminently successful in his large business enterprises. A pamphlet of 1840, containing sketches of the leading men of Boston, says: "Boston never had two better or more useful citizens than Edmund and Amasa Winchester." His portrait by Chester Harding shows him to have been a large, dark-complexioned man, with a massive head of hair and rather stern features, somewhat resembling Daniel Webster. This is reproduced as the frontispiece to "Winchester Notes," by Fanny Winchester Hotchkiss, published in 1912, to which reference is made for detailed sketches of this branch and related families and briefer sketches of other branches. The original portrait is now in Baltimore, in the Dana family, grandchildren of his daughter Nancy.

He married at Newton, 7 May 1800, Sally Fuller, born at Newton 9 Mar. 1781, died in Boston 9 Apr. 1846, daughter of Col. Josiah Fuller of Newton and his third wife, Mary (Trowbridge) (Dana), and sister of Anna Fuller, wife of his cousin, William Winchester (56).

Upon the death of his father in 1798 he inherited the homestead and real estate in Newton and Needham, as well as the personal estate, subject to the legacies to his brothers and sisters. He soon removed to Boston, and joined his brother Edmund in the wholesale packing and provision business, both domestic and for export. Like his brother, he became a successful and wealthy merchant. He lived on Somerset Street in Boston, and used the old place at Newton as a summer residence. He was an excellent musician, and did much for the advancement of the art in Boston. He was president of the Massachusetts Musical Society in 1809 and 1810 and one of the founders and for many years president of the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston. About 1833 he gave three-quarters of an acre of land for the enlargement of the South Burying Place in Newton.

He was living in Marlborough as early as 1752, when Steven Gibson of Stow was made his guardian. He served in the Revolution in 1776, in the company of Capt. Amasa Cranston of Marlborough. By his will his wife received the use and improvement of all his real and personal estate, and after her death it was to descend to his son Samuel, who was then to pay bequests to his three brothers, viz., to Caleb $80, to Stephen $50, and to William $80.

59. AMARIAH[5] WINCHESTER (Andrew,[4] Amariah,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at New London, Conn., 13 Feb. 1753, died at Hitchcock Corners, near Amenia, Dutchess Co., N. Y., 26 Mar. 1842. He married at New London, 25 Apr. 1781, MARY (FOLLETT) HATCH from Kent, Conn., born 4 Dec. 1759, died at Amenia 9 June 1832. She had gone with her first husband among the settlers to the Wyoming Valley, Pa., where he had been killed in the massacre of 1778, and she, a widow at nineteen, had escaped and made her way back to Connecticut.

Amariah Winchester served in the Revolution for seven months in the early part of 1775, as an orderly, and for one month in the winter of 1777–78, as a private. He married at Norwich, Conn., 17 Nov. 1778, LYDIA DODGE, who was born 18 May 1758 and survived her husband, daughter of John and Lydia (Rogers).

where he kept a public house near Elizabethtown, and was a shoemaker and worker in leather. He was a Baptist; and it is said that he was not a slaveholder, but hired negroes to work for him. It is said, also, that late in life he removed to Indiana, for a few years, but missed his old home in Kentucky and returned there. His wife, a devout woman of strength of body and mind, became blind late in life, because she used her eyes too much at night in work and study. She was also the tailoress to a pioneer community.

62. REV. ELHANAN[5] WINCHESTER (Dea. Elhanan,[4] Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 30 Sept. 1751, died at Hartford, Conn., 18 Apr. 1797, and is buried there. He married first, in Boston, in 1770, ALICE ROGERS of Rowley, who died at Fairfax, Va., in Apr. 1776, while her husband was preaching in South Carolina; secondly, in the North, in the autumn of 1776, SARAH PECK of Rehoboth, who died in South Carolina in 1777; thirdly, in 1778, SARAH LUKE, a young woman of his parish at Welch Neck, S. C., who died in 1779; fourthly MARY MORGAN of Philadelphia, Pa., widow, who died in 1783; and fifthly, about 1784, MARIA KNOWLES of Philadelphia, widow, who is said to have had an uncomfortable temper, the marriage proving to be an unhappy one.

He was a celebrated preacher, of precocity in his youth, of prodigious memory, and of great eloquence. He had little education, and was largely self-taught; but his acquisitive powers enabled him to acquire some knowledge of Latin, Greek, and even a little Hebrew, but mostly in connection with Biblical topics. His greatest power, however, lay in his eloquent preaching; and, as he seceded from the regular Calvinistic doctrines of New England, became a Baptist, first of open and then of close communion, and later, adopting the doctrine of universal restoration, a pioneer and founder of the Universalist Church, he was not in favor with the regular and college-bred ministers of the old school. Several excellent memoirs and lives of him have been written, which may be consulted for the details of his career; and an estimate of his character is found in the "Literary Diary of Rev. Ezra Stiles." He is regarded by the Universalists of to-day as one of the pillars of their faith. He preached at Rehoboth and Grafton, Mass., and in South Carolina, and was settled in 1780 over what became the First Universalist Church in Philadelphia, remaining there till 1787, when he went to London, England, where he preached till about 1794. He then left there, chiefly because of unfortunate troubles with his last wife, returned to America, and bought a small farm at Hartford, Conn., where he passed his last three years, preaching occasionally.

*A Joel Winchester and Peggy Larabee were married at Preston, Conn., 21 Feb. 1788; but a grandson of Joel (61) states that he never heard of this marriage, and perhaps the Joel who married Peggy Larabee was a son of Amariah[4] Winchester (25). Vide supra, 25, v.

He was the father of eight children, four by his first wife, two by his second wife, and two by his fourth wife. All these children were stillborn except one, a daughter by his first wife, viz., 63. Samuel[5] Winchester (Dea. Elhanan,[4] Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 11 Mar. 1753, died at Marcellus, N. Y., 11 Jan. 1823. He married first, 24 Jan. 1774, Rebecca Chubb, probably of Monson, Mass., where she died shortly after 20 Dec. 1794; secondly, in 1795, Elizabeth Twist, probably from Union, Conn., who must have died about 1798, in spite of a Monson record giving her death on 2 Apr. 1800; and thirdly, probably in 1799, Hannah Woods, born at Easton, Mass., 26 July 1778, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Ward (Winchester) Parker, in Erie Co., Pa., 4 Aug. 1858. After Samuel Winchester's death she married secondly, 15 Aug. 1826, Daniel Hartwell.

Samuel Winchester served in the Revolution in 1775 and again in 1777, being then called of Brookline and of Monson. He lived in the early part of his life in Brookline, but he seems to have had the spirit of a pioneer, for he made several moves during his life, each time further on to the frontier. His first move was to Monson, where he must have remained till after 1794. Then, after his second marriage, he moved up the Connecticut Valley to Chesterfield and Westmoreland, N. H. About 1805 he started west into New York State, stopping at Hamilton, Madison Co., and then going on to Marcellus, Onondaga Co., where he lived for the rest of his life.*

*A Samuel Winchester was selectman of South Brimfield, Mass., in 1800, and he may have been this Samuel (63), but this supposition hardly agrees with the reputed birthplace of a child in 1800; nevertheless, it may be correct.

He had a huge family — twenty-one children and over one hundred grandchildren, and has had more descendants than any member of his generation. They are scattered in various parts of the country, with large groups in southwestern New York, northwestern Pennsylvania, and Ohio.

He married there, 1 Jan. 1778, Eunice Smith, born at Brimfield in Aug. 1755, died at Westminster, Vt., 19 Dec. 1845, aged 90, daughter of Abraham of Brimfield. Her sister Mary married Jonathan's twin brother David (64).

He moved to Westmoreland, N. H., in 1775, and signed the New Hampshire Association Test of 12 June 1776. Like his brother David, he was a prosperous and excellent citizen of Westmoreland.

Children, born at Westmoreland:

He married at Wrentham, 1 May 1783, Sally King, born 11 Nov. 1761, died 10 July 1846, daughter of Samuel of that town.

He served in the Revolution from Brookline, and soon afterwards removed to Wrentham. About 1787 he removed, with his wife and children, to the Penobscot River, in Maine, and settled in that part of the town of Orrington which is now Holden.

67. Benjamin[5] Winchester (Dea. Elhanan,[4] Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 4 Jan. 1760, died at Harvard 24 Aug. 1845. He married first, 5 Jan. 1792, Abiah Alden, born 18 Apr. 1767, probably died about 1798, daughter of Josiah and Bathsheba (Jones) of South Brimfield and Ludlow and a descendant of John Alden of the Mayflower; and secondly, about 1799, her sister, Bathsheba (Alden) Trask, born 8 Dec. 1775, died at Harvard 29 Sept. 1841, whose first husband was John Trask of Monson.

About the time of his first marriage he moved to South Brimfield (now Wales), where he was selectman in 1800. In 1815 he and his wife and most of his children joined the Shaker colony in the town of Harvard, where they lived the rest of their lives. His father and others of his family were already members of that community.

Children by first wife, probably all born at South Brimfield:

i. Ruby,[6] b. 4 Oct. 1792; d. about 1863; m. Henry Damon (1775–1851) of Ludlow, where they lived, and left many descendants, some of whom are prominent residents of Cleveland, Ohio.

68. Rev. Moses[5] Winchester (Dea. Elhanan,[4] Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 24 Aug. 1763, died in Philadelphia, Pa., 17 Feb. 1793, in his 30th year. He married, about 1789, Sarah (Howell) (Dowdray) Young, daughter of Ebenezer and Sarah (Bond) Howell of Cumberland Co., N. J., and widow successively of John Dowdray and Jeremiah Young. Her brother, Richard Howell, was Governor of New Jersey from 1792 to 1801. After the death of her third husband, Rev. Moses Winchester, she married fourthly Joshua Ayers, whom she survived.

Moses Winchester entered the ministry in his 21st year, and in 1788 became pastor of the Baptist Church at Shiloh, in southern New Jersey; but in 1790 he, like his celebrated brother Elhanan, became a Universalist. He filled his brother's pulpit in Philadelphia, when the latter went to London, and was an agreeable helper in his work. His death was most painful. He had a tooth extracted, and in the operation a bone in his jaw was broken and the cavity became infected. This caused growths, that had to be removed several times, till finally they became so serious that they suffocated him.

Children, born probably at Shiloh, N. J.:

i. Branson[6] (twin), b. 22 Apr. 1790; d. unm. at Maysville, Ky. He followed the sea for some years, and then was in the iron business.

69. Aaron[5] Winchester (Dea. Elhanan,[4] Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), tanner and currier, born at Brookline 28 May* 1766, probably died in Ontario, Canada. He married at Woburn, 22 Apr. 1787, Sarah Cummings, daughter of David and Joanna (Jones), Sarah's father being one of the earliest tanners in that town.

In 1780 he joined the Baptist Church in Newton; but on 3 July 1785 he was warned by the church for adopting the doctrines of a heretic. In 1787 he removed to South Brimfield, where he lived till about 1804, when he is said to have moved to Canada. In 1877 grandchildren of his were living in or near London, in Ontario.

He had eight children, but the compiler of this genealogy has not been able to trace them, though the son William's daughter, Mrs. Jane Wilkinson, was living in Ontario in 1877.

Children, the first four recorded as born in South Brimfield, the last four also probably born there, although William's daughter gave his birthplace as Brookline:

i. Aaron,[6] b. 16 Nov. 1787.
ii. Moses, b. 28 Aug. 1789.
iii. Royal, b. 29 Jan. 1792.
iv. Edmond, b. 29 July 1794.

70. Daniel[5] Winchester (Dea. Elhanan,[4] Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Brookline 19 Mar. 1768, was drowned in the Androscoggin River, in central Maine, 23 Apr. 1795. He married in Boston, in 1787, Martha Pritchard, born 6 May 1768, died at the home of her son Benjamin P., at Corinna, Me., 15 May 1853, aged 85 years, 9 days, daughter of John and Lucy (Wood). She married secondly, 24 June 1825, as his third wife, John McLellan of Portland, Me., a retired sea captain.

Daniel Winchester joined the Baptist Church in Newton in 1780. At the time of his marriage he moved to what was later the town of Fayette, in central Maine, where he probably lived till his death, though he may have lived for a time in the neighboring town of Jay. Both of these were at that time pioneer plantations, and were not incorporated as towns till 1795. In Sept. 1795 his widow moved first to Freeport and then to North Yarmouth, Me., and in Apr. 1797 she moved to Portland, where she taught the Centre Free School till 1800. After the death of her second husband she went to live with her son Benjamin P. at Corinna, Me., where she spent the remainder of her days.

*Probably not 28 Mar., as was stated in the list of his father's children (supra, p. 27), although there is some authority for the date there given.

Children, probably all born at Fayette, Me.:

i. Betsey,[6] b. in 1787; d. about 1875, aged 87 years, 6 months; m. Samuel Ballard, Esq., who d. 18 Feb. 1841, aged 73. Residence, Wiscasset, Me.

71. Ebenezer[5] Winchester (Dea. Elhanan,[4] Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]) was born, probably at Brookline, about 1776. Where he lived and where and when he died has not been ascertained. He married in Boston, 27 July 1797, Elizabeth Jones, born 6 Oct. 1780, died among the Shakers at Harvard 17 Feb. 1861, aged 81, daughter of John, a distiller of Portsmouth, N. H.

Children:

i. Elvira,[6] b. 28 May 1799; d. unm. among the Shakers at Harvard 11 May 1824.

ii. Frederic, b. 12 Mar. 1801; d. unm. among the Shakers at Harvard 1 Oct. 1818.

iii. Susan, b. 15 Aug. 1803; d. unm. among the Shakers at Harvard 23 May 1820.

147. iv. Benjamin Franklin, b. 15 Apr. 1809.

72. Lemuel[5] Winchester (Isaac,[4] Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at Tewksbury 13 May 1740, died at Danvers 17 Jan. 1841, aged 100 years, 8 months, 4 days. He married first, at Reading, 28 Aug. 1766, Lydia Flint, born at Reading in Aug. 1743, died at Tewksbury 28 Mar. 1812; and secondly, at Danvers, 9 Jan. 1817, Mrs. Margaret Smith, who died there 26 Oct. 1841, aged 87.

A few years after his first marriage he moved to Amherst, N. H., and settled in that part of the town which is now the town of Mont Vernon. Here he lived till well advanced in age, when he returned to Massachusetts, and passed the remainder of his long life at Danvers. He served in the Revolutionary Army from New Hampshire, as a corporal and later as a sergeant; and in Colonel Reed's regiment took part in the Battle of Bunker Hill. In Apr. 1776 he signed the New Hampshire Association Test.

148. i. Lemuel,[6] b. in that part of Lynn which is now Lynnfield, 6 July 1768.

Bowditch

In the Register, vol. 72, pages 223–240, an article was published establishing the parentage, English ancestry, and family connections of William Bowditch, who died at Salem, Mass., in 1681, the progenitor of the well-known Bowditch family of Salem and Boston, which includes among its illustrious members Nathaniel Bowditch, the famous mathematician and astronomer. Below are given additional Bowditch records, which supplement the previous article on this family. It is through the courtesy of Mrs. Rose-Troup of Ottery St. Mary, Devonshire, that the contributor of this article is enabled to include in it the Chancery suit of 1699.

From Chancery Proceedings*

[Bowditch v. Guppy, circa 1624/5]

[Replication only.] The replication of George Bowditch, complainant, to the answer of Ezekiel Guppy, defendant, shows that the defendant promised that he would procure the arrest of one Daniell[?] and would discharge the complainant of his obligation, as is alleged in the bill. This defendant is a hard man and is accustomed to take advantages. Sworn Hilary term, 22 James I [January 1624/5]. (Chancery Proceedings, James I, C. 2, B. 31/47.)

[Whether George Bowditch, the complainant in this suit, belongs to the Bowditch family of Devon and Dorset has not been ascertained.]

[Bowditch et al. v. Bowditch, 1699]

21 November 1699. The complaint of Sarah Bowditch, widow, relict of William Bowditch the Younger, late of Thornecombe, co. Devon, deceased, and their son William Bowditch, John Crow of Thorncombe and Sarah his wife, and Matthew Staple of Thornecombe, yeoman, and Joan his wife (Sarah and Joan being daughters of William and Sarah Bowditch abovenamed) shows that William Bowditch the Elder, father of said William the Younger, deceased, by indenture bearing date 1 September 1663, assigned to his son William on his marriage with said Sarah, then Sarah Beer, as a dower for her and her children in case of William the Younger's death, a tenement and lands called Stonelake in Thornecombe, she giving him her portion of £100, in trust for his said son and his wife after the death of him, William the Elder, and his wife Joan. The said marriage was solemnized; and they had issue William Bowditch, Sarah married to John Crow, and Joan married to Matthew Staple. But now William Bowditch the Elder, confederating with others, gives out that he made no such settlement, and that, if he did, it was voluntary and he never received £100, the marriage portion of said Sarah, and that before that time he had mortgaged the premises; and he refuses to produce the indenture or deeds, but says that they will see them when he is dead. Complainants desire that the said William Bowditch the Elder may be caused to appear to answer the premises.

The answer of William Bowditch the Elder, taken at Chard, co. Somerset, 5 February 1699 [1699/1700]. He says that, by indenture bearing date 1 September 1663, made between himself of the first part, John and Robert Beare of the second part, and his son William Bowditch, since deceased, and the complainant Sarah Bowditch, widow, then Sarah Beare, of the third part, he assigned to John and Robert Beare the messuage called Stonelake, wherein he dwelt, in Thorncombe, with five closes and a messuage thereunto adjoining, and another messuage and lands at Laymore, in the parish of Crewkerne, as follows: the said messuage called Stonelake to the use of himself and his [wife] Joan, since deceased, for their lives, with contingent remainders to his son William, the said Sarah, and the children of William and Sarah; in default to defendant's second son, John Bowditch, and his issue, to defendant's third son, Michael, and his issue, and to his fourth son, Daniel, and his issue; the other tenement in Thornecombe in like manner; and the tenement called Laymore to said William and Sarah. The defendant has the said indenture in his keeping, but [has] no other deeds, and believes that his son William had all the earlier deeds concerning said premises. The little messuage in Thornecombe his said son William sold to Jonas Clarke, and [it] is now in the possession of Mary Corner, widow; and the premises in Crewkerne, whereof his said son William had possession, was [sic] entered upon by the lord thereof for some forfeiture. He denies that he ever attempted to defraud the complainants, but says that he paid great sums of money at various times for his said son, which are still due from his executors or administrators, and that he had educated the complainant William for about eight years and the complainant Joan Staple for fourteen years "since the going away of his said son William," and that he has received nothing for so doing. He says that Sarah and Joan are the children of his son William, born under wedlock, and that the complainant Sarah Bowditch, widow, divers years after her said husband had gone to New England, . . . went to her husband in New England, and had a son William, "and then died there."* William Bowditch his mark. (Chancery Proceedings before 1714, Hamilton Division, 604/2.)

From Lay Subsidies for Thorncombe, co. Devon†

15–16 Henry VIII [1523–1525].

Robert Boudyche, Sen., in goods [valuation] £5 [tax] 2s. 6d.
Robert Boudyche, Jur., in goods [valuation] £4 [tax] 2s.
Robert Boudyche in goods [valuation] 40s. [tax] 7d.

[The extracts from the lay subsidies of 15–16 Henry VIII, given above, make it almost certain that the father of John Bowditch of Thorncombe, who died in 1563 (No. 1 of the Bowditch pedigree printed in Register, vol. 72, p. 236), was named Robert, and perhaps his grandfather also had the same Christian name. It is to be noted that John Bowditch had a son named Robert (No. 2 of the pedigree), and that this last-mentioned Robert also had a son Robert. The Margery Bowditch whose burial at Winsham is given above was probably the widow of this John Bowditch of Thorncombe. It is clear that this Thorncombe family originated in the neighboring parish of Chardstock, co. Dorset, where the Bowditches or Bowdiches had been settled from very early times as a family of small gentry.

The abstract of the Chancery suit brought in 1699 by Sarah Bowditch, widow of William Bowditch of Salem, Mass., against her father-in-law proves that William Bowditch the Elder (No. 5 of the pedigree) was not the William Bowridge who was buried at Thorncombe 16 Jan. 1680/1, but was evidently the William Bowditch who was buried there 27 Mar. 1701 (cf. Register, vol. 72, pp. 238, 234). This suit also shows that Sarah Bowditch, daughter of the Salem settler, married John Crow of Thorncombe, that Joan (or Johanna) Bowditch, her sister, married Matthew Staple of Thorncombe, yeoman, and that these two sisters and their husbands were living 21 Nov. 1699. The husband of Joan Staple appears as Mathew Staple of Thorncombe, comber, in the bond given by William Bowditch, his brother-in-law, in 1705, in which he was a surety (ib., vol. 72, p. 227). The John and Robert Beare who are mentioned in the answer of William Bowditch the Elder to the complaint of his daughter-in-law are evidently near kinsmen of Sarah (Bear) Bowditch, probably her father and brother. It also appears from this answer that William Bowditch the Elder, father of the immigrant to New England, had a son John, who is called his second son. This suit gives the names of the closes in Thorncombe owned by the family and proves that they had lands also in Crewkerne, co. Somerset.]

*The reading of the text here seems uncertain. The person who died in New England was undoubtedly William Bowditch the Younger, husband of the complainant Sarah Bowditch. The statement of this complainant that her children were William Bowditch, Sarah, and Joan makes it unlikely that the son William mentioned in the last sentence of the answer of the defendant was a second William in the family of William and Sarah (Bear) Bowditch. Cf. Register, vol. 72, pp. 238–240. A few words of the answer of the defendant, referring to the complainant Sarah Bowditch, have been omitted in the printed record. — Editor.

Cocke

In April 1922 the Committee on English Research communicated to the Register (vol. 76, pages 115–129) an article contributed by Mrs. Elizabeth (French) Bartlett, which made known the English ancestry of James Weeden, the founder of a well-known Rhode Island family, who came to New England in 1638. This James Weeden, as was stated in the article in question, married first, at Chesham, co. Bucks, England, 11 Sept. 1615, Phillip Cock (or Cocke), who was baptized at Chesham 14 Jan. 1587/8 and was living as late as 1632, daughter of William and Joan Cocke of Belenden in the parish of Chesham. She was the mother of James Weeden's six children, all of whom were born in England. (Cf. Register, vol. 76, page 129.)

Below are given abstracts of sundry probate records relating to the Cockes of Chesham and also all records of baptisms, marriages, and burials of members of the various branches of the Cocke family that are found in the parish registers of Chesham down to the early part of the seventeenth century. It is not possible to establish the relationship of all the persons mentioned in these records to Phillip, wife of James Weeden; but the printing of these entries in this article may be helpful to those undertaking further research in the history of this family, which was one of the most prolific in the parish. Chesham was a very large parish, and contained several different hamlets or settlements. The particular branch of the Cocke family to which Phillip (Cocke) Weeden belonged lived in the section known as Belenden.

The records are followed by a pedigree, in which the ancestry and family connections of Phillip Cocke, in so far as they have been traced, are set forth in genealogical form.

From the records given above genealogical information about several Cocke families of the parish of Chesham, co. Bucks, might undoubtedly be derived; but the following pedigree relates only to the immediate ancestors of Phillip Cocke, wife of James Weeden, and the children of these ancestors, as they are disclosed by those records.

1. William Cocke of Belenden in the parish of Chesham, the testator of 13 Oct. 1558, born probably about 1500, died between 13 October 1558 and 4 July 1559. Perhaps he was a grandson of William Cokke of Chesham, the testator of 1485. He probably married first ———, who was buried at Chesham 2 Feb. 1550/1; and secondly Joan ———, who was named in his will and who was perhaps the Joan Cock, widow, who married at Chesham, 13 Nov. 1561, Henry Tookefeild. His brother, Robert Cock, was appointed overseer in his will.

Children by first wife, named in their father's will:

i. William, b. probably about 1528.

1. Mary, bur. at Chesham 19 June 1598.

GENEALOGICAL BYWAYS
II

By Donald Lines Jacobus, M.A., of West Haven, Conn.*

The rapidity with which the descendants of the early settlers in New England increased has been frequently commented upon, but actual statistics for the first one hundred and fifty years are difficult to obtain and are for the most part estimates. To check these estimates, it will be illuminating to set forth the actual increase among the descendants of an early immigrant; and in doing this other matters of incidental interest will reveal themselves.

For the purpose of this study the family of John and Tabitha Thomas, of New Haven, Conn., has been selected. In making a choice it seemed advisable, with the object of saving unnecessary labor, to select a family and a locality with which the writer was already familiar. Care was also taken to select an immigrant whose children and grandchildren remained near the place of their nativity; otherwise it might have proved impossible to trace enough descendants to make the study of any statistical value. Finally, it seemed unfair to select an immigrant who had but two or three children, or one who had twelve or fourteen children; John Thomas had a family of seven children, and also fulfilled the other requirements.

John and Tabitha Thomas were born, presumably, about 1615, and came to New England shortly before 1640, when the wave of immigration from England was nearing its crest. They had, as has been stated, seven children, all of whom lived to marry and have issue. From the seven children sprang, in the third generation, 49 grandchildren, or an average of 7 children in each family.

Of these 49 grandchildren, 8 died under 20 years of age, 4 died unmarried aged above 20 years, 1 married but died childless, and the remaining 36 produced, between them, 230 individuals in the fourth generation, or an average of a trifle less than 6½ children in each family. These 230 individuals are believed to include all of the surviving great-grandchildren of John Thomas, but there may have been a few additional and unrecorded children who died in infancy.†

Of the 230 great-grandchildren, 22 died under 20 years of age, 9 died unmarried aged above 20 years, 6 married but died childless,‡ the fate of 27 is unknown, and the remaining 166 produced 993 known individuals in the fifth generation, or an average of a trifle less than 6 children in each family. Of these 993 individuals, 33 were doubly descended from John Thomas, being the children of cousins. This number should be increased, to allow for the progeny of the 27 members of the fourth generation whose fate is unknown. About half of them are known to have reached maturity, and several of them are known to have married; if we suppose that 10 of the 27 had 6 children apiece, we increase our figures by 60, making 1,053. But in the case of the 166 known parents of the fourth generation there is reason to believe that a few of them left more children than have been located, and unquestionably there were a number of unrecorded children who died young. In view of all these considerations it is conservative to estimate that John and Tabitha Thomas had close to 1,100 great-great-grandchildren, of whom 993 individuals have been definitely traced.

†In several instances in this and in the succeeding (fifth) generation the names of surviving children have been ascertained from probate records, when no records of births or baptisms could be found. Therefore the number of children born should be increased slightly in the fourth generation and considerably in the fifth generation, in order to include such unrecorded children as presumably died young.

Before we consider the bearing of these figures on the rate of increase in the general population of New England, it will be well to note what period of time was covered by these five generations. This we tabulate as follows:

TABLE I

Generation	Individuals in each Generation	Equivalent Number of Pure-blooded Individuals	Eldest born	Youngest born	Percentage of Childless Marriages
I	2	2	1615(?)		0
II	7	7	1640	1660	0
III	49	24.5	1661	1707	2.7
IV	230	57.5	1680	1754	3.5
V	993	128.25	1705	1792	Unknown

The extent to which the generations overlapped each other will be apparent at a glance. It is customary, in checking the chronology of a long line of descent, to allow 100 years for 3 generations, or an average of $33\frac{1}{3}$ years to a generation. In lines of descent tracing through the Thomas family the average length of a generation was somewhat under 30 years, or considerably below the supposed average. The same observation may be applied to all the early New England families; for the rapidity with which generations succeeded one another was due to the early marriages which prevailed in Colonial days and to the fact that a larger number of children were produced during the first than during the second decade of wedlock.

It will be remembered that John Thomas came to New England shortly before 1640. In a table published in the REGISTER for October 1922* it is estimated that the population of New England in 1640 was 25,000, and that by 1749 their progeny had increased to 400,000. It is our intention to check these figures by means of the known increase in the family of John Thomas.

It obviously cannot be supposed that the 25,000 estimated inhabitants in the year 1640 were all, like John Thomas and his wife, young adults just about to found a family. These figures include children born in this country, children who accompanied their parents to this country, and some adults above the usual age of parenthood, as well as the young adults in whom we are interested. But inasmuch as the years 1630 to 1640 had witnessed a tremendous influx of settlers, and since a large proportion of these settlers are known to have been young adults, it is fair to assume that the ratio of adults between 20 and 40 years of age was very much higher than is the case in a normally balanced population. Let us assume, then, that there were 10,000 young adults who already were, or were soon to become, heads of families; this leaves 15,000, made up of children already born to the above adults, adults above the usual age of parenthood, adults who died in this country without issue, and adults who returned to England with their families subsequent to 1640. The last two classes were certainly larger than is generally supposed. The question then is: What would be the progeny of these 10,000 heads of families by the year 1748, on the basis of the increase in the family of John Thomas? The following table shows the number of descendants of John Thomas who were living in 1748:

TABLE II

Generation	Individuals living in 1748		Equivalent Number of Pure-blooded Individuals
III	17	÷4	$4\frac{1}{16}$
IV	59	÷8	$7\frac{3}{16}$
V	471	÷16	$29\frac{7}{16}$
VI	92	÷32	$2\frac{14}{16}$
Totals	639		$43\frac{15}{16}$

The figures for the third and fourth generations are those of individuals who survived until 1748; of the fifth generation 557 individuals had been born, of whom 86 had died, leaving 471; and a few had been born in the sixth generation. In 1748 there were 639 known descendants of John Thomas living, and there were in addition, presumably, a few more, who have not been traced. But these 639 individuals represent not merely the progeny of John Thomas but also, through intermarriage, a part of the progeny of other ancestors. It is therefore necessary to reduce the individuals in each generation to the equivalent number of pure-blooded individuals. Descendants in the third generation, for instance, represent 4 grandparents, and their number must be divided by 4; those in the fourth generation represent 8 great-grandparents, and their number must be divided by 8; and so with the other generations. On this basis, we learn that on 1 Jan. 1748/9 John Thomas individually was responsible for an increase of $43\frac{15}{16}$ in the population; and, since a few descendants are unlocated, we are justified in raising this figure slightly to 44 persons.

Now if each of our presumed 10,000 young adults who figured in the population account of 1640 was as prolific as John Thomas, they would be represented on 1 Jan. 1748/9 by 440,000 descendants. In the table already alluded to* these descendants are estimated at 400,000. On the face of it, it might seem that this estimate was too conservative, but there is a more probable explanation of the discrepancy. In selecting the Thomas family for a test, one requisite was to choose an immigrant who had an average number of children; and John Thomas had 7 children, a number which is very close to the average for the second generation in New England. But one point was overlooked: the 7 children of John Thomas all survived and had families. In the belief that this might have produced a third generation which was above the average in numbers an examination was made of the families of 23 early settlers in New Haven, Conn., those examined being families whose names began with certain letters of the alphabet.* Of the collective children of these 23 immigrants, 112 lived to marry and have issue, thus making an average of a trifle less than 5 parents in the second generation. Since there were 7 parents in the second generation of the Thomas family, we may conclude that the Thomases were more prolific than the average family.

On the other hand, it is possible that more than 10,000 of the 25,000 who are supposed to have been in New England in 1640 were or became heads of families. But if even 12,000 were adults who had issue, and if they produced 5 surviving children† in each generation, their progeny in the fifth generation would number 468,750.‡ Everything considered,§ we may conclude that the estimate of the population in 1749 in Dr. Tucker's table‖ is none too large, and that the estimates for the later dates, if altered at all, should be increased rather than diminished.

Greatly differing estimates have been made of the total number of descendants whom each of the early Colonial settlers may claim, but these estimates are probably all far below the actual figures. First, let us make an estimate based on the assumption that for seven generations succeeding the immigrant ancestor the rate of increase was 5 surviving children in each generation. This would give us 78,125 individuals in the eighth generation. If we make allowance for the members of the intervening generations and for the members of the ninth, tenth, and even the eleventh generations who are already in existence, the total number of descendants of any one colonist of the period from 1620 to 1640 may well amount to 200,000. This estimate will perhaps be assailed, and assailed violently, as far above the truth; therefore it is advisable to check it by some actual figures which fortunately are available. "The Munson Record," published at New Haven in 1895 and comprising 1235 pages, has long held repute as a family history scarcely to be excelled for accuracy and completeness. The first index, 26 pages in length and containing only the descendants of the Munson name, lists 4,671 individuals. Of these, 1,394, by actual count, were of the eighth generation. Now it is generally known — but the matter will be explained at length in the next paragraph — that the descendants on female lines outnumber the name-bearing descendants by a ratio increasing with each generation. In the eighth generation the ratio is 126 descendants in female lines to every 2 (1 male and 1 female) born bearing the name.

*The examination was made along alphabetical lines in order to avoid conscious or unconscious selection of large-sized families.

†J. Gardner Bartlett, in the Journal of Heredity, vol. 10, p. 142, from an examination of 10,000 families, finds about 6 surviving children in New England families between 1650 and 1845; hence an estimate of 5 surviving children is very conservative.

§It must also be remembered that additional immigrants arrived after 1640, whose descendants helped to swell the population. Furthermore, as early as 1750, New England settlers had numerous descendants in New Jersey and some descendants in New York.

‖In REGISTER, vol. 76, p. 306.

Hence the total number of descendants of Capt. Thomas Munson in the eighth generation may be estimated fairly closely as 64 × 1,394, i.e., 89,216. It will be seen that these figures are considerably above those arrived at from our original estimate made above; and, since Capt. Thomas Munson, of the first generation, had but one son and two daughters, it can scarcely be claimed that the example is an unfair one or one likely to lead to an overestimate.

An incidental study can be made from the tables of the Thomas pedigree which may be of interest to writers of family histories. Too often publications of this sort are filled with descendants through female lines, to the neglect of the male lines. The chief objection to this practice, from a genealogical point of view, is the fact that a large proportion of the errors in such books occur in following the descendants of daughters, when the compiler treats of families with which he is not thoroughly familiar. But there is also a statistical objection: the descendants through daughters, as has often been observed, multiply much more rapidly than descendants in the male line. The sexes being about equally divided, let us suppose that John Doe has one son and one daughter, who in their turn have each likewise one son and one daughter. The grandchildren of John Doe, therefore, comprise one Doe grandson, a Doe granddaughter who will change her name on marriage, and two grandchildren born with a different name. That is, the ratio in the third generation is one male Doe to three who are females or of female descent. In the fourth generation the proportion will be 1 to 7, in the fifth generation 1 to 15, and in the ninth generation 1 to 255. Consequently, if 1 volume is required to set forth the male descendants of the Doe name, it will require 255 volumes to set forth the female lines in as adequate a manner. It need scarcely be added that no family history has ever been published, no matter what its pretentions, which treats at all completely of the female lines.

The theoretical ratio of increase as stated above may be tested by the actual figures of the descendants of John Thomas:

Generation	Descendants of the Thomas Name	Females and Descendants through Females	Theoretical Ratio
II	4	3	1 to 1
III	15	34	1 to 3
IV	30	200	1 to 7
V	61	932	1 to 15

It will be seen that the actual ratio between the male and female descendants is fairly close to the theoretical ratio.

Another interesting study is the geographical distribution of the Thomas descendants of the fifth generation. It has been mentioned that one reason for selecting this family for study was the fact that the children and grandchildren remained near the place of their nativity. It is, therefore, somewhat surprising to find that the great-great-grandchildren were distributed through 57 towns in Connecticut, 18 towns in New York, 8 towns in Massachusetts, 8 towns in Vermont, 3 towns in Pennsylvania, 1 town in New Hampshire, 1 town in Ohio, and 1 town in New Brunswick. These residences were the places of death, wherever those places had been ascertained; otherwise they were the last known residences. If the place of death could have been found in all instances, the number of residences in New York and Ohio would doubtless have been increased.

51. Brig. Gen. Lucius Eugene[7] Polk (William Julius,[6] Lieut. Col. William,[5] Brig. Gen. Thomas,[4] William,[3] William,[2] Robert[1]), of "Westbrook," Maury Co., Tenn., planter, lawyer, born at Salisbury, N. C., 10 July 1833, died at "Westbrook" 1 Dec. 1893, and was buried in St. John's Churchyard. He married at the Forks of the Cypress, near Florence, Ala., 19 Aug. 1863, his first cousin, Sally Moore[7] Polk (9, ix, 1), born there 1 Sept. 1841, daughter of Rufus King[6] and Sarah Moore (Jackson).

He was a student at the University of Virginia in 1850–51, and settled near Helena, Ark., where he engaged in cotton planting. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in the Confederate Army as a private in Capt. Patrick R. Cleburne's company, known as the "Yell Rifles," which afterwards formed a part of the First Arkansas Regiment. He was soon commissioned as first lieutenant, and at the Battle of Shiloh, 6 Apr. 1862, where the regiment was cut to pieces, took command of his company and led it during the two days' fighting. He was promoted to be colonel of the regiment, and was commended for gallantry in General Hardee's official report. In the Kentucky Campaign he served under Gen. Kirby Smith, and was wounded at Richmond, Ky., and Perryville, Tenn. In Dec. 1862 he was made a brigadier general, and commanded the First Brigade (formerly commanded by Cleburne), Second Division (Cleburne's), Hardee's corps, in the Battle of Stone River (Murfreesboro), Tenn., 31 Dec. 1862. He participated in the fighting in Tennessee and Georgia in 1863 and 1864, including the battles at Chickamauga, Chattanooga, Ringgold Gap (27 Nov. 1863), where he captured three Union flags, and New Hope Church (25 May 1864), where he was wounded and crippled for life. He returned to his plantation, "Westbrook," in Maury Co., Tenn., and made his home there for the rest of his days. He was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1884, and a member of the Tennessee Senate in 1887.

PROCEEDINGS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

Communicated by HENRY EDWARDS SCOTT, A.B., Recording Secretary

THE eightieth annual meeting of the Society was held on Wednesday, 6 February 1924, at 2.30 P. M., in Wilder Hall, 9 Ashburton Place, Boston, President CHASE presiding and a quorum being present.

The minutes of the meeting of 2 January 1924 were read and approved, and the monthly reports of the Corresponding Secretary, Librarian, Historian, and Council were accepted, the Council reporting that since the January meeting members of the Society had been elected as follows:

Resident Members

Herbert L. Kelly of Boston, Mass.
Mrs. Robert Hale Bancroft of Boston, Mass.
William F. Brooks of Minneapolis, Minn.
Mrs. Lulu Ann Simms of Houston, Ark.
Mrs. Lena May Steudel of Ansonia, Conn.
Mrs. Frank Penrose Sproul of Boston, Mass.
Walter James Vaughn of Arlington, Mass.
Joel N. Eno of Brooklyn, N. Y.

When the report of the Historian was presented, the members of the Society and their guests rose, as usual, out of respect to the memory of the members whose deaths were reported; and at the request of the President they remained standing in silence for one minute after the reading of the report, out of respect to the memory of Hon. Woodrow Wilson, for eight years President of the United States, an Honorary Member of the Society, whose funeral was about to take place in the city of Washington, D. C.

On motion it was Voted, That the annual reports of the Council, including its committees, the Librarian, the Corresponding Secretary, the Treasurer, the Trustees of the Kidder Fund, and the Historian, being presented in print and now in the hands of the meeting, be accepted and ordered filed with the originals.

On motion it was Voted, That the Society proceed to the election of officers and councillors, agreeable to the provisions of the By-Laws.

That three tellers be appointed by the Chair, and that said tellers shall distribute, receive, sort, and count the ballots, and make a report to this meeting.

That the polls be now opened, and stand open until every member present has had opportunity to vote.

The Chair appointed as tellers Messrs. ARTHUR ORISON TAYLOR, WILLIAM OGILVIE COMSTOCK, and FRANK EDWARD DOYLE, and the election by ballot of officers and councillors took place.

After the polls had been closed, the Chair presented, as the speaker of the afternoon, CYRUS EDWIN DALLIN, of Arlington Heights, Mass., the well-known sculptor, who in a most interesting informal talk on Some Characteristics of Indians I Have Known related incidents of his own boyhood days in Utah half a century ago, and described the impressions made on him then and in later years by Indians whom he met. He spoke in terms of high appreciation of the good qualities of the Indian, both in childhood and in manhood, characterized King Philip, the foe of the early New England colonists, as a true patriot, and declared that many of the disputes between the Indians and the white men in the early days of the settlement of New England were due to the fact that the Indians never understood the white man's ideas about individual ownership of land. Mr. DALLIN exhibited beautiful specimens of Indian garments and equipment, and called attention especially to the artistic coloring of these objects. He was heartily applauded at the conclusion of his address.

The tellers then made their report, which showed that officers and councillors had been elected as follows:

President

JOHN CARROLL CHASE, of Derry, N. H.

Vice Presidents

NATHAN MATTHEWS, of Boston, Mass.

ALFRED JOHNSON, of Belfast, Me.

ALBERT HENRY LAMSON, of New London, N. H.

WILLIAM WALLACE STICKNEY, of Ludlow, Vt.

GEORGE ANDREWS MORIARTY, JR., of Newport, R. I.

GEORGE SEYMOUR GODARD, of Hartford, Conn.

Recording Secretary

HENRY EDWARDS SCOTT, of Medford, Mass.

Corresponding Secretary

THORNTON KIRKLAND LOTHROP, of Boston, Mass.

Treasurer

JAMES MELVILLE HUNNEWELL, of Boston, Mass.

Librarian

WILLIAM PRESCOTT GREENLAW, of Winthrop, Mass.

Councillors for the term of three years, 1924, 1925, 1926

WILLIAM TRUMAN ALDRICH, of Boston, Mass.

MRS. EDITH (HILL) BLANEY, of Boston, Mass.

ANDREW FISKE, of Weston, Mass.

President CHASE, in a few appropriate words, accepted the office of President to which he had been reelected, and then, on motion, it was Voted, That the New England Historic Genealogical Society enters on its records at this time its appreciation of the services rendered by the retiring Councillors, ARTHUR WINSLOW PEIRCE and MRS. ELEANOR COTTON (DENHAM)

WARDEN, who during their terms of office have given of their time, their thought, and their counsel that the broad purposes of the Society, the collection and preservation of genealogical records for the public benefit, might be attained.

On motion it was Voted, That the proceedings of this meeting, with the annual reports accepted and the list of officers and committees for the current year, be printed in THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORICAL AND GENEALOGICAL REGISTER for April, 1924, that a copy of the annual reports presented in print at this meeting be mailed to every life and resident member of the Society not receiving the REGISTER, that biographical notices of deceased members be printed in the various quarterly numbers of the REGISTER, and that the Council be charged with the execution of this order.

No further business being presented, the Chair, at 4.20 P. M., declared the meeting dissolved, and invited the members of the Society and their friends to inspect the building and to partake of light refreshments, which were served by the ladies in charge of the social hour in the tea room on the auditorium floor and in the John Foster Memorial Room on the street floor.

REPORT OF THE COUNCIL

Prepared by ARTHUR WINSLOW PEIRCE, A.B., Litt.D.

THE meetings of the Council for the year 1923 have been well attended, and we believe that the interests of the Society have been carefully considered. Much of the business is in the nature of routine, but it may be well to call the attention of the members to a few outstanding matters that deserve attention in this report.

One encouraging item is the substantial increase in membership during the year, which is due largely to the zeal and energy of the Committee having that matter in charge. We are glad to be able to report the resumption of the printing of vital records of Massachusetts towns, which has been suspended for the last few years. The books on Acton and Plympton have been issued during the year. The proposed index to genealogical data in print is now under way, thanks to the generous contributions made for that purpose. The undertaking is necessary and will be extremely useful, and it deserves the support of every member of the Society. As an outgrowth of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the admittance of women to membership the Women's Lecture Fund has been established, the interest of which will provide for the payment of a speaker at one of the stated meetings of the Society.

Two wills that have been offered for probate recently provide for bequests to the Society. The late James Francis Whitney, of Somerville, Mass., a life member, who died 25 October 1923, bequeathed $1,000, without restrictions. The late William Streeter Richardson, of Canton, Mass., a life member, who died 6 October 1923, left to the Society $15,000, directing that $5,000 of this shall be used for the English research work of the Society. As he had served on the Council and on important committees of the Society and had full knowledge of its work and needs, this bequest comes as a stamp of his approval on the usefulness and efficiency of the Society. A proposal has been made to make the room of the Committee on Heraldry a memorial to him.

The placing of the mural tablets in the Society's building has been going on gradually through the year. It is a task requiring discriminating taste and much time and pains. The cordial gratitude of the Society is due to Robert Dickson Weston, Esq., who has given most generously of time taken from his own profession to the consideration of the composition of the inscriptions and other details in connection with this work.

The Council calls to the attention of the members the need for the installation of additional bookstacks in the Library, which will soon be urgent. When the building was erected in 1912, only one-third of the space for stacks was equipped. We have the room and the books; increase in shelving space cannot be much longer delayed.

Other matters of interest are mentioned in the reports of the various officers and committees which appear herewith.

The Report of the Committee on Finance, by James Melville Hunnewell, A.B., LL.B., Treasurer:

Under the will of William Streeter Richardson, a life member, the Society will receive $15,000, of which $5,000 will constitute a fund for English research and $10,000 will be added to the unrestricted funds of the Society. This is the second largest bequest ever made to the Society, and will be received with grateful appreciation from a donor whose interest in our affairs continued for many years.

Under the will of James Francis Whitney, a life member, the Society will receive an unrestricted bequest of $1,000.

Under the will of Dorvil Miller Wilcox, a corresponding member, the Society has received an unrestricted bequest of $500, together with sundry volumes from his library.

Our President has given the Society the sum of $1,000, to be known as the John Carroll Chase Fund, the income of which is to be used by the Committee on Papers and Essays, in connection with the stated meetings of the Society.

Several changes of investments have been made, all with the purpose of strengthening our financial position.

Upon the recommendation of the Committee, the John Merrill Bradbury Fund was marked down $600, on account of 625 shares of stock in the Austin Water Company, which is believed to be of no value, the original investment in this company (then the Austin City Water Company) having been given to the Society under Mr. Bradbury's will, which was made in 1873 and was proved in 1876.

The Committee has given careful attention to the financial affairs of the Society, and, while many routine matters have been considered and acted upon, there is little of general interest to be mentioned except the facts stated above.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS, by Mrs. Florence Reynolds (Conant) Howes, Secretary:

The Committee on Ways and Means, acting conjointly with the Committee on Increase of Membership, held but one meeting during the year, when it was voted to invite the men members of the Society to contribute a fund for indexing the genealogical data in print relating to American families.

Mr. Richardson's sickness during the summer, followed by his death in the fall, deprived the Committee of a wise and forceful leader, whose loss is deeply regretted by his associates on the Committee.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON INCREASE OF MEMBERSHIP, by Joseph Harvey White, Chairman:

The Committee on Increase of Membership, which comprises the same members as the Committee on Ways and Means, transacted its business at the one meeting called for the two committees early in the spring. At this meeting it was voted to continue the method already in use for increasing the membership of the Society by invitation, and to augment the successful work of the Committee on Papers and Essays in adding women members by extending the territory covered by that committee from Boston and vicinity to all the New England States and Greater New York. The activities for which the Committee is responsible have been conducted by its Secretary, Mrs. Florence C. Howes, to whom credit should be accorded for the greater part of the gratifying increase of 302 new members enrolled during the year 1923.

This Committee in common with other committees has suffered a severe loss in the death of one of its valued members, Mr. William Streeter Richardson.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON SALE OF PUBLICATIONS, by Charles Eliot Goodspeed, Chairman:

The net profits from sales of miscellaneous publications by the Treasurer in 1923 amount to $669.91.

It seems desirable to the Committee to publish the list of publications for sale, as was formerly done by the Society.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATIONS, by James Parker Parmenter, A.M., LL.B., Chairman:

The Committee on Publications reports that during the year 1923 the work of preparing for publication vital records of Massachusetts towns has been continued, and that the printing of these records, in the form approved by the Commonwealth, has been resumed, the Vital Records of Acton, containing 311 pages, and the Vital Records of Plympton, containing 540 pages, having been published by the Society in the summer and autumn of this year.

Among the important volumes in this series now in preparation by the editorial staff of the Society are the Vital Records of Nantucket, Taunton, Dartmouth, and New Bedford.

The Report of the COMMITTEE TO ASSIST THE HISTORIAN, by Andrew Fiske, Ph.D., LL.B., Chairman:

The Committee to Assist the Historian reports that during the year 1923 it has held one meeting, namely, on 17 December, which was called at the request of the Historian and at which all the assistance that he desired was given to him.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON ENGLISH RESEARCH, by George Andrews Moriarty, Jr., A.M., LL.B., Chairman:

During the year 1923 the work of the Committee on English Research has continued as in past years, and articles upon the English ancestry of the Haskett, Sheffield, and Boardman families have appeared in the REGISTER.

The Chairman of the Committee spent the winter and spring of 1923 in London, where he gathered considerable material regarding the ancestors of New England families; and this will appear in due course in the REGISTER under the title of "Genealogical Gleanings in England," as the material relates to many different families. Material furnished by Mr. George A. Taylor is also available and will probably be published soon.

The most important event in the history of English research during the past year has been the generous bequest of $5,000 under the will of the late William Streeter Richardson, to be devoted to the English research work of the Society. Properly invested, this sum should realize about $250 per annum; but in order to carry on the work of the Committee an annual income of at least $500 is necessary. For the last four or five years the Chairman of the Committee has been conducting its work for the most part at his own expense, and accordingly this bequest is most welcome.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON HERALDRY, by Robert Dickson Weston, A.B., Chairman:

Mr. William Streeter Richardson was the life and soul of the Committee on Heraldry. As its Secretary he devoted an immense amount of time to its correspondence and other work. He always had the Committee meet at his house, where his gracious hospitality and enthusiasm relieved our business of all that might otherwise have been dry or tedious. Mr. Richardson's failing health during the spring, his long illness, and his death have rendered it impossible for the Committee to accomplish anything of moment during the year. The difficulty of "carrying on" without him seems well-nigh insuperable.

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON THE LIBRARY:

The Report of the COMMITTEE ON EPITAPHS, by Harold Clarke Durrell, A.B., Chairman:

The following collections of epitaphs have been received by the Society during the year 1923:

5 March. — Cemetery Records of Easton, Mass., 198 pp.

31 May. — Inscriptions prior to 1850 (East Haddam, East Lyme, Lyme, Old Lyme,† and Salem, Conn.), 19 vols.

*Printed in the REGISTER of April and July 1923.

7 September. — Acton (Mass.) Gravestone Records, 198 pp. From the Eddy Town-Record Fund.*

The Report of the Committee on Papers and Essays, by Mrs. Florence Reynolds (Conant) Howes, Secretary:

The Committee on Papers and Essays provided eight lectures for the stated meetings of the year 1923, as follows:

3 January. — "A Visit to Boston and Dedham, Old England," by Allan Forbes, of Boston.

7 February. — "Poetry and Patriotism," by Denis A. McCarthy, LL.D., of Arlington Heights, Mass.

7 March. — "The Early Music of America," by H. Augustine Smith, A.M., Professor of Fine Arts in Religion, Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service.

4 April. — "Literature and American Culture," by Edward Howard Griggs, A.M., L.H.D., LL.D.

2 May. — "The Arnold Arboretum, a Museum of Living Trees and Shrubs," by Edward Irving Farrington, of Boston, Editor, Author, and Practical Gardener.

3 October. — "Silhouettes," by Rev. Glenn Tilley Morse, A.B., S.T.B., of West Newbury, Mass., President of the Bay State Historical League and of the Historical Society of Old Newbury.

7 November. — "History of the New England Stage," by Quincy Kilby, of Brookline, Mass.

5 December. — "The Early Music of America," by H. Augustine Smith, A.M.

Three of the foregoing lectures were illustrated with stereopticon slides, a fourth, the lecture on silhouettes, was illustrated with two or three hundred specimens from the lecturer's own extensive collection, while a fifth, Professor Smith's paper, was illustrated by soloists.

Owing to the severity of the storm which raged on 7 March only a small number heard the paper prepared for that meeting, and therefore it was repeated, with extensive additions, at the December meeting.

At the annual meeting in February the Committee prepared, in addition to the lecture, a programme in observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first admission of women to membership in the Society. This celebration was also marked by the creation, by the women members of the Society, of a "Women's Lecture Fund," and by a special effort to increase the percentage of women members in the Society. The result attained was gratifying, and over 150 women of Greater Boston accepted invitations to join the Society during the year.

The Report of the Special Committee on Mural Memorials, by Robert Dickson Weston, A.B., Chairman:

During the year 1923 the Special Committee on Mural Memorials has been occupied for the most part with putting in proper shape the inscriptions for the thirty odd tablets that are yet to be put up. The amount of labor that this involves is not easy to realize. The donors of the tablets sometimes supply only the names of the persons to be commemorated, and sometimes supply a great deal of information, accurate and inaccurate. In the one case the Committee has to look up all the dates and facts, and in the other has not only to select those of sufficient importance to be recorded on the tablets, but also to verify them. Inscriptions suggested by donors must frequently be stripped of much that is not essential and compressed within narrow limits. The inscriptions, laboriously phrased by the Committee, must be submitted to the donors for approval and in many cases must be rephrased to meet their views. This has required a voluminous correspondence. When the inscriptions have at last been couched in language satisfactory both to the Committee and to the donors, the dates and facts have to be verified again by professional genealogists. After the substance and form of the inscriptions have been settled, the artists have to be chosen. The work of designing always takes time. And finally, the artists' designs go to the artisans who carve the stones. The Committee hopes, though it cannot promise, to discharge all its obligations to the donors of tablets before the first of next January.

In the death of Mr. William Streeter Richardson this Committee, as well as others, has sustained an irreparable loss. We could always rely on his taste and sense of fitness, and he brought to our conferences a genial, sympathetic, and helpful interest, which only those who had the good fortune to work with him can appreciate at its true worth.

The Report of the Special Committee on Rolls of Membership, by Myles Standish, A.M., M.D., S.D., Chairman:

The Committee on Rolls of Membership has made progress in the year 1923. At the beginning of the year the rolls were twenty years behind date. During the year the first rough copy has been made for the succeeding ten years.

The Society begins the year 1924 with 11 Honorary, 45 Corresponding, 511 Pilgrim Tercentenary, 444 Life, and 1,035 Resident Members, a total of 2,046. Of the Life Members, there are 54 in the thirty-dollar, 295 in the fifty-dollar, and 95 in the hundred-dollar class. Of the Resident Members, there are 58 in the three-dollar, 514 in the five-dollar, and 463 in the ten-dollar class.

On 1 January 1903 the annual dues of Resident Members were increased from three to five dollars per year and the Life Membership fee from thirty to fifty dollars, and these members were to receive The New England Historical and Genealogical Register free. These increases applied only to members elected after that date, but the old members had the privilege of paying the differences in fees and receiving the Register. Many members took advantage of this privilege at that time. There are now only 58 of the three-dollar Resident Members and 54 of the thirty-dollar Life Members on the Rolls.

On 5 February 1919 the annual dues of Resident Members were increased from five to ten dollars and the Life Membership fee was increased from fifty to one hundred dollars, but these increases applied only to members elected after 28 February of that year. More than one-half of the members now on the Rolls have joined the Society since 28 February 1919.

During the year 1923 the number of members on the Rolls reached the highest point in the history of the Society. The proportion of nonsustaining members, however, is extremely low, there being only 11 Honorary Members and 45 Corresponding Members.

In the report of the Committee for 1922 there was given a list of the Resident and Life Members who were elected before 1880 and whose names were on the Rolls at the beginning of 1923, with the date of election of each. There were 21 names on that list. The death, on 26 December 1923, of Edward Preston Usher, a Life Member since 1877, leaves 20 names on the list at the beginning of 1924.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN

Presented by William Prescott Greenlaw

The total accessions for the year 1923 number 1,373 volumes, 736 pamphlets, and 40 miscellaneous articles. Of these, 444 volumes and 81 pamphlets were purchased; 878 volumes, 651 pamphlets, and 40 miscellaneous articles were given or deposited; and 51 volumes and 4 pamphlets were received in exchange. Two hundred and fifty-nine genealogies were acquired during the year.

A larger proportion than usual of the genealogies received were duplicates. It has been the policy of the Librarian for many years to gather duplicate copies of the more important books, in order that the demand by members for loans might be met without seriously lessening the usefulness of the collection as a reference library. This duplicate collection has been built up largely through the gift of books, and it is hoped that it may eventually become large enough to permit interlibrary loans for the benefit of the public. This would be in keeping with the practice of the founders of the Society, as shown by the early loan records, and would also enhance the reputation of the institution.

Seven and one-half per cent of the membership borrowed books during the year. The number of volumes taken out was less in proportion to the size of the Library and the number of members than in the early days of the Library's history. Those members of the Society who use the Library quite frequently, and are occasionally annoyed by finding that a book which they wish to consult is out on loan, are reminded that this function of the Library has been in operation throughout its entire history without much change in the rules regulating it and in diminishing ratios to the number of volumes in the Library and the number of members of the Society. It may also be noted that those who have sometimes been annoyed are frequent borrowers. Since the change in annual dues from five to ten dollars per year, over one-half of the present members have been admitted to the Society. Many of these live at a distance and derive their chief benefit of membership through this privilege of borrowing books.

From 1868 to 1908 the Durrie and Munsell indexes were the chief guides to printed data relating to American families. The last revision of this work was published in 1900, and the series came to an end with a supplement issued in 1908. These indexes contained about 58,000 references. Attention was called to the need of a more comprehensive guide, in the annual report of the Librarian of this Society in 1909, and the suggestion was made that the Society ought to undertake the continuation and amplification of these indexes along the lines indicated by experience in this Library. A plan was worked out for this, but it was not put into operation at that time because more important problems relating to the safety and expansion of the Library fully occupied the officers. These problems have been solved; and attention was again called to the need of an adequate guide to the data in print relating to American families in the Librarian's report last year. Acting on the recommendation in that report, the Council authorized the Committee on Ways and Means to seek donations for this purpose, with the result that money enough was raised to begin this work in a modest way and to carry it on for about eighteen months.

A cabinet was purchased and placed in the Library, in which cards were filed as fast as written. Enough work has been done to demonstrate the value of the undertaking and the practicability of the scheme. Now the task is to find funds from time to time to carry on the work and to increase the number of indexers.

The information on the cards is complete enough to enable the searcher to determine the probable usefulness of the data indexed, which saves the time of the searcher, needless handling of books, and unnecessary wear and tear.

It is proposed from time to time, as material is accumulated, to print volumes of this index for general use. Eventually the entire field can be covered, after which all that will be necessary is to index the current publications, adding volumes to the printed series whenever data enough are accumulated to make a volume.

It does not seem feasible to gather this information in a chronological order, as was done in Poole's Index to Periodical Literature. On the contrary, it seems desirable to index first the more important data and those least accessible to the searcher.

The growth of the Library and its use by members and visitors have been up to the average of recent years.

Miss Caroline Hazard, the first woman to be elected to Honorary Membership in the Society, had already been for several years a Life Member of the Society. This election, on 6 March 1923, was a recognition by the Council of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the admission of women into the Society. One Corresponding Member, seven successors to Pilgrim Tercentenary Members, twenty-seven new Life Members, and two hundred and seventy-five Resident Members complete the total of new members for the year.

Without counting the Honorary and Corresponding Members and the successors to previous memberships, the total number of new members for the year is three hundred and two, an increase of two hundred and one over each of the last two years and nearly up to the totals of 1919 and 1920.

NOTES

It having come to the attention of this Society that certain genealogists and publishers have used the name of the Society in connection with their own enterprises, the Society again desires to state that it has NO genealogical representatives in this country or in England, nor is it in any way connected with any publications other than those that it issues over its own name at 9 Ashburton Place, Boston.

American Students in Scotland, 1756–1765. — In a small notebook in my possession, which formerly belonged, I believe, to some Scottish physician connected with one of the universities, although there is no clue to the name, there is a manuscript list of students "In the College of Chemistry, Scotland, from 1755 to 1765, and of the Materia Medica Jan. 7, 1761," which contains 985 names. The West Indian names in this list were contributed by me to Caribbeana, vol. 3, and the North American names are herewith submitted for the information of readers of the Register.

HISTORICAL INTELLIGENCE

HERALDRY. — The Committee on Heraldry of the New England Historic Genealogical Society strongly recommends that all coats of arms which can be proved to be authentic be offered for record with this Society. The arrangements for the making and preservation of such records are complete, and the volume of recorded arms has been begun by the entry therein of a number of well-authenticated coats. Printed forms and directions for the making of applications may be obtained from the Committee, and all communications on this subject should be addressed to the Committee on Heraldry, New England Historic Genealogical Society, 9 Ashburton Place, Boston.

Without taking any position with reference to the propriety of assuming arms, the Committee will be glad to examine arms or heraldic devices which any person or organization desires to assume, and give advice as to whether the same are heraldically correct or whether they violate a right of exclusive use heretofore acquired by others.

CONNECTICUT PROBATE RECORDS. — At the stated meeting of the New England Historic Genealogical Society held on 2 Apr. 1924 the Librarian reported that he had received from Mr. George Seymour Godard, Librarian of the Connecticut State Library, Hartford, fourteen large cases, containing the original folders used by Mr. Godard in assembling the original documents of sixty-one Connecticut probate districts which have been deposited in the Connecticut State Library. When arranged and made accessible, these folders will constitute an index to more than half a million documents, relating to the settlement of 105,335 estates. This is the most notable gift to the Society's Library that has been received during the last thirty years. From time to time folders pertaining to other districts will be added to this collection. Arrangements will be made by which copies or abstracts of the original documents at Hartford may be obtained for reasonable fees.

The following table shows the probate districts, the period covered in each district, and the number of estates indexed up to 25 Mar. 1924.

Burnell Genealogy. — Mrs. Harriet Northrop has compiled a genealogy of the Burnell family of America and has presented it to the Milwaukee (Wis.) Public Library. It is a book of about 500 pages, and contains abundant data relating to this family. An additional volume of 256 pages treats of the Burnells in England. Persons seeking information about the Burnells should write to the Milwaukee Public Library.

West Roxbury (Mass.) Genealogies. — The Library of the New England Historic Genealogical Society has on its shelves a manuscript volume entitled "West Roxbury Genealogies," which was given to the Society in 1913 by the compiler, Mr. Howard Redwood Guild of West Roxbury, and contains brief accounts of families residing in that part of the old town of Roxbury from 1713 to Genealogies in Preparation. — Persons of the several names are advised to furnish the compilers of these genealogies with records of their own families and other information which they think may be useful. We would suggest that all facts of interest illustrating family history or character be communicated, especially service under the United States Government, the holding of other offices, graduation from college or professional schools, and occupation, with places and dates of birth, marriage, residence, and death. All names should be given in full if possible. No initials should be used when the full name is known.

GEORGE ROBERT WHITE

Communicated by Mrs. Harriet J. (White) Bradbury of Boston, Mass.

George Robert White, of Boston, Mass., a generous contributor to the Building Fund of the New England Historic Genealogical Society in 1911 and a Pilgrim Tercentenary member of the Society since 1920, was born at Lynnfield, Mass., 19 July 1847, the son of John Henry Pierce White and Elizabeth White, and died at his home in Boston on 27 January 1922.

His father was a soldier in the Mexican War, and on 2 September 1861 enlisted from Acton, Mass., for service in the Civil War, being enrolled as a sergeant in Company E, Twenty-sixth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry. He was promoted to a second lieutenancy 22 July 1862, was made a first lieutenant 19 November 1862, and died in the service at New Orleans, La., 10 July 1863.

For many years George Robert White was a dominant figure in the business world as head of the Potter Drug & Chemical Corporation, and was widely known as an art patron and philanthropist.

He received his education in the public schools of Acton and Boston, and at the early age of seventeen years entered the employ of Weeks & Potter of Boston — the firm in which he ultimately became a partner. He continued at his humble duties with a persistency which brought achievement to him from the beginning. Whenever there was a new task to be performed it was assigned to the enterprising youth, who did not shrink from it, but carried it out to the best of his abilities and daily laid the foundation of his future success. His promotion was steady and rapid, and in a short time he was made a salesman with more and larger possibilities. His next step was to the position of head salesman, and at the age of twenty-six his employers, who were quick to appreciate and to take advantage of his inherent abilities, admitted Mr. White to the firm.

In 1883, with Andrew G. Weeks and Warren B. Potter, he organized the Potter Drug & Chemical Company, which has since developed into one of the largest and most successful firms in its line in the country.

As president of the Potter Drug & Chemical Corporation, Mr. White reached the zenith of his career. Possessing in a large degree the qualities essential to the care and management of large and diversified interests, the broadening influence of his organizing ability helped to give him that self-reliance and initiative which brought such a large and substantial measure of success to his efforts. In his business he was typical of New England's best, for he worked in the spirit of coöperation; and nothing pleased him more than to be of service to mankind, for his life was indissolubly linked with the progress and the development of his enterprise.

By unremitting energy and the closest application to business, and at all times concerned in the interests and furtherance of the welfare of his employees, Mr. White demonstrated in full measure his promptitude in meeting the demands of every situation, and his self-elevation to prominence among the great captains of industry was but a manifestation of those telling qualities of the practical man of affairs. Mr. White's commercial career was marked less by sensational advances than by sturdy application to his duties and a persistent passion for success.

While he was ostensibly inactive during his later years, his finger was on the pulse of his business every moment, and his mind was constantly at work on the solution of its many problems.

As an associate said of him, "Mr. White was one of God's own gentlemen. He was a man of powerful force, but always approachable and genial. One never had the feeling that he was an employer. One felt that he was a fellow-worker, for he made the business a great family affair. There were no formalities in his office, for he had worked himself up from the bottom and he never forgot it."

Keen as was his commercial instinct, this knowledge of real-estate investment was equally marked. Mr. White's real-estate career, which resulted in his holding some of the richest properties in the Tremont Street business area and in paying the largest single tax bill in the city of Boston, began with the purchase of a building on Pleasant Street. The coming of the subway, with its terminus at that point, greatly increased his investment, and from that time on he continued to invest with a keen insight to future increases in valuation. He also purchased numerous sites on Boylston Street and constructed the building which bears his name, and later added large properties on Tremont Street and on Washington Street to his holdings.

The people of Boston knew comparatively little about Mr. White, for his business and personal affairs were his own to the very last. Few successful business men were more reticent than he, and few declined publicity with more insistence, although he gladly served on the Committee of Public Safety appointed by the Governor of Massachusetts, and contributed liberally to the Red Cross and other war funds.

Mr. White was brought into notice as a philanthropist through his gift of $1,000,000 for the new building of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and his numerous gifts to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. The new building of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy is constructed of tapestry brick and Indiana limestone. An impressive entrance is approached by a broad flight of granite steps leading to the pillared portico, beneath which are the wonderfully wrought bronze doors, the work of Sidney Woollett, a Boston sculptor. One represents the ancient empirical pharmacy and the other the modern scientific pharmacy, in their main panels, and in the minor panels are the allegorical figures and signs significant of the art.

These doors typify in a manner Mr. White's love and desire for the beautiful. In this structure the hand of the sculptor and artisan play a striking part.

For a great many years Mr. White was deeply interested in the fine arts and was an appreciative art collector.

Mr. White did much to make the Boston Museum of Fine Arts a large success, constantly subscribing generously to its maintenance fund and to the fund for the purchase of paintings. He also donated many rare works of art, notably two tapestries, identified as having been woven in Brussels in the early part of the seventeenth century, from designs made by Rubens for a series representing the life of Achilles. Among other objects of art with which the name of Mr. White was associated was "Bacchante," a bronze statue by Frederick MacMonnies, which found a place in the Museum through his generosity. He was also a heavy contributor to the Egyptian Exploration Fund of the Museum.

His keen sense of the artistic and beautiful is also shown in his wonderfully constructed summer home, "Lilliothea," at Smith's Point, Manchester by the Sea, whose lofty towers and exalted dormers are typical of the French château and the architecture of the Renaissance period. This château, with its magnificently laid out grounds, was planned and directed to completion by Mr. White, and its interior decorations and furniture were personally selected by him.

In public service and private philanthropy, a benefactor to his fellow men; in character, an example to be followed with constancy; in accomplishments, preëminent among his associates, Mr. White mastered the details of his undertakings, and by industry and perseverance laid the foundation of a career whose usefulness was far-reaching. His traditions taught him that the elements of success are native ability, training, and experience, and not inherited wealth or position. His standards were high and his efforts unceasing, and those associated with him soon learned to appreciate his benign traits of human character, and the community looked upon him as an intelligent and progressive business leader — a true type of American citizenry.

He took a marked interest in the welfare of his home city, and in his later years, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Frederick T. Bradbury (with whom he had always made his home), frequently drove out in the afternoon to enjoy the fresh air and sunshine. Others may have selected the picturesque fens and parkways or the shaded avenues of the suburbs, but not so with Mr. White. His thoughts were in the heart of the city, where he might observe its people and its business structures. He knew every avenue and thoroughfare, and each historical episode and association had a vivid place in his memory. He never strolled along the pathways of Boston Common without a passing remark on the surrounding buildings and their upkeep, for he took a personal pride in the mention of structures which he considered a credit to his city. No doubt it was during these days that Mr. White was quietly planning for the edifices and buildings for which he left to his home city, in his will, property to the value of $5,000,000, as a fund with which to carry into reality the workings of his mind for public utility and art — his love for the beautiful and his pride in his community.

He lived the early years of his life in South Acton, a place for which he always held tender memories, as shown by his bequest of $25,000 to the town of Acton, as a permanent fund in memory of his mother, the income to be used in the aid of the worthy poor, especially widows.

Mr. White was elected a director of the First National Bank of Boston, 14 January 1908, a trustee of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, 11 January 1911, a trustee of the Forest Hills Cemetery, and a trustee of the Gray Herbarium, and continued as such until his death.

He was also a member of the Boston Athletic Association, the Merchants Club, the Boston City Club, the Boston Art Club, the Algonquin Club, the Brookline Country Club, the Essex County Club, and the Eastern Yacht Club.

He never married, and is survived by one sister, Mrs. Frederick T. Bradbury, who since 1920 has been a Pilgrim Tercentenary member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society.

JOHN WINCHESTER OF NEW ENGLAND AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS

By Henry Winchester Cunningham, A.B., of Milton, Mass.

73. William[6] Winchester (Lieut. William,[5] John,[4] John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), born, probably at Reading, in 1759 and baptized at the First Church at Lynnfield (then the Second Parish of Lynn) 10 Feb. 1760, died at Leverett 22 Dec. 1843, aged 84. He married, before 1786, Esther ——— (perhaps Esther More or Moore of Southborough or Marlborough), who died at Leverett 22 Aug. 1834, aged 70.

He was taken by his parents to Southborough when an infant, grew up there, and served in the Revolution from that town. In 1793 he, with his brother-in-law Alvin Moore, moved to Leverett, in Franklin Co., where he passed the rest of his life, a period of about fifty years.

He left no surviving children, and by his will, dated 12 Jan. 1839, bequeathed his property to his niece and her children.

Child:

74. Jacob Bancroft[6] Winchester (Lieut. William,[5] John,[4] John,[3] John,[2] John[1]), born at Southborough 6 July 1762, died there 24 Aug. 1842. He married at Framingham, 3 Mar. 1786, Elizabeth Larned, born 4 Aug. 1764, died at Salem 30 June 1833, daughter of Jedediah and Mary (Grant).

When a youth he was apprenticed to John Fowle, a soap and candle manufacturer of Watertown, and while there, at the age of fourteen, being anxious to enter the Army, he was allowed to become a waiter under his father, who was then a captain, and served through the whole Revolutionary War, rising to the rank of corporal. After the completion of his apprenticeship at Watertown he married and moved to Danvers, where he lived for a year and where his son Fitch was born. He next resided for a few years in Salem, then returned to Danvers for a year or two, and finally settled in Salem, where he lived until 1838, when he returned to his boyhood home, Southborough, and spent there the last four years of his life. During his fifty years at Salem and Danvers he had a soap and candle factory and carried on an extensive and profitable business, selling to William Gray, the eminent merchant, and exporting on his own account. For a time, also, he kept the Old Bell Tavern at Danvers. He represented Salem in the Legislature, was an original member of the Salem Cadets in 1786, and later was an officer in the Massachusetts Militia. He received as bounty for his services in the Revolution a tract of land at Mars Hill, Me.

Oliver Fisher Winchester was the well-known rifle manufacturer, and an able, prosperous, and public-spirited citizen. His father died when he was a few months old, leaving a widow with a large family and with slender means, so that Oliver was early thrown upon his own resources. He spent his first years upon a farm, and about 1830 went to Baltimore, where he was successful in building up a prosperous business. About 1847 he removed to New Haven and engaged in manufacturing, and towards the close of the Civil War organized the Winchester Arms Company, makers of the rifle that has made his name famous the world over. He was interested in many other enterprises in New Haven, and was not only successful and wealthy but also public-spirited and benevolent in all that pertained to the city and the State. He rendered patriotic service during the Civil War, and in 1867 was Lieutenant Governor of Connecticut. He was a liberal contributor to Yale College, particularly to the Scientific School, and in 1875 gave to Yale a tract of thirty-six acres of land, to establish an astronomical and physical observatory. His name was originally William, but by act of the Legislature, 8 Feb. 1823, he was allowed to add Parsons as a middle name, probably to distinguish him from his two cousins named William, father and son (56 and 109), both of West Roxbury. He married in Boston, 17 Oct. 1822, Eliza Gill Bradlee, born in Boston 24 Dec. 1802, died 26 Sept. 1890, daughter of Thomas Downs and Mary (Perry) of Boston.

He owed his military title of colonel to the fact that he was for several years colonel of the Independent Corps of Cadets of Boston. He was a public-spirited citizen and an eminent and wealthy merchant of Boston, succeeding his father as the head of the firm of E., A. & W. Winchester, and he was also a director in the Merchants Bank. He lived on Franklin Place (now Franklin Street) in Boston, and a few years before his death built on the bank of the Charles River in Watertown one of the handsomest and most elaborate country places of that day. In both of these houses he was a most hospitable host.* He was also owner of the schooner yacht Northern Light, one of the largest and most famous yachts of those early days. The town of Winchester in Middlesex Co., Mass., which was incorporated in 1850, was named for him.

THE ENGLISH HOME OF CAPT. HUGH MASON OF WATERTOWN, MASS.

Communicated by Charles Francis Mason, A.B., of Plymouth, Mass.

Hugh Mason, tanner, aged 28, with his wife Hester, aged 22, came to New England in the spring of 1634 from Ipswich, co. Suffolk, in the Francis, and settled in Watertown, Mass. He was admitted freeman 4 Mar. 1634/5, held various town offices, including that of selectman, which he held for twenty-nine years in all, was a deputy to the General Court ten years, and was captain from 1652 until his death on 10 Oct. 1678. His widow died 21 May 1692. They were the ancestors of a large and well-known New England family.

The late J. Henry Lea communicated to the Register, vol. 54, page 189, abstracts of records found in one of the Act Books of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, which showed that on 16 May 1702 a commission was issued to Benjamin Franklin,* attorney for John and Joseph Mason, sons of Hugh Mason, late of Watertowne in New England, deceased, to administer during the absence and for the use of said sons, and that on the same date a commission was issued to the said Franklin, attorney for John and Joseph Mason, sons of Hester Mason, widow, late of Water Towne in New England, deceased, to administer during the absence and for the use of said sons.

The clue given by these records published in the Register has been followed by the contributor of the present article, and has led recently to the discovery in the Public Record Office, London, among the records of proceedings in Chancery, of documents that connect the Watertown settler and his wife with the borough of Maldon, co. Essex. Abstracts of these documents, giving, in present-day spelling (except for proper names), whatever statements are of genealogical interest, follow.

From Chancery Proceedings†

19 June 1702. To the Right Honorable Sir Nathan Wright, Knight, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England.

Humbly complaining shew unto your Lordships your orators, John and Joseph Mason, sons of Hugh Mason, late of Water Towne in New England, in parts beyond the seas, yeoman, and of Hester his wife, both deceased, which Hester was one of the daughters and devisees of Thomas Wells the Elder, deceased, and one of the sisters and coheirs of Thomas Wells, son and heir of the aforesaid Thomas Wells, late of Maulden in the county of Essex, yeoman, likewise deceased, and Benjamine Franckling of London,

*This Benjamin Franklin, who appears also in the records of the Chancery case given below as "Benjamine Franckling of London, dyer," was an uncle of Benjamin Franklin, the American statesman and philosopher, who in his autobiography calls him a "silk dyer of London." He was born at Ecton, co. Northampton, 23 Mar. 1650/1, a son of Thomas and Jane (White) Franklin, emigrated to Boston, Mass., in 1715, whither his younger brother Josiah, father of the American patriot, had preceded him in 1684, and died in Boston 17 Mar. 1727/8. He left two quarto volumes of his own poems. — J. Gardner Bartlett.

dyer, administrator not only of all the goods, chattels, rights, and credits which were of and did belong to the said Hugh Mason at the time of his death but also of all the goods, chattels, rights, and credits which were of and did belong to her, the said Hester, who survived the said Hugh Mason, at the time of her death, that the said Thomas Wells, the father, in his lifetime, that is to say, on or about the seventeenth day of December, which was in the year of Our Lord 1624, being seised in fee or of some other estate of inheritance of and in all that piece or parcel of meadow or pasture land called or known by the name of Little Portland, containing by estimation four acres and a half, more or less, with the appurtenances, lying and being in Mauldon aforesaid, and which was then in the tenure or occupation of Michaell Coop[er] or his assigns, and also of and in all that messuage or tenement in which he then dwelt, lying and being in Fulbridge Street in Maulden aforesaid, and the houses, buildings, stable yards, gardens, and orchards thereunto belonging or therewith then used as part, parcel, or member thereof, with the appurtenances, made his last will and testament in writing, duly executed, and bearing date on or about the said seventeenth day of December, in the said year of Our Lord 1624, and thereby he devised in these or the like words, that is to say, I devise and give unto my son Thomas Wells and to the heirs of his body lawfully to be begotten all that my close or parcel of meadow or pasture called Little Portland, containing by estimation four acres and a half, more or less, with the appurtenances, lying and being in Mauldon aforesaid, and which is now in the tenure and occupation of Michaell Cooper or his assigns; and, for default of such issue of his body, then I will the one half of the said parcel of meadow or pasture, with the appurtenances, to remain unto Hellene, my daughter, now wife of Moses Catmer, shoemaker, and to her heirs, and the other moiety of the same to remain unto Hester Wells, my youngest daughter, and to her heirs for ever. Item, I do devise and give the messuage in which I dwell and the houses, buildings, stable yards, gardens, and orchards thereunto belonging or therewith used as part or parcel thereof, with the appurtenances, in manner following, that is to say, the one half of the said messuage, gardens, orchards, and premises thereunto belonging, with the appurtenances, unto the said Hellene, my daughter, and to the heirs of her body lawfully begotten, and the other moiety of the said messuage and premises, with the appurtenances, unto the said Hester Wells and to the heirs of her body lawfully to be begotten; and if both my said daughters happen to die without issue lawfully begotten, then I will the said messuage and premises, with the appurtenances, shall remain to the said Thomas, my son, and to his heirs and assigns for ever. And your orators further shew that the said Tho: Wells, the father, also in his said will devised the care and education of his said younger children, Hester and Thomas, unto his brother-in-law, Simon Raye, until they and either of them should be of competent age and years and of ability of body to be put forth and placed in service, as by the said will, had your orators the same to produce to this Honorable Court, more fully might and would appear. Soon after the making of which said will, that is to say, about the end of the month of December, in the year of Our Lord 1624 aforesaid, he, the said Tho: Wells, the father, departed this life, being then unmarried, and leaving issue, the said Hellene, Hester, and Tho: Wells, his only children, and after whose death, about the third day of February following, the said Simon Raye proved the said will, whereof he was therein made executor, in due form of law, and took on him the burthen and execution thereof, and afterwards, that is to say, about the month of December, in the year of Our Lord 1631, he, the said Tho: Wells, the son, departed this life, being then under the age of twenty-one years and unmarried and leaving no issue of his body and without making any disposition of his estate, the said Hellene and Hester surviving him, whereby the est te devised and that pertained to him as aforesaid, by the said will or by descent, came to them, the said Hellene and Hester, as devisees by the said will or as sisters and coheirs of him, the said Tho: Wells, the son. And the said Hellene and Hester or those who were intrusted to do the same on their behalf entered into and became seised of his said premises. And afterwards, that is to say about the month of January, in the year of Our Lord 1632, she, the said Hester, intermarried with Hugh Mason, then of Maldon aforesaid, tanner, and since of Water Towne in New England, in parts beyond the seas. And your orators further shew that the said Hugh Mason and Hester, sometime after their marriage, that is to say, about the year of Our Lord 1633 or the year of Our Lord 1634, went out of this Kingdom of England into New England in America, in parts beyond the seas, aforesaid, and afterwards, that is to say, the 29 day of September, in the year of Our Lord 1654, being then in England, the said Hugh Mason, by his deed then dated, demised and granted unto one Giles Cole of Maldon aforesaid all that his moiety of the said piece or parcel of land called Little Portland for the term of the natural life of him, the said Hugh Mason (in case she, the said Hester, should so long live), at the yearly rent of three pounds per annum, which rent the said Giles Cole in his deed then made and duly executed did for himself and his assigns covenant and agree with the said Hugh Mason well and faithfully to pay to the said Hugh Mason accordingly. . . . Afterwards, that is to say, in the year of Our Lord 1655, she, the said Hellene, wife of the said Moses Catmer and one of the daughters of the said Thomas Wells, the father, departed this life without making any disposition of her share of the said premises or any part thereof and without issue of her body, the said Hester surviving her, whereby her share of the said premises did descend unto her, the said Hester, according to the said will or as next heir at law to her, the said Hellene, after whose death the said Hugh and Hester Mason entered and became seised of all the said premises in right of her, the said Hester, in fee, etc.

The answer of Benjamin Smith, one of the defendants to the bill of complaint of John Mason and Joseph Mason, etc. The said defendant saith that John Cole of Swilland in the county of Suffolk, yeoman, being seised and in peaceable possession of a moiety of a certain close of land called Portlands, containing by estimation four acres, more or less, in the parish of St. Peter's in Maldon, of an estate of inheritance in fee simple, being, as this defendant believes, part of the lands and tenements in the complainants' said bill of complaint mentioned, . . . in the tenure or occupation of John Paine, gard[e]ner, or his assigns, abutting on a parcel of land called Beau Meade towards the north, etc.

No record of the birth or marriage of Hugh Mason is to be found in the registers of the Maldon parishes, but the following entry in the register of the parish of St. Mary, in Maldon, may refer to a kinsman of the Watertown settler:

1631 Joseph Mason and Mary Houatt married 1 November.

THE CHATFIELD FAMILY OF DERBY, CONN.

By Donald Lines Jacobus, M.A., of West Haven, Conn.

The descent of the American Chatfields from the armigerous family of Chatfield of South Mundham in Pagham, co. Sussex, England, has been set forth in the Register, vol. 70, pages 55–65, 125–136. Three sons of Henry Chatfield of Pagham emigrated to New England in 1639, and settled in Guilford, Conn. Of these, Francis[1] died without issue, Thomas[1] removed to Easthampton, Long Island, and left issue, and George[1] died at Killingworth, Conn., leaving two sons, John[2] and George.[2]* Of the two last-named, George[2] remained at Killingworth, leaving descendants there, while John[2] settled in Derby, Conn. It is the purpose of the present article to set forth the descendants of John[2] Chatfield for four generations.

Some account of this family has appeared in Orcutt's "History of Derby, Conn.," Springfield, Mass., 1880, page 709, in "Seymour Past and Present," by Messrs. Campbell, Sharpe, and Bassett, Seymour, Conn., 1902, page 418, and in "The Chatfield Family," by William C. Sharpe, Seymour, Conn., 1896. The material in these accounts was drawn chiefly from vital records and private family sources, and probate and other records were obviously not consulted in their preparation; the present article aims to supply omissions and correct errors in the previous accounts, and will omit lines that have been adequately set forth in them.

1. John[2] Chatfield, son of George[1] and his second wife, Isabel (Nettleton), was born at Guilford, Conn.,† 8 Apr. 1661, and died at Derby in 1747/8. He settled in Derby, and married there, 5 Feb. 1684/5, Anna Harger, born at Stratford 23 Feb. 1667/8, daughter of Jabez and Margaret (Tomlinson).

*The names of the children are correctly given in the History of Derby, but The Chatfield Family and Seymour Past and Present omit the last three children, and the last-named authority adds two spurious children who really belonged to John[4] Chatfield (6).

†Gershom Blackman, son of Anne Chatfield, died 14 Sept. 1751 (Derby records).

‡The children by the first wife have been omitted in all previous accounts, and the son Daniel is incorrectly called son of William in Anderson's History of Waterbury, vol. 1, appendix, p. 35.

§my father soon after he became of Age opened a Store on Greens Wharf in this Town under the patronage of Mr. Bourne, where he continued some Years and then failed. soon after this the troubles commenced between this Country & great Britain, which had of course a very depressive effect on business of every kind, and opperated particularly hard upon those Individuals who were unfortunate about that time. the troubles continuing & increasing he was never after able to recover his Situation in business, and for several Years maintained his family by writing for public Offices and for Private Individuals (he was a very good penman). — When the war broke out in 1774 he entered into military Service (in what Capacity I do not precisely know but beleive as private Clerk or Secretary to Genl. Nixon) — in this Situation he continued untill the Year 1778 when he entered the Naval Service on board the Ship Mifflin as Captains Clerk and died at Sea the 13th. Jany. following, leaving my mother very poor. [This footnote is in the original record.]

9 O Clock in the morning. — At the age of Seven I was put to the Town school under the care of Mr. James Carter where I continued untill I was Eleven Years old when I was put as an Apprentice to Mr. Nathan Bond, Merchant, with whom I continued in that capacity untill I was 18, during which period I went to Evening and to Morning Writing Schools, and to an English Grammer School, wh. gave me all the Education I ever had the happiness to receive. as soon after I arrived at the Age of Eighteen, Mr. Bond having commenced a new business which was not accordant to my inclinations, I felt it to be my duty to leave him, which I accordingly (tho'. very reluctently) did, and went to live with Saml. Leonard Esq. of Taunton, whom I served in the Capacity of Clerk from that time untill five months previous to my being of age, when I went to Wareham (in the County of Plymouth) and superintended the building of a Forge and several other buildings for Mr. Leonard — opened a Store of Goods and commenced business in this line & that of the Manufacture of Iron, in Company with said Leond. and in which I continued untill Octr 1792, when, not succeeding agreeably to my expectations, I removed to Boston and opened an English Goods shop — but not being able to obtain a good situation for this business, I concluded, after about six Months trial, to relinquish it. — I then by the advise of my brother determined to go into the bookselling business as soon as I had acquired a competant knowledge of it, to obtain which I took a situation in his store, where I continued untill the 8th. January 1794 when I opened a bookstore at No. 75 Cornhill and where I at present continue business and reside with my family. — I married on the 25th. March 1792 Nabby Crocker (daughter of Mr. Josiah & Mrs. Abigail Crocker of Taunton*), by whom I have had four Children — three of which are now living.†

†John West, the writer of this section of the records, was the publisher of the second Boston Directory. He moved to Taunton in 1809, and built a house there in 1810–11. In Atwood's Reminiscences of Taunton, pp. 167–168, he is described as "a gentleman of the old school, of a warm-hearted and generous disposition," a man who gave freely to charitable objects. He was "prominent among those who raised the fund for the Unitarian Society." He was a member of the firm of West, Richardson & Lord, of Boston, wholesale dealers in books and stationery, and he retained his interest in this firm after removing to Taunton. In company with Capt. Richard Park he carried on the business of manufacturing paper in a mill which he had built at West Taunton. This business finally passed into the hands of Captain Park. After a while Mr. West sold his interest in the Boston firm and built the so-called West Factory, which was run for many years but did not net much profit to the owner in the end. He also carried on a farming business, chiefly of the fancy kind, where more money was spent, probably, than was made. — G. W. J.

FROM THE RECORDS OF THE COURT OF REQUESTS*

[After 30 September 1594.] The bill of ROGER PEMBERTON of St. Albans in the county of Hertford, gentleman, and ROBERT GROOME of the parish of Redbourne in the said county, yeoman, recites that one Thomas Sibley, late of Redbourne, deceased, was in his life seised in his demesne as of fee of one messuage or toft and one acre of land in Redbourne, and held the same of Your Majesty, before you came to the crown, as of your manor of Redbourne, [as] by copy of the court roll doth appear. The said Thomas Sibley about the fourth or fifth year of your sister, Queen Mary, being on his deathbed, surrendered his lands, according to the custom of the manor, into your hands, by some of the customary tenants, to the use of Joan Sibley, then the wife of the said Thomas, and after her decease to the use of Edward Sibley, son of the said Thomas, and his heirs, and the said Thomas died; and at the next court at Redburn it was presented by the homages that Thomas Sibley was dead, and that in life he had surrendered the said lands to the use of Joan, his wife, for life, and then to the said Edward Sibley and his heirs. The said Joan appeared and prayed to be admitted, and she was admitted and paid her fine therefor. Thereafter, on 30 June, 1 Elizabeth [1559], Edward Sibley came and desired to be admitted to the reversion after the death of the said Jone or her surrender or forfeiture. By the Queen Majesty's steward seisin was granted to him and his heirs in reversion, and Edward Sibley paid his fine and did fealty and was admitted to the reversion on the decease, forfeiture, or surrender of Joane, his mother. At a Court holden 30 June, 1 Elizabeth [1559], the homages found that Edward Sibley surrendered all his interest to the use of Vincent Roade, son of Sir Richard Roade, Knight, and his heirs, and the said Vincent Road, being then present, was given seisin and paid his fine and was admitted to the reversion.

Afterwards, to wit, in 5 Elizabeth [1562–63], Johane Sibley died, and Roade entered, as was lawful, and in 18 Elizabeth [1575–76] he surrendered the said messuage and one acre, amongst other things, by the name of one cottage with a garden near Redburne Heath and one acre late Edward Sibley's to the use of Francis Sylls, and at a court held 28 November, 19 Elizabeth [1576], the said Francis was admitted.

On 18 September, 35 Elizabeth [1593], the said Sylls surrendered the lands in question to the use of Roger Pemberton. That same day Roger Pemberton was admitted. On 30 September, 36 Elizabeth [1594], Roger Pemberton let the said messuage to Robert Grome for three years. But now John Beeche the Elder of Jerames in the parish of Redburn, yeoman, and one Robert Sybley of Redburn, yeoman, and one John Sybley of Hartingfordbury, yeoman, combining to trouble your orators, have obtained unlawfully all copies of the said court roll, and they have suborned some of the stewards or clerks to get the court rolls, and they claim that the said lands must descend unto Robert Sibley, the eldest son of the said Thomas. The witnesses and homages are all dead, and Beeche is setting on the said Robert Sibley, and he it is who will pay the expenses. And to give semblance to his title, the said Robert has colorably leased the premises to John Sybley. Your orators pray for a writ of subpœna, etc.

The answer of ROBERT SIBLEY. He denies the surrender of the reversion to Edward Sibley, and says that he himself was absent at the time and therefore could not enter at his father's death; and he further states that he made his leases of the premises by advice of learned counsel. (Court of Requests, B. 36, no. 53.)

[The names of the taxpayers in the entries in the Lay Subsidies given above are those of relatives or connections of Roger Williams, the Robert Pemberton mentioned there being undoubtedly his grandfather. The Roger Pemberton of the case in the Court of Requests and of the memorial brass was the uncle and godfather of Roger Williams; for Alice Pemberton, sister of Roger, married James Williams, citizen and merchant tailor of London, and they were the parents of Roger Williams. For Roger Pemberton's will see REGISTER, vol. 43, pp. 294–295, and "Genealogical Gleanings in England," vol. 1, p. 331. He was high sheriff of Herts in 1618, and was the heir of his cousins, Robert and Roger Stokes, abstracts of whose wills are published in the REGISTER, vol. 43, p. 294, and in "Genealogical Gleanings in England," vol. 1, pp. 330–331. They were sons of Roger Stokes, the testator whose will is given in abstract above. Roger Pemberton's son Ralph, who was mayor of St. Albans in 1627 and 1638, was, by his wife Frances, daughter of Francis Kempe, the father of Sir Francis Pemberton (1625–1697), Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench and afterwards of the Common Pleas (1681–1683).]

FROM THE REGISTERS OF ST. ALBANS ABBEY, CO. HERTS

FROM THE PARISH REGISTERS OF PUTNEY, CO. SURREY

1637 The wife of Sidrach Williams, gentleman, buried 10 July.

FROM THE RECORDS OF THE COURT OF REQUESTS*

[Circa 1636.] The complaint of SIDRACH WILLIAMS of Putney in the county of Surry, gentleman, shews that for many years since passed he has used to trade and traffic in the way of merchandise, as was well known to William Langhorne and Thomas Harbie, who about 1625 were partners and both resident at Legorne in Italy, as factors for divers merchants. They solicited the complainant to send them from England a ship laden with red herrings, and the complainant was to credit them with one-fourth of the said herrings. Accordingly, in 1625, your complainant went from London to Great Yarmouth, and hired the ship Mayflower of Yarmouth, of 240 tons, Walter Wallward master. The complainant then bought 1475 barrels of red herrings to send to Langhorne and Harbin, and he shipped one-fourth for the use of the said Langhorne and Harbin, which amounted to £430. 6s. 9d. In December 1625 the Mayflower sailed from Yarmouth, and arrived in convenient time at Legorne in Italie; and the barrels of herrings were discharged and delivered to them. And now your complainant hoped that they would pay him the money due him for the cost and charge of one-fourth of the said herrings; but they have utterly refused so to pay, and the said Harby is now since deceased, and the said money is due for about eleven years. The complainant prays that Langhorne may answer whether about 1625 he was a partner of Harby, and whether they were resident in Legorne as factors to several merchants in the said country, and if, either alone or with Harby, he did not write letters to the complainant to send a shipload of red herrings, they to have one-fourth on their own account, and if he did not so send the Mayflower of Yarmouth with 1475 barrels of red herrings, and whether they did not receive them, and why they have not paid him for one-fourth thereof.

The answer of WILLIAM LANGHORNE. The defendant denies that either Harby or himself did solicit the said Williams to send the ship laden with red herrings, but says that at the time mentioned he had his abode at Legorne and the complainant dwelt in London. The complainant was willing to adventure to those parts, and asked the defendants to advise him concerning prices at Legorne, which he did. The defendant confesses that Thomas Harby was in the adventure of herrings, but denies that either Harby or himself ever asked the complainant to give them credit for a one-fourth part thereof, nor did they need the complainant's credit, for Thomas Harby then paid to the complainant in London £420 on account, namely, twelve shillings more than a one-fourth part of the herrings came unto, as is witnessed under the complainant's hand and is ready to be produced in court, and there a one-fourth part was set forth in the bill to the use of the said Harby; and the defendant denies that it amounted to £430. 9s. 9d. He confesses that the ship did arrive safely at Legorne and the said barrels were delivered to the defendants upon the agreement.

The account was made up about December 1625, and it there appears that the one-fourth part came up to less than the £420 paid to the complainant, namely, he was overpaid, as well as 12s. 12d. [sic] and £42. 8s. 4d. that was owing by the complainant to the defendant and Harby for their half part of the net proceeds of 20 barrels of argol, and this credit later was allowed by the complainant. Moreover, two years after, in 1627, the defendant came to London from Leghorn, and had other tradings with the complainant for 290 pigs of lead, and the complainant in the account allowed them for other sums of money owing them. Thomas Harby is now dead, and he died in Florence, in parts beyond the seas, about five or six years agone, and he had been a short time before in London, where he was for six months, and this complainant never made any demand and never claimed any such thing as is now contained in this pretended bill of complaint. (Court of Requests, uncalendared, Charles I, B. 44, part 2.)

[Sidrach Williams was a brother of Roger Williams; and in the REGISTER, vol. 75, pp. 234–235, records in Chancery cases were published which described some of his activities as a merchant of London and proved that he was the brother whom Roger Williams called "a Turkey merchant in London." The records printed in this article reveal him as trading with the Italian port of Leghorn and as residing at Putney, near London, in 1636 and 1637.]

[The Zinzan wills are interesting, for Andrew Zinzan was one of the witnesses to the nuncupative will of Rev. Roger Williams of St. Albans, declared 26 June 1619. Cf. note by the late Henry FitzGilbert Waters, A.M., in Register, vol. 43, p. 295, and in "Genealogical Gleanings in England," vol. 1, p. 332. In the Visitation of Berkshire, 1665–66 (Publications of the Harleian Society, vol. 56, p. 320), there is a pedigree of Zinzan alias Alexander of Tilehurst, from which it appears that Sir Robert Zinzan of St. Albans, co. Herts, married a daughter of ——— Wescot of Hansaker Hall, co. Stafford. They were the parents of Henry Zinzan, the eldest son, of Walton upon Thames, co. Surrey, who married Elizabeth, daughter of ——— Alder of Reading; of Robert Zinzan, second son, who died s.p.; of Sir Sigismund Zinzan, third son, of Molesey, co. Surrey, who married Margaret, daughter of Sir Philip Sterley of Sterley, co. Notts, Knight, died in 1663, and had children, who are entered in the pedigree; of Mary, who married ——— Digby; and of Dulcibella, who married ——— Williams of St. Albans. The wife of Rev. Roger Williams of St. Albans, to whom in his nuncupative will of 26 June 1619 he left all his estate, was named Affradosa, and, as Mrs. Aphrodoza Moore, widow, had been married to Mr. Roger Williams at St. Albans, 7 June 1613, a little more than two months after the burial of his former wife, Alice (Asheton), whom he had married nearly thirty years earlier. Mrs. Aphrodoza Williams was daughter of Alexander Zinzan of St. Michael in St. Albans, gentleman, and widow of William Moore of St. Albans, gentleman. Cf. Register, vol. 43, pp. 296, 297. Who was the Williams of St. Albans who married Dulcibella, daughter of Sir Robert Zinzan?]

MEMOIRS OF DECEASED MEMBERS OF THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

Prepared by Rev. Lewis Wilder Hicks, M.A., Historian

1922*

Kirkland Hopkins Gibson, A.B., of Chestnut Hill, Mass., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1921, was born at Medford, Mass., 12 January 1881, the son of George Alonzo and Emily Ruth (Dickinson) Gibson, and died at Chestnut Hill 18 December 1922. His father, whom he succeeded as a Pilgrim Tercentenary member, had died only about a year and seven months previously, on 2 May 1921, and a memoir of him may be found in the Supplement to the Register of April 1922. His mother was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, 20 July 1851, the daughter of Darius Leander Dickinson.

He was prepared for college at the Hopkinson School, Boston, where he was a pupil for six years, graduating in 1899. He then spent a year in Europe, studying and travelling, and entered Harvard in 1900, receiving there the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1904.

Immediately after his graduation from college Mr. Gibson associated himself in business with his father, then treasurer of the Ivers & Pond Piano Company, and later its president; and because of his business affiliations he joined the National Piano Manufacturers' Association and the New England Music Trade Association, and served each as president.

He was also a member of the Union Club, the Country Club, the Boston Athletic Association, and the Eastern Yacht Club.

Mr. Gibson married, 25 April 1905, Florence Warner, daughter of Frederic Harris and Eleanor (Skinner) Warner, who survives him, together with his mother, his two daughters, Eleanor and Ruth Gibson, and his two sons, George Warner Gibson and Kirkland Hopkins Gibson, Jr.

Mrs. Helen Frances (Adams) Dinsmore, of Staatsburgh on the Hudson, N. Y., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1919, was born in Boston 18 October 1845, the daughter of Alvin and Ann Rebecca (Bridge) Adams, and died at her winter home in the Ambassador Hotel, New York City, 22 December 1922.

She was a descendant of Henry[1] Adams of Braintree, Mass., an ancestor of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams, through Lieut. Thomas[2] of Chelmsford, Mass., Peletiah[3] of Chelmsford, Thomas[4] of Chelmsford, Stephen[5] of New Ipswich, N. H., and Andover, Vt., Jonas,[6] who was born at New Ipswich 18 August 1758, married Phebe Hoar (born at New Ipswich 1 March 1765, died at Andover, Vt., 26 February 1813, daughter of Benjamin Hoar, a native of Concord, Mass.), and died at Andover, Vt., 19 February 1813, and Alvin,[7] her father, who was born at Andover, Vt., 16 June 1804 and died at Watertown, Mass., 1 September 1877.

Alvin[7] Adams was the ninth of the eleven children of Jonas and Phebe (Hoar) Adams, and both his parents died within a week of each other, when he was in his ninth year. He remained on the farm, with his eldest brother, Jerry, until he was fifteen years old, then was employed for four or five years at Woodstock, Vt., and in his twentieth year came to Boston and engaged in business. In 1840 he began to go to and fro, between Boston and New York, carrying money and small packages for those who needed this service, and this business grew until it developed into the famous Adams Express Company. He moved from Boston to Watertown in 1862, and became the owner of a beautiful suburban estate in the latter place. He was a life member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society from 1870 until his death, and is gratefully remembered among the Society's benefactors.* He married in Boston, 10 November 1831, Ralph Waldo Emerson officiating at the ceremony, Ann Rebecca Bridge, who was born in Boston 1 November 1809 and died at Watertown 10 January 1882, daughter of John and Rebecca (Beals) Bridge and seventh in descent from Dea. John[1] Bridge of Cambridge, Mass., a statue of whom stands on Cambridge Common, through Matthew,[2] Matthew,[3] Capt. Matthew,[4] Cornet Nathaniel,[5] Nathaniel,[6] A.B. (Harvard, 1782), and John,[7] her father, who was born at Cambridge 25 April 1783 and died at Concord, Mass., 4 March 1870.

Helen Frances Adams was the seventh of the nine children of Alvin Adams. She was educated in private schools in Boston, and was married at Watertown, 22 November 1866, to William Brown Dinsmore, Jr., who was born in New York 21 June 1848 and died at his country estate, "The Locusts," at Staatsburgh on the Hudson, 15 March 1906, the son of William Brown and Augusta Manners (Snow) Dinsmore and a descendant, through his mother, of several of the passengers in the Mayflower. He was an official of the Adams Express Company.

Mrs. Dinsmore was much interested in the study of her various ancestral lines. She was a member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, and, by virtue of her Adams ancestry, she had been admitted to membership in the Society of Colonial Dames of the State of New York.

Three children survive her: Helen Gray Dinsmore, wife of Robert Palmer Huntington, B.A. (Yale, 1891), of "Hopeland House," Staatsburgh on the Hudson, William Brown Dinsmore, A.B. (Harvard, 1893), of New York City, who married Marion de Peyster Carey, and Madeleine Ingraham Dinsmore. One of her grandchildren, Helen Dinsmore Huntington, is the wife of William Vincent Astor of New York City, son of the late Col. John Jacob Astor and his first wife, Alice Willing.

Timothy Hazen Fowler, of Holyoke, Mass., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1919, was born in that part of West Springfield, Mass., which is now the town of Agawam, 14 February 1849, the son of George and Mary Ann (Hazen) Fowler, and died at Holyoke 23 December 1922.

His great-great-grandfather, John Fowler, Jr., who married Elizabeth Ferry, was of Agawam, then a part of Springfield, where his son Bildad and grandson Bildad carried on the line of descent to George Fowler, who was born at Agawam 4 April 1813, and was the father of the subject of this memoir. His mother, born at Agawam 15 May 1824, was the daughter of Rev. Reuben Stedman Hazen of Agawam and his wife, Mary Ann Wood, who was the daughter of Rev. Reuben Wood of Somers, Conn.

Mr. Fowler attended the schools at Agawam and the Connecticut Literary Institute at Suffield, Conn., before entering Eastman's National Business College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he was graduated, with the highest honors, in 1869. The training received at the last-named institution was always highly valued by Mr. Fowler, who had supported himself there by means of the money that he had earned and saved on his father's farm.

In early manhood Mr. Fowler's preference had been for the banking business, and during the year 1879–80 he had the privilege of observer at the National Bank of Columbus, Ohio. Later he had partly arranged to follow banking in a city farther west when his brother's plans for building up a family enterprise induced him to return to Massachusetts. There George F. Fowler, the brother, had organized, in 1881, the Hampden Glazed Paper & Card Company of Holyoke, and it was in the following year that Timothy Hazen Fowler accepted the call and joined the company. In 1883 he was made its secretary and treasurer, and continued in these offices nearly forty years, until his death.

As a successful business man, Mr. Fowler was able to enter into the work of educational and charitable enterprises and became one of the most respected and trusted citizens of his community. For seven years he served as treasurer of the Holyoke Young Men's Christian Association, and was treasurer and a trustee of the Holyoke City Hospital Endowment Fund, a director of two banks and the Holyoke City Library, a trustee and executor of trust funds and wills, and for fourteen years a voluntary financial guardian of a friend's family of eight children.

A genial, dignified, and simple hospitality made his home a centre for many a civic as well as social gathering. Fitting up the upper floor of his spacious house as a lecture hall, Mr. Fowler was able to give the public many highly-prized opportunities of hearing brilliant speakers on topics of the day, who were brought there by his efforts. The same ardor which characterized his energy in business and in civic affairs inspired his work for the Second Congregational Church, where he had taught in the Sunday School, had served on committees, and followed his father as clerk and director of the Ministerial Fund.

A foremost citizen in the industrial world, where the company with which he was connected was recognized as a leading house in paper making, in the civic life of the community, where he supported every good cause with generous gifts and New England principle, in his church relations, where his high faith and unswerving integrity made him a forceful and worthy example, Mr. Fowler will, however, be best remembered by his many friends as he appeared in the atmosphere of his home, where books abounded, modern painting was enjoyed, a luxuriant garden was cultivated, and unstinted hospitality welcomed all who passed through its portals. A business friend wrote of him: "He was a splendid type of our New England business man and citizen. I only wish the present generation more fully met with his standards."

Mr. Fowler married at her brother's home in Chicago, Ill., 14 October 1897, Harriet E. Delano of St. Louis, Mo., daughter of William Avery and Sophia (Hall) Delano, both natives of New England. Mrs. Fowler survives her husband, and has succeeded to his Pilgrim Tercentenary membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society. They had no children.

Elisha Rhodes Brown, of Dover, N. H., a resident member since 1904, was born at Cranston, R. I., 28 March 1847, the son of Colville Dana and Mary Eliza (Rhodes) Brown, and died at Dover 25 December 1922.

On the paternal side he belonged to a distinguished Providence family, being seventh in descent from Elder Chad[1] Brown, one of the original proprietors of the Providence Purchase and a contemporary of Roger Williams, through Elder John,[2] a freeman in 1665, whose great-grandson, John Brown, laid in 1770 the corner stone of University Hall, the first and for many years the only building of the institution now known as Brown University, Elder James,[3] Deputy Gov. Elisha,[4] Elisha,[5] John,[6] and Colville Dana,[7] his father, who was born at Cranston 4 July 1814 and died at Providence 2 January 1898. His mother, Mary Eliza Rhodes, was born at Cranston 22 April 1824 and died at Dover 8 March 1864, the daughter of Elisha Hunt and Eliza Ann (Chace) Rhodes. Mr. Brown was also related to many other men prominent in Rhode Island history, among his ancestors being Roger Williams, Thomas Angell, Gregory Dexter, and Deputy Gov. John Greene.

In the early fifties the family moved to Dover, where Elisha attended the grammar school, which at that time was the high school of the district.

After working for four years as clerk in a dry-goods store, he entered, in 1867, the Strafford National Bank as a teller, and retained his connection with this institution for more than fifty years, being promoted to the position of cashier, 1876, then to that of vice president, and finally to that of president, 1897, an office which he held for about a quarter of a century. He became a trustee of the Strafford Savings Bank in 1883 and its president in 1891, he served as a director of the Boston & Maine and the Boston, Concord & Montreal Railroads and of other corporations, and at the time of his death he was president of the Concord & Portsmouth Railroad. In 1889 he was one of the commissioners from New Hampshire at the celebration, in New York City, of the one hundredth anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington as President of the United States.

Mr. Brown was a senior deacon of the First Parish Congregational Church of Dover, a Republican in politics, and closely affiliated with various Masonic bodies, being a thirty-second degree Mason and an Odd Fellow.

He married at Dover, 18 October 1870, Frances Bickford, daughter of Alphonso Bickford, M.D., and his wife, Mary Joanna (Smith). Of their four sons, the eldest, Alphonso Bickford Brown, B.A. (Yale, 1894), M.D. (Harvard, 1898), died in 1906, while the other three, who survive their father, are Harold Winthrop Brown, A.B. (Harvard, 1897), a banker at Dover, and the twin brothers, Raymond Goold Brown, A.B. (Harvard, 1907), LL.B. (ib., 1910), a lawyer practising in New York City, and Philip Carter Brown, A.B. (Harvard, 1906, as of 1907), S.B. (Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1908), a manufacturer at Dover.

Mrs. Emily Louisa (Kellogg) Moore, of Philadelphia, Pa., a life member since 1921, was born in Philadelphia 28 May 1855, daughter of Henry Clay and Amanda Elizabeth (Knipe) Kellogg, and died there 4 January 1923.

She was seventh in descent from Samuel[1] Kellogg, who was born probably at Braintree, co. Essex, England, son of Martin and Prudence (Bird) Kellogg and grandson of Philippe Kellogg of Bocking and Great Leighs, co. Essex, who was probably the son of Thomas and grandson of Nicholas Kellogg of Debden, co. Essex, 1515. The date of Samuel[1] Kellogg's arrival in this country is not known, his marriage in 1664 to his first wife, Mrs. Sarah (Day) Gunn, who was eventually killed by the Indians, being the first record found of him in New England. He was an owner of a home lot in Hadley, Mass., in 1664, and was instrumental in securing the establishment, in 1670, of the town of Hatfield, where his children were born.

Mrs. Moore's line of descent led from Samuel[1] Kellogg through his son, Lieut. Nathaniel,[2] born 4 June 1671, died 22 August 1757, who moved to Colchester, Conn., in 1699, where his son, Corporal Nathaniel,[3] was born 8 May 1703. The latter married, 1 July 1725, Elizabeth Williams, who was born 13 February 1703 and died 1 April 1762. He died at Windsor, Conn., about 1753. Their son, Charles,[4] born at Colchester 17 September 1726, married, 24 April 1748, Sarah Hitchcock (baptized in 1735), and died at Bolton, Conn., 23 November 1764. Their third child, Russell,[5] born 12 November 1753, married, 20 February 1776, Esther Bridges, daughter of Samuel Bridges of Colchester. Russell Kellogg was a Revolutionary soldier, and served in Spencer's brigade, 7 May to 17 December 1775. They resided in Colchester, where he died before 1813, and where their son, Hosea,[6] was born in 1795.

This scion of the sixth generation in New England, impelled by the pioneer spirit to join the Western migration, started for Cincinnati when about twenty-one years old, but stopped at Philadelphia, where he remained. There he married, 21 March 1821, Elizabeth Helmbold, who was born at Spring Mill, Pa., in May 1796, and died 12 September 1879, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Scheetz) Helmbold. Hosea Kellogg died 17 March 1868.

Their second son, Henry Clay[7] Kellogg, the father of Mrs. Moore, was born 29 May 1824, and married, 27 September 1849, Amanda Elizabeth Knipe of Philadelphia, who was born 9 January 1827 and died at Philadelphia 28 August 1878, daughter of Conrad and Elizabeth (Summers) Knipe. Henry Clay's youngest brother, Rev. Alfred Hosea Kellogg, A.M., D.D., was graduated at Princeton in 1859, studied theology at Princeton Seminary, and was noted as an Egyptologist. He died in 1906.

Emily Louisa Kellogg was graduated at a private school, Miss Eldredge's Institute, which is no longer in existence, and was married, 23 November 1882, to Alfred Fitler Moore, who was born 23 January 1854 and died 18 September 1912, son of Joseph Moore (born 20 February 1816) and his wife Celia Fitler (born 1 February 1820). He was a manufacturer of insulated electric wire and resided in Philadelphia. Their only child, Alfred Fitler Moore, Jr., lived but a month.

Mrs. Moore was noted for her philanthropy, giving her time and means to many people and institutions. She was especially active in the Second Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia and in a day nursery, of which she was treasurer for many years. "She was most gracious and lovable in her manner. Though deaf and in ill health a number of years she never complained."

John Barber White, of Kansas City, Mo., a life member since 1905, was born at Ellery, Chautauqua County, N. Y., 8 December 1847, the son of John and Rebekah (Barber) White, and died at Kansas City 5 January 1923.

He was descended from John[1] White, who was of Salem, Mass., in 1638, where he was received as an inhabitant in August 1639, being granted at the same time land in what is now called Wenham. On this land was built the first sawmill and gristmill in Wenham. In 1647, or about the first of the year 1648, he returned to England, going to Stoke Abbot in Dorsetshire. He probably remained there about a year, and returned to New England, where on 1 May 1653 he became one of the proprietors of the town of Lancaster, Mass. He was the wealthiest inhabitant of this town, and under the rules of apportionment drew the most land. His wife Joan, who was admitted to the First Church at Salem 26 February 1642, died at Lancaster 18 May 1654, nineteen years before her husband, whose will was executed 10 March 1673 and proved 28 May of the same year.

Of their eight children, Mary married Rev. Joseph Rowlandson of Lancaster, and became famous through her narrative of her captivity with her children among the Indians, which followed the Lancaster massacre in February 1675/6; and Josiah,[2] a soldier in King Philip's War under Maj. Simon Willard and Captain Poole, a sergeant in the train band, and commander of a garrison in 1704, was the second link in the American genealogical chain of the subject of this memoir. This Josiah, who was baptized at Salem 4 June 1643 and died at Lancaster 11 November 1714, married, 28 November 1678, as his second wife, Mary Rice, daughter of Thomas and Mary (King) Rice of Marlborough and granddaughter of Edmund Rice, the immigrant, who came from Berkhamsted, co. Herts, England, and was one of the first settlers of Sudbury, Mass., in 1639.

The White line is continued through Josiah,[3] son of Josiah and Mary (Rice), a sergeant in command of a garrison, 1704–1711, who was born at Lancaster 16 September 1682 and died there 5 May 1772, his wife being Abigail Whitcomb, born at Lancaster 13 March 1688, died there 24 September 1771, daughter of Josiah (commander of a garrison, born at Dorchester, Mass., in 1638, died in 1718, son of John, who was born at Dorchester, England) and his wife Rebekah Waters (daughter of Lawrence and Ann (Linton) Waters).

Their son, Josiah,[4] was born at Lancaster 3 January 1714 and died at Rockingham, Vt., 1 September 1806. He married, 14 March 1739, Deborah[4] House, daughter of Joseph[3] (Samuel,[2] Samuel[1] of Scituate, 1634) and Lydia (daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Sylvester) Curtis). Josiah[4] resided in that part of Lancaster which was set off in 1740 to form Leominster, and he built there in 1740 the "Old Abbey," still standing in 1905, where ten brothers, nine of whom served in the Revolutionary War, and five sisters were born. His tombstone bears the following record: "The descendants of Josiah White at his death, Children 15, Grandchildren 160, Great Grandchildren 211, Children deceased, 2, Grandchildren deceased, 26, Great-grandchildren deceased, 35."

His son, Luke,[5] one of the nine brothers who served in the Revolutionary War, was born at Leominster 8 December 1757 and died at Richville, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., 17 March 1837. He married, 30 November 1782, Eunice White, who was born at Charlemont, Mass., 29 March 1766, the daughter of David and Eunice (Butler) White and granddaughter of her husband's uncle, Col. Jonathan White, a man of wealth and education, and a lieutenant colonel in Col. Timothy Ruggles's regiment, 18 February 1756, and a captain in the Worcester regiment of Colonel Ruggles, 29 March 1775. This Eunice White was also fourth in descent from John Prescott, one of the founders of Lancaster, and a granddaughter of Simon Butler, a trumpeter (1757) in Capt. John Carter's company, Oliver Wilder's regiment, in the second expedition to Crown Point.

With John,[6] son of Luke[5] and Eunice (White) White, a manufacturer of lumber in New York and Pennsylvania, who was born at Heath, Mass., 10 June 1805 and died near Ashville, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., 22 May 1852, the line comes to the father of John Barber White.

Mr. White's mother, Rebekah Barber, who was married to his father 7 June 1831, was born at Charlemont 16 January 1807, the daughter of Moses and Rebekah (Butler) Barber. On her father's side she was sixth in descent from Capt. George[1] Barber, a Puritan of distinction, who arrived in this country in 1635 and was one of the first settlers in Dedham and Medfield, Mass., the chief military officer of his district, a captain in King Philip's War, and a member of the Colonial Government; and on her mother's side she was descended from Thomas[1] Barber, the immigrant, who was a sergeant in the Pequot War, and also from Isaiah Zada Butler, a soldier in the Revolutionary War and later a Baptist preacher.

Mr. White was educated at the Jamestown Academy and the Jamestown Union School, Jamestown, N. Y. He lived for a while on a farm, taught school for three winters in country districts, and after his removal to Pennsylvania in 1868 was for six years president of the Board of Education at Youngsville, where, after the death of his son, Dr. John Franklin White, in 1900, he erected a memorial high school.

At the age of twenty-one he entered the business of manufacturing lumber in Pennsylvania, and followed it throughout his life, achieving a wide reputation. In 1880 he removed to Grandin, Mo., where he was postmaster for five years, and in 1892 he took up his residence in Kansas City. The lumber business which he organized in southeastern Missouri in 1880 was expanded from time to time until it included extensive interests in Louisiana and also on the Pacific coast. He was always the guiding spirit and remained the active head of the business until 1920, when his son became his assistant and relieved him to a great extent of the responsibility; but not until 1922 did Mr. White relinquish his active interest. He was secretary, treasurer, and general manager of the Missouri Lumber & Exchange Company, president and general manager of the Missouri Lumber & Mining Company of Grandin, Mo., president of the Louisiana Central Lumber Company, the Forest Lumber Company of Kansas City, the Missouri Tie & Lumber Company of Kansas City, and the Reynolds Land Company of Poplar Bluff, Mo., secretary of the Long Leaf Lumber Company of Louisiana, and president for three years of the Southern Lumber Association, which he organized and of which he became a director. He was also president of the bank at Poplar Bluff and a director of the New England National Bank of Kansas City.

While the lumber business was carried on with such consuming interest, Mr. White was at the same time always interested in the welfare of the community in which he lived and took a prominent part in local and national activities. During his residence in Pennsylvania he served for two years, 1879–80, in the State Legislature, as a member from Warren County. In 1905 he was appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the affairs of the Cass Lake (Minn.) Indian Reservation, a task which he performed with credit to himself and his country. He was further honored by President Roosevelt in 1907 by being selected to be a member of the Commission on the Conservation of National Resources, in the Forestry Department. In 1909 he was appointed by Governor Hadley of Missouri as a member of the State Board of Forestry. Later, in 1912, he became aide-de-camp, with the rank of colonel, on the Governor's staff. In 1916 he was appointed a member of the United States Shipping Board by President Wilson, being one of the original board of commissioners, and served six months in that position, but was compelled by ill health to resign at the end of that time. In 1919 he was appointed a representative of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and of the Chamber of Commerce of Kansas City to the International Trade Conference at Atlantic City, N. J. He was also a member of the permanent executive committee of the Liberty Memorial Association of Kansas City, which raised two million dollars to be expended in the erection of a memorial to Kansas City's soldier dead in the World War.

If Mr. White can be said to have had a hobby, it was that of research in family and town history. He arranged for the publication of several volumes entitled "Descendants of John White, 1638–1900," and also assisted in bringing out the "Genealogical History of the Descendants of John Walker of Wigton, Scotland, 1600–1902," by Emma (Siggins) White, his second wife, whose mother belonged to this old family of Pennsylvania and Virginia. He collected a library of more than four thousand volumes, principally town and family histories.

Mr. White was much interested in the work of the New England Historic Genealogical Society. He was a member of its Committee on English Research from February 1918 until his death, and both before and after his appointment to this committee he was a liberal contributor to its funds. He held membership also in many historical and patriotic societies, including the historical societies of Virginia, Ohio, and Missouri, the Harleian Society of London, England, the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of Missouri, which he had represented as deputy governor general in the General Society, and the Society of Sons of the Revolution. In Masonry he had attained the thirty-second degree.

Mr. White married first, 22 July 1874, Arabell Bowen, who was born in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., and died 16 November 1881, daughter of Daniel Washington Bowen (who was a native of Bristol, Conn., and a grandson of Sergt. Bezaleel Bowen, a Revolutionary soldier, born at Providence, R. I., 6 March 1755, of English parents, died at Bristol, Conn., 10 March 1832, who married Mary Bradly) and his wife, Eliza (Smith). He married secondly, at Youngsville, Pa., 6 December 1882, Emma Siggins, who survives him, daughter of Benjamin B. and Elizabeth (Walker) Siggins. She is historian for the Elizabeth Benton Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Kansas City.

Mr. White's children by his first wife were Dr. John Franklin White, who died unmarried 11 June 1900, and Fanny Arabell White, who married, 8 April 1903, Alfred Tyler Hemingway, survives her father, and has two children. His children by his second wife were Emma Ruth White, who is living unmarried, Jay Barber Walker White, who died in infancy, and Raymond Baird White, who also survives his father.

Arthur Howard Nichols, A.B., M.D., of Boston, a resident member since 1904, was born in Boston 9 September 1840, the son of John Perkins and Mary Ann (Clarke) Nichols, and died suddenly at Roxbury, Mass., whither he had gone to inspect some property which he owned, 9 January 1923.

He was a descendant of Richard[1] Nichols, who was admitted a freeman at Ipswich, Mass., in 1638, and later settled at Reading, Mass., where he died in November 1674, his wife Annis surviving him by almost eighteen years and dying on 24 August 1692. From him the line of descent is continued through his son, Capt. Thomas[2] of Reading, who was a deacon, an officer in King Philip's War in 1675, and a deputy to the General Court, and who married, 1 December 1680, Rebecca Eaton, who was born in 1665 and died 17 October 1732. He died 9 February 1736/7. Rebecca Eaton was the daughter of John[2] (son of William[1] Eaton of Watertown and Reading, Mass., who came to New England from Staple, co. Kent, England, in 1637) and Elizabeth (Kendall) Eaton of Reading. Capt. Thomas[2] and Rebecca (Eaton) Nichols had eight children, of whom the seventh was Timothy[3] of Reading, who was born at Reading 16 May 1702, married at Ipswich, 7 October 1725, Hannah Perkins of Topsfield, Mass. (born at Topsfield 14 November 1703, daughter of Timothy and Edna (Hazen) Perkins), and removed prior to 1770 to Amherst, N. H., where he died. His son, Timothy,[4] one of a troop of horsemen in the French and Indian War, who was born at Reading 12 July 1731, married there, 30 September 1751, Mehitable Weston (born at Reading 27 November 1727, daughter of Ebenezer and Mehitable (Southack) Weston), and died at the siege of Quebec in 1759. His son, Timothy,[5] who was born at Reading 16 February 1756, married at Amherst, N. H., 21 October 1779, Susannah Towne (born 29 December 1762, died at Norwich, Vt., 2 December 1840, daughter of Capt. Archelaus Towne, an officer in the Revolution, and a descendant, through Capt. Israel Towne of Amherst, of William Towne, one of the first settlers of Topsfield, Mass.), and died at Norwich 22 August 1846. His seventh child, John Perkins,[6] a resident of Boston, born at Amherst 19 August 1798, married Mary Ann Clarke (born at Wilton, N. H., 19 May 1810, daughter of David Ramsey and Anna Spaulding (Fiske) Clarke), and was the father of the subject of this memoir.

After preparing for college at the Endicott School in Boston and the Boston Latin School, Arthur Howard Nichols entered Harvard with the Class of 1862, and received the degree of Bachelor of Arts at the end of the four years' course. Of the ninety-nine members of this class who took their degrees, thirty-eight served, for longer or shorter periods, in the Civil War, and preëminent among them was the heroic leader, Maj. Gen. William Francis Bartlett, A.M. Others of this class who attained distinction in later years were Charles Sprague Sargent, LL.D., the venerable director of the Arnold Arboretum, William Tufts Brigham, S.D., noted scientist, Thomas Buckminster Curtis, M.D., and Charles Follen Folsom, M.D., eminent physicians, Rev. Frederick Lucian Hosmer, D.D., writer of hymns, Mayo Williamson Hazeltine, A.M., literary editor of the New York Sun, Benjamin Holt Ticknor, A.M., well-known publisher, member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, John Elbridge Hudson, LL.B., president of the American Bell Telephone Company and of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, member and officer of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, John Harvey Treat, A.M., member and generous benefactor of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and Edward Delano Lindsey, architect. Of these men only Messrs. Sargent, Brigham, and Hosmer are now living.

In the year after their graduation at Harvard Lindsey and Nichols went to Paris, where they roomed together, the former studying at the École des Beaux Arts and the latter at the Ecole de Médecine. In the autumn of 1864 Nichols came home and entered the Harvard Medical School, and was admitted to the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1866. He returned to Europe in August of the same year, and spent the two succeeding years in continuing his medical studies in Vienna and Berlin. His vacations during this period were profitably employed in travelling in Italy, Switzerland, England, Bohemia, and Denmark.

Returning home in 1868, he entered upon the active practice of his profession, and after his marriage lived at Roxbury, in the historic mansion known as the Warren House, until November 1885, when he moved to 55 Mount Vernon Street, Boston, his home for the rest of his life. In 1869 he was appointed one of the surgeons at the Chardon Street Branch of the Boston Dispensary, a year later, in 1870, he was chosen surgeon of the Discharged Soldiers' Home, and in 1872 he accepted the office of secretary of the Norfolk District Medical Society. The summers during these years were spent in professional work at Rye Beach, N. H., until 1893, when he bought a farm at Cornish, N. H., on the Connecticut River, and retired from practice as a physician during the vacation seasons. Numerous trips to Europe, to Cuba, and to Porto Rico brought the strengthening and broadening influence of foreign travel.

While his professional work was absorbing and included various phases, such as a considerable experience with medico-legal cases involving personal injuries and the authorship of various articles on medicine and sanitary science, Dr. Nichols had a hobby. He was an earnest and well-qualified student of the art of scientific change-ringing upon tower bells. He published several papers relating to campanology, four of which appeared in the Register, namely, "Christ Church Bells, Boston, Mass.," in January 1904, "The Early Bells of Paul Revere," in April 1904, "Bells of Harvard College," in July 1911, and "Bells of Trinity Church, Newport, R. I.," in April 1916. He was a member of three London ringing guilds, one of which, the Ancient Society of College Youths, was founded in 1637, in the reign of Charles I. Meeting the tall, gaunt, slightly stooped physician as he passed down the street, one could safely conjecture that behind his preoccupied gaze was a mind intent upon some bell-ringing event, perhaps one in which his daughter, a proficient performer, was to take a prominent part. His conversations on the subject were delightful and full of charm.

Besides his membership in these guilds, he was a member of the Boston Medical Society, the Massachusetts Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and the Bostonian Society.

He married, 11 November 1869, Elizabeth Fisher Homer, eldest daughter of Thomas Johnston and Mary Elizabeth (Fisher) Homer of Roxbury, who survives him, together with three daughters, Rose Standish Nichols, Marian Clarke Nichols, A.B. (Radcliffe, 1899), and Margaret Homer Nichols, wife of Arthur Asahel Shurtleff, S.B. (Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1894, Harvard, 1896), a prominent landscape architect of Boston. A son, Sidney Homer Nichols, died in his sixth year.

Rev. Sydney Snow of Montreal, formerly rector of King's Chapel, Boston, officiated at the funeral, which was held at the Nichols home at 55 Mount Vernon Street, and on the Sunday following, 12 January, the Old Colony Guild of Bell Ringers, as was preëminently fitting, held a memorial service at the Church of the Advent.

Ezra Farnsworth, of Minneapolis, Minn., a life member since 1885, was born in Boston 3 January 1843, the son of Ezra and Sarah Melville (Parker) Farnsworth, and died at Pasadena, Calif., 12 January 1923.

He traced his descent from Matthias[1] Farnsworth, who was at Lynn, Mass., in 1657, and became one of the original proprietors of Groton, Mass., through Benjamin[2] of Groton, who married Mary Prescott, Ezra[3] of Groton, who married Abigail Pierce, Ezra[4] of Groton, who married Betsey Sheple, Abel[5] of Groton, who was born at Groton in July 1776 and married Mary Rice Goodell, born in 1790, daughter of Lieut. Asa Goodell of Millbury, Mass., and Ezra,[6] his father, who was born at Groton 5 January 1813 and died in Boston 4 July 1890.

Ezra[6] Farnsworth married first, in October 1840, Sarah Melville Parker, who died in Boston 28 June 1862, the daughter of Isaac Parker of Boston, and by her had four sons and four daughters, seven of whom survived their mother and six of whom survived their father; and secondly, 30 March 1864, Mrs. Henry H. Taylor of New York. He was a prominent business man of Boston, a deacon of the Park Street Church and otherwise active in Congregational circles, interested in philanthropic and educational work, a member of the Boston Common Council in 1856, and a life member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society from 1870 until his death. A memoir of him may be found in "Memorial Biographies of the New England Historic Genealogical Society," vol. 9, p. 10. Three generations of this family, represented by Ezra,[3] Ezra,[4] and Ezra,[5] brother of Abel,[5] lived on the same farm in Groton.

Ezra[7] Farnsworth, the subject of this memoir, attended the Boston public schools, and at the outbreak of the Civil War enlisted as a private in the Twenty-sixth Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. At the Battle of Cedar Creek, 19 October 1864, he was severely wounded, and lost his leg below the knee. He was honorably discharged by the War Department with the rank of captain.

Returning to civil life, he found employment with the firm of Parker, Wilder & Company of Boston, a dry-goods commission house, in which his father was a partner, and represented this firm in its New York office for several years. In 1879, however, he severed his business connections in the East and went to Minnesota, where for several years he conducted an extensive wheat farm, and then, settling in Minneapolis, became one of the leading and most respected citizens of that rapidly growing community, being actively interested in its development as the head of one of the prominent real-estate and loan companies of the city. He lived there for more than forty years, but retired from active business about fifteen years before his death.

In 1922 Mr. Farnsworth and his wife went to California, to live with their sons, who had resided there for several years, and there he died.

Mr. Farnsworth was a member and past commander of John A. Rawlins Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and also a member of the Loyal Legion, of which he was commander for Minnesota for several years.

He married, 6 October 1869, Leila Frances Newcomb of Boston, daughter of John Jay and Mary (Marshall) Newcomb. His wife survives him, together with a daughter, Ethel Newcomb Farnsworth, three sons, Arthur Jay Farnsworth, John Jay Farnsworth, and Ezra Farnsworth, and a brother, William Farnsworth of Dedham, Mass.

After preparing for college at Phillips Academy, Exeter, N. H., Mr. Gaff entered Harvard with the Class of 1876, which included among its members such men of mark in their several callings as the late Hon. William Henry Moody, LL.D., Member of Congress, Secretary of the Navy and Attorney General of the United States, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, the late Hon. Francis Cabot Lowell, LL.D., Judge of the United States District and Circuit Courts, Hon. Henry Sherman Boutell, LL.D., Member of Congress, diplomat, the late Hon. Mr. Gaff left college, however, in his junior year, and went abroad to continue his studies, spending one semester at the University of Göttingen and two semesters at the University of Leipzig. In 1899 Harvard University conferred on him the degree of Bachelor of Arts, as of 1876.

His family had moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, when he was ten years of age, and thither he returned after his studies abroad and entered into various manufacturing and mercantile pursuits. He became vice president of the Niles, Bement, Pond Company, manufacturers of tools, a director of the Third National Bank of Cincinnati, and a director in the American Hominy Company. In 1897 he gave up his residence in Cincinnati and moved to Washington, D. C., which became his home during the winters, while he spent his summers at Osterville on Cape Cod. He retired from active business about twenty years before his death.

After the completion of the Panama Canal Mr. Gaff served on a commission appointed by President Roosevelt, which was sent to Panama to adjust the land claims growing out of the taking over of the Canal Zone by the United States.

He was a member of the Queen City and the Riding Clubs of Cincinnati, the University and Manhattan Clubs of New York City, the Metropolitan and Chevy Chase Clubs of Washington, the Eastern Yacht Club of Boston, and the Royal Mersey Yacht Club of Liverpool, England.

Mr. Gaff married, 14 November 1883, Zaidee Ellis, daughter of Matthias and Sara (Forsyth) Ellis of Newport, R. I. His wife and a daughter, Zaidee Forsyth, wife of Dr. Cary D. Langhorne of the United States Navy, survive him.

THEODORE RUSHMORE HOYT, B.A., of Stamford, Conn., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1920, was born at Stamford 11 July 1861, the son of Oliver and Maria (Corse) Hoyt, and died unmarried at Stamford 17 January 1923.

He was a descendant of Simon[1] Hoyt, one of the first settlers of Stamford, whose son, Sergt. Samuel[2] Hoyt, married Hannah Holley, daughter of John Holley, another first settler of Stamford. Samuel[3] Hoyt, who was born at Stamford 27 July 1673 and died in December 1711, son of Samuel,[2] married, 3 July 1704, Mrs. Mercy (Bell) Holmes, daughter of Jonathan Bell and granddaughter of Lieut. Francis Bell, who was among the first settlers of Stamford and whose wife, Susanna Pierson, was the daughter of Rev. Abraham Pierson, a leader in the settlement of Branford, Conn., and Newark, N. J. Sergt. Samuel[4] Hoyt, son of Samuel,[3] was born at Stamford 17 March 1709 and died in 1784, and his wife, Mary Blachley, was daughter of Samuel Blachley, who was in Stamford before 1700. Joseph[5] Hoyt, son of Samuel,[4] was born at Stamford 12 December 1737 and died 24 December 1799, his wife being Sarah Weed of Darien, Conn. Joseph Blachley[6] Hoyt, son of Joseph,[5] who was born at Stamford 19 February 1787 and died 25 December 1854, married Maria Blachley Weed, daughter of Eliphalet and Martha (Hoyt) Weed, Martha Hoyt being a daughter of Samuel and Martha (Blachley) Hoyt, a granddaughter of Capt. Samuel and Mary (Jagger) Hoyt, and a great-granddaughter of Benjamin Hoyt and also of Jeremy Jagger, who was one of the first settlers of Stamford, in the party that came from Wethersfield and is said to have come to America in the Arbella with Gov. John Winthrop.

Oliver[7] Hoyt, son of Joseph[6] and father of the subject of this memoir, was born at Stamford 20 August 1823 and died 5 May 1887. He became a leather merchant in New York City, and, with his brother William, established in 1844 the firm known as Hoyt Brothers, which became a leading house in the trade. He served three terms as a member of the Connecticut State Senate, during two of which he acted as president of that body, and he was a presidential elector in 1872, casting his vote for General Grant, of whom he was a devoted admirer. In General Grant's later years, when a fund of $250,000 was raised by private subscription for him, Mr. Hoyt was one of the first to subscribe and greatly aided the enterprise by his zeal and earnestness. He was also one of the pallbearers at General Grant's funeral. He gave liberally to the Methodist Church in Stamford, of which he was a member, made a notable gift to Wesleyan University, of which he was trustee from 1862 to 1887, and by his will left a large sum for charitable and religious purposes.

Theodore Rushmore[8] Hoyt was prepared for college at private schools in Stamford, and was graduated at Wesleyan University in 1884, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He was president of his class in his senior year. He started in the leather business with the firm of Hoyt Brothers in New York City, and about the year 1890 transferred his residence to Boston, continuing as a partner of the same firm until the business was absorbed by the United States Leather Company in the spring of 1893. He became a director in this company in 1897, serving until 1905. In September 1905 he was elected a director of the Central Leather Company, and served until 1920, when he retired from active business and went to reside in the old homestead at Stamford.

Mr. Hoyt was a nonresident member of the Union Club of Boston from 1905 to 1917, when he resigned this membership. He was also a member of the Algonquin Club of Boston, the Racquet and Tennis, Union League, Links, University, and Brook Clubs of New York, the South Side Sportsman's Club of Long Island, the Restigouche Salmon Club of Metapedia, Province of Quebec, and the Santee Club of South Carolina. He was a man whose high type of character and charitable and kindly disposition won many friends. His brothers, Edward C. Hoyt and George S. Hoyt, survive him.

Col. Edmund Haines Taylor, Jr., of Frankfort, Ky., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1920, was born at Columbus, Ky., 12 February 1830, the son of John Eastin and Rebecca (Edrington) Taylor, and died at Frankfort 19 January 1923.

He was descended from James[1] Taylor, who came from Carlisle, England, to Caroline County, Va., about 1635, but finally settled in Kent County, Va., where he was a large landowner and was prominent in all activities affecting the well-being of the Colonies. His son, James[2] Taylor, who was born in 1673 and died 23 January 1729, married Martha Thompson (born in 1679, died in 1767, daughter of William Thompson and granddaughter of Sir Roger Thompson of England). This James[2] Taylor was one of the first surveyors of Virginia; and he not only ran the lines between Hanover, Spotsylvania, and Orange Counties, but also located ten thousand acres of land, where he lived until his death. He was colonel of a regiment of Colonial militia and a member of the House of Burgesses, and he had two children who became grandparents of Presidents of the United States. George[3] Taylor, son of James,[2] who was born 10 February 1711 and died 4 November 1792, was a colonel in the Virginia Militia and fought in the Indian wars. He was also a member of the Orange County Committee of Safety in 1774 and of the Virginia Convention in 1775, clerk of Orange County for many years, and a vestryman in the Episcopal Church. He married, 28 February 1738, Rachel Gibson (born 4 May 1717, died 19 February 1761), and is said to have had thirteen sons, of whom seven were in active field service in the Revolution and the others served in other capacities. His son Richard[4] Taylor, who died in Kentucky 30 August 1825, married Catherine Davis, and served with distinction as captain and commodore in the Virginia Continental Navy during the Revolution, being twice wounded. Col. Richard[5] Taylor, Jr., son of Capt. Richard[4] and Catherine (Davis), was government surveyor of the Jackson Purchase in Kentucky, received one thousand acres of land in Kentucky in recognition of his distinguished services, and made his home in Louisville for a number of years before his death in 1825. John Eastin[6] Taylor, son of Col. Richard,[5] was the father of Col. Edmund Haines[7] Taylor, Jr., the subject of this memoir.

Colonel Taylor was educated at Boyer's French School in New Orleans, La., and at the Sayre School in Frankfort, at whose head was B. B. Sayre, one of the most famous of the early educators of Kentucky.

On leaving school Colonel Taylor entered the Branch Bank of Kentucky, under his uncle, Edmund Haines Taylor. At the age of twenty he opened the books of the Commercial Bank of Kentucky at Paducah and also the books of its branches at Herrodsburg and Versailles, taking the place of cashier in the last-mentioned institution; but soon afterwards he founded the private banking house of Taylor, Turner & Company. In the early sixties he turned his attention to the business of distilling whiskey, and organized the firm of Gaines, Berry & Company; in 1868 he organized the firm of W. A. Gaines & Company, and built the Old Crow and Hermitage distilleries at Frankfort. Later he was interested in the building of other distilleries, but from 1886 on he confined his operations exclusively to the old Taylor plant and organized the firm of E. H. Taylor, Jr. & Sons. He was also owner of the famous Hereford Farms in Woodford County, where he came to possess the most celebrated herd of Hereford cattle in this country. It was said of him that no man then living had done more than he did, in a few short years, to restore the once waning prestige of Kentucky as a producer of unexcelled breeding stock.

He served for seventeen years as mayor of Frankfort, and was a representative from Franklin County in the State Legislature in 1891 and 1892, resigning in February 1893. He was then elected senator from the Twentieth District, to fill a vacancy, was re-elected for a full term, and served in this position for more than four years. He was well known in political circles, and when the Governors' Conference was held at Frankfort, in 1910, he entertained it at his beautiful country house, "Thistleton," the address on this occasion being delivered by Governor-elect Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey.

He was a member of the Pendennis Club of Louisville, the Filson Club of Louisville, the Kentucky State Historical Society, the Lincoln Farm Association, the Society of Colonial Wars, the Kentucky Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Lexington Club, the Lexington Country Club, the Kentucky Thoroughbred Horse Breeders' Association, the American Hereford Breeders' Cattle Association, the Chicago Athletic Association, and the Saddle and Sirloin Clubs of Chicago, and was a life member of the International Live Stock Exposition Association and the Hereford Herds Book Society of Hereford, England.

Colonel Taylor was, withal, a lover of our best literature and an omnivorous reader of the best books, a "man of remarkable intellect and with unusual judgment, generous to a fault, and full of the milk of human kindness."

He married, 21 December 1852, Frances Mille Johnson, who died 11 October 1898. They had eight children, seven of whom survive their parents, namely, Jacob Swigert Taylor of "Thistleton," Frankfort, who has been a Pilgrim Tercentenary member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society since 1920, Mary Bell, wife of Dr. J. Lampton Price, Rebecca, wife of Richard W. Kline, Kenner Taylor, Mrs. Margaret Taylor, Edmund W. Taylor, and Mrs. Fanny Saffell. Eight grandchildren, also, and a brother, John Taylor of Missouri, survive him.

James Frederick Bliss, of Boston, a resident member since 1916, was born in Boston 7 April 1847, the son of Francis and Alice (Wakefield) Very, and died unmarried in Boston 27 January 1923. He was originally named Frederick William Very; but on the death of his mother, when he was two years old, he was adopted by James Bliss, and his name was changed to James Frederick Bliss.

His father, Francis Very, was born at Danvers, Mass., and his mother, Alice (Wakefield) Very, was the daughter of Terrence Wakefield and lived in Boston.

He was educated in the Boston public schools, received the Franklin Medal at the Quincy Grammar School, and entered the Boston English High School in 1862; but he left the school in his senior year, just before graduation, and entered business at the age of eighteen.

In 1872 he became a member of the firm of James Bliss & Company, ship chandlers, at 91 Broad Street, Boston, which had been founded by his adoptive father, James Bliss, in 1832; and on the death of his father, in 1876, he succeeded to the business, which he continued to carry on, with Israel E. Decrow, until his death. The firm owned and provisioned many vessels of many rigs, "from little hermaphrodite brigs to the largest full-rigged ships, and from Hingham sloop packets to the five and six stick fore-and-afters," not excluding, in later years, ships propelled by steam.

He was a corporal in the Second Massachusetts Regiment, recruited in Boston at the end of the Civil War and commanded by Col. Charles R. Codman, and a member of the lower branch of the Massachusetts Legislature in 1900 and 1901.

Mr. Bliss was a large man, physically, suggestive of a grand old oak, and like an oak he had his roots deeply set. He kept the old family homestead, one of the earlier South End mansions in West Brookline street, and he found satisfaction in his habit and love of work, while his recreation was largely in connection with Masonic gatherings, for he was a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of many Masonic bodies.

He belonged to the Boston Art Club, the Exchange Club, the Economic Club, the Mercantile Library Association, of which he was at one time president, the Boston Yacht Club, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association, and the Boston Marine Society, and he was a director in the Simpson Dry Dock Company and president of the Roxbury and the Highland Coöperative Banks.

George Albert Draper, of Hopedale, Mass., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1919, was born at Hopedale 4 November 1855, the son of George and Hannah (Thwing) Draper, and died in Boston 7 February 1923.

He was a descendant of James[1] Draper, who was born at Heptonstall, Yorkshire, England, in 1618 and died at Roxbury, Mass., in July 1694, and his wife, Miriam (Stansfield) Draper, who was born at Heptonstall 27 November 1625 and died at Roxbury in January 1697, daughter of Gideon and Grace (Eastwood) Stansfield of Wadworth, Yorkshire. James[1] Draper and Miriam Stansfield were married at Heptonstall, 21 April 1646, and came to America shortly afterward. Their son, James[2] Draper, who was born at Roxbury in 1654 and died there 30 April 1698, married Abigail Whiting of Dorchester, Mass., who was born at Roxbury 7 June 1663 and died there 25 October 1721, daughter of Nathaniel and Hannah (Dwight) Whiting of Dedham, Mass., and granddaughter of John Dwight, an ancestor of the late President Timothy Dwight of Yale University. James[3] Draper, son of James[2] and Abigail (Whiting), was born at Roxbury in 1691 and died at Dedham 24 April 1768. He married Abigail Child, born in 1698, died 23 November 1767, daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth (Morris) Child of Brookline, Mass. Their son, Abijah[4] Draper, who was born at Dedham 10 May 1737 and died there 1 May 1780, married, 8 April 1762, Alice Eaton, born 31 January 1741, died 22 January 1777, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Lovering) Eaton of Dedham. He held every rank in the militia up to and including that of major, and as major he commanded a body of Minutemen at Roxbury under Washington. His son, Ira[5] Draper, who was born 29 December 1764 and died 22 January 1848, married Abigail Richards, born 12 September 1782, died in 1847, daughter of Lemuel and Rebecca Richards. He is said to have invented the first threshing machine of which there is any record, a "fly shuttle hand loom" and a "revolving temple" for use in weaving, and the first road-scraping machine, which was much the same as that in use to-day; and, because of his inventions, he became, in the administration of President John Quincy Adams, a prominent candidate for the position of United States Commissioner of Patents. His son, George[6] Draper, who was born at Weston, Mass., 16 August 1817 and died 7 June 1887, married Hannah Thwing of Uxbridge, Mass.; and they were the parents of George Albert[7] Draper, the subject of this memoir, of the late Gen. William Franklin Draper (1842–1910), veteran of the Civil War, member of Congress, and United States ambassador to Italy, and of the late Hon. Eben Sumner Draper (1858–1914), Lieutenant Governor and Governor of Massachusetts. The father was the founder of the Hopedale Mills and the inventor of some of the most important improvements in textile manufacturing of the last century, a man noted for his philanthropy and his interest in many reforms. He never accepted public office, but served, however, on Governor Andrew's private advisory board during the Civil War.

Hannah Thwing, mother of George Albert Draper, was a descendant of Benjamin[1] Thwing, who was born in England about 1619 and came to New England at the age of sixteen, and his wife Deborah, through John,[2] born in Boston 21 November 1644, and his wife Mary (Messenger), John,[3] born in Boston 16 October 1670, and his wife Martha (Drew), John,[4] born in Boston 2 June 1693, and his wife Mercy (Jones) of Mendon, Mass., Benjamin,[5] born at Mendon 25 May 1732, died at Uxbridge 19 September 1813, and his wife Mary (Fiske) of Cumberland, R. I., and Benjamin,[6] her father, who was born at Uxbridge 31 January 1777 and died there 26 June 1830, a noted school-teacher of his day.

As a young man, Mr. Draper entered the firm of George Draper & Sons, manufacturers of textile machinery, now known as the Draper Corporation, which has its plant at Hopedale and with which the Draper family interests have long been identified. He gave close attention to business, familiarized himself with every branch of the work, and was treasurer of the corporation at the time of his death. In the course of time he also became connected with several other business interests. He was president and director of the Burgess Mills at Pawtucket, R. I., president and director of the Harmony Mills, a trustee of the Milford Savings Bank, and a director of the First National Bank of Boston, the Manville Company of Providence, R. I., and the Infants' Hospital of Boston.

He was deeply interested in the welfare of Hopedale, he had served as a selectman of the town and had held other town offices, and the year before his death he gave to the town a community building. In the World War the Draper Corporation, through Mr. Draper, was one of the first corporations to offer the services of its plant to the United States Government. He was a member of the parish committee of the Hopedale Unitarian Church.

He had served as president of the Home Market Club, of which his father had been one of the founders, and he was a member also of the Union, Algonquin, New Riding, Country, Tennis and Racquet, and Eastern Yacht Clubs and of the Boston Athletic Association. He maintained a Boston residence at 297 Commonwealth Avenue as well as a family mansion at Hopedale.

He married Jessie Preston of Lexington, Ky., who died in 1917. A son, Wickliffe Preston Draper of Hopedale, A.B. (Harvard, 1913), a daughter, Mrs. Helen D. Taft, and a sister, Mrs. Edward L. Osgood (Hannah T. Draper) of Boston and Hopedale, survive him.

John Graham Moseley, of Boston, a resident member since 1890, was born at Sullivan, Me., 14 February 1833, the son of William Graham and Maria (Curtiss) Moseley, and died in Boston 14 February 1923, on the ninetieth anniversary of his birth.

He was descended from John[1] Maudesley of Dorchester, Mass., and his wife Cicely, who were in Dorchester as early as 1635, where they both died in 1661. Their son, Thomas[2] Maudesley, who died at Dorchester 22 October 1706, married Mary Lawrence, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Bates) Lawrence of Hingham, Mass. Increase[3] Maudesley, son of Thomas,[2] was baptized at Dorchester 26 February 1663, and lost his life while serving as an officer in the expedition against Canada in 1690. His wife was Sarah Trescott of Dorchester. Their son, Increase[4] Moseley, born in January 1691, married, 4 July 1711, Mary Hazen of Boxford, Mass., and moved to Norwich, Conn. Increase[5] Moseley, son of Increase[4] and Mary (Hazen), who was born at Norwich, Conn., 18 May 1712, and died at Clarenden, Vt., 2 May 1795, married, 7 May 1735, Deborah Tracy of Windham, Conn., and moved to Woodbury, Conn., in 1740 and to Clarenden, Vt., in 1779. He was a member of the Committee of Relief of Boston and the Committee of Correspondence in 1774 and the Committee of Inspection in 1775, served as a representative in the Connecticut General Assembly for eight sessions, and organized the Rutland (Vt.) County Court, of which he was the chief judge for six years. His son, Increase[6] Moseley, who was born at Woodbury, Conn., 13 October 1740 and died in 1811, married, 15 October 1769, Patience Hinman, daughter of Capt. Timothy Hinman of Southbury, Conn., and his wife, Emma (Preston) of Woodbury, granddaughter of Capt. Titus and Mary (Hawkins) Hinman, and great-granddaughter of Sergt. Edward Hinman, the immigrant, and his wife Hannah, who was a daughter of Francis and Sarah Stiles of Windsor, Conn. This Increase Moseley was judge of the County Court and colonel of the Thirteenth Regiment of Connecticut Militia in the early years of the Revolutionary War. His son, John[7] Moseley, who was born at Woodbury 23 October 1775 and died 4 March 1876, married, in October 1798, Mary Matilda Graham, born 1 October 1775, died 30 January 1810, daughter of Dr. Andrew Graham (a member of the Committee of Safety in 1775, the host of General Washington at his home in Southbury, a surgeon in the Army, and a prisoner in the Dutch Church, New York City) and granddaughter of Rev. John Graham, M.A., who came to New England from Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1718, married Abigail, daughter of Rev. Charles Chauncy, S.T.D. (a celebrated Boston divine, who was a great-grandson of the second president of Harvard College), and served churches in Exeter, N. H., and Stafford and Southbury, Conn., dying in the last-named place in his eighty-first year. William Graham[8] Moseley, son of John[7] and Mary Matilda (Graham) and father of the subject of this memoir, was born in Southbury 6 August 1799, and married Maria Curtiss, who was born at Woodbury 12 November 1800 and died at Roxbury, Mass., in 1895, daughter of Stiles Curtiss, a descendant of the Curtiss family of Stratford, Conn.

Several of John Graham Moseley's immediate ancestors lived to a ripe old age, his paternal grandfather dying in his one hundred and first year, his father dying at the age of ninety-seven, and his mother attaining the age of ninety-five years.

As early as 1852 John Graham Moseley began to invest his savings in vessels, and for very many years continued to be interested in shipping property, as owner, manager, and outfitter. In August 1852 he came to Boston, and for nearly four years was employed by Messrs. Wetherell, Stone & Wood, wholesale dealers in dry goods, on Federal Street. The next four years he spent in the employ of Sumners & Company, at the corner of Washington and School Streets. In 1860 his father, who had been a lumber dealer in Maine, moved his business to Boston, added to it a commission business, and took his son into partnership with him. The firm, known as William G. Moseley & Company, had its offices at No. 6 Commercial Street. On 1 January 1864, however, following his father's advice, the son withdrew from this firm and joined his wife's father, Augustus B. Perry, and the latter's son, O. H. Perry, in establishing the firm of A. B. Perry & Company, for carrying on a grocery, flour, and shipping business at No. 80 Commercial Street. In 1866 the firm moved to 232 State Street, and gave its attention chiefly to the shipping business. At the adjoining wharf ships from various ports discharged their cargoes and took on board new cargoes for new voyages. The elder Perry died in November 1887; and on 1 January 1888 the firm was dissolved, and Mr. Moseley took over the business and continued it at the same place until about fifteen or sixteen years ago, when he retired. He retained an office, however, in the State Street building, for the transaction of his personal business, and there he might be seen regularly up to the last days of his life.

Mr. Moseley was one of the pioneers in establishing a summer resort at Rockport on Cape Ann, his cottage, known as "Felsenheim," being the first to be built in that part of Rockport which is now the centre of the summer colony. He was deeply interested in genealogy, which he studied extensively and with enthusiasm. He was a member of the Society of Colonial Wars in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and the Boston Marine Society, and he was a director of the India Mutual Insurance Company. His religious affiliations were with the Unitarian denomination.

He married, 6 November 1856, Mary Augusta Perry, who was born at Sullivan, Me., 12 February 1833 and died some twenty years ago. Two daughters, Mrs. A. Pierce (Caroline Augusta Moseley) and Miss Helen Graham Moseley, who made her home with her father on Columbus Avenue, survived him.

Dwight Moore, of Closter, N. J., a resident member since 1919, was born at Roxbury, Mass., 16 December 1868, the son of Matthias Jones and Margaret Crawford (Cheney) Moore, and died at Miami, Fla., 15 February 1923.

He was a descendant of Samuel Moor, mariner, of Portsmouth, N. H., through Ensign John Moor, who was born in 1696, Nathaniel Moore, Ezekiel Moore, a soldier of the Revolution, Matthias Moore, and Lieut. Matthias Moore, his father, who served in the Civil War in the Fourteenth Massachusetts Light Artillery.

The birth and antecedents of Samuel Moor, the first known progenitor of this family in America, are unknown, as are those of his wife, Mary. The New Hampshire records first mention Samuel in 1696, when he was called to jury duty. In a letter written at this time he refers to his infant son John, then but three months old, Samuel, the elder son, being then apparently about two or three years of age. This elder son became prosperous later in life as a merchant and large shipowner at Portsmouth; he was a colonel in one of the New Hampshire regiments that fought with the New England forces and a single British squadron in the taking of Louisbourg, in 1745; he married Mary Pierce; and he died in London about 1750, without issue. It was John, the second son, less fortunate materially than his brother, who, through many vicissitudes, carried forward the name, and eventually made for himself and his family a secure position in New Hampshire. He married Hannah Sias of Dover, N. H., daughter of John Sias, of Huguenot ancestry, and his wife Ann Pitman of Wells, Me. They had eight children: William, Archelaus, Elizabeth, Samuel, Sarah, Nathaniel, Hannah, and Mary.

Nathaniel Moore married Elizabeth Morrill, daughter of Ezekiel Morrill of Canterbury, N. H. Their son, Ezekiel, was the first mail carrier of New Hampshire, and also established a brief Revolutionary war record for himself by enlisting, at the age of sixteen, as a private in Colonel Nichols's regiment. He saw nearly four months' service, and, previous to being mustered out, was an eyewitness of the execution of Major André at Tappan, N. Y., in 1780. He married Alice Merrill.

Their son Matthias, born 24 April 1810, was first a singing teacher, later a storekeeper, and at the time of his death in possession of a fine farm. He took a prominent part in town affairs, and had some experience in training the State troops. He was offered a colonel's commission at the outbreak of the Civil War, but declined it on account of his age. He was much interested in ancestral records and is said to have compiled a genealogy, which was undoubtedly the one copied by Mr. John Haynes in 1880. He married first Elizabeth Thayer Jones of South Boston, Mass., and secondly Harriet Philbrook of Sanbornton, N. H. By his first wife he had Matthias Jones Moore, who was born in South Boston in 1833, and, at the beginning of the Civil War, enlisted in the Forty-fourth Massachusetts Infantry. Later he reënlisted in the Fourteenth Massachusetts Light Artillery, in which he was promoted to the rank of second lieutenant; but he was thrown from his horse and never fully recovered from his injuries. He lived, however, for more than a score of years after this accident, and died in Boston 15 November 1885. His wife was Margaret Crawford Cheney, daughter of Alfred and Harriet (Crawford) Cheney of Boston. They had three children, Edith, Howard, and Dwight.

Dwight Moore was engaged in the ivory trade at Aden, Arabia, in the late eighties, and was appointed United States consul at that port, a position which he held for several years. Upon his return to this country he entered the excelsior business, and at the time of his death was vice president of the Boston Excelsior Company, and was in charge of its New York office. He was also president of the Excelsior Wrapper Company of Chicago, Ill., a director of the Closter National Bank, and a member of the Union League Club of New York and of the Society of Sons of the Revolution.

Mr. Moore married, late in life, Clara Westlake, who survives him.

George Burwell Snow, D.D.S., of Long Beach, Calif., a resident member since 1916, was born at Sandusky, Ohio, 28 August 1835, the son of Reuben Griswold and Susan (Burwell) Snow, and died at Long Beach, Calif., of pneumonia, 15 February 1923. He was buried at Ingelwood, Calif.

Dr. Snow was a descendant of Richard[1] Snow of Woburn, Mass., through Samuel,[2] Daniel,[3] Richard,[4] Seth,[5] Seth,[6] and Reuben Griswold,[7] his father. No exact data concerning the first Richard of Woburn are obtainable which would establish the date of his birth and of his arrival in America. But in 1645 he was taxed in the town of Woburn, and was evidently a thriving husbandman, who, although not particularly ambitious, held a respected position in the town until his death, in 1677. His wife's name was Annis, but her maiden surname and place of birth are unknown. He had five children: John and James, born before he came to Woburn, Daniel, who died in infancy, Samuel, and Zachariah. The latter took part in the famous Swamp Fight in King Philip's War. Samuel,[2] the ancestor of George Burwell Snow, married Sarah Wilson, daughter of John and Hannah (James) Wilson. She died in 1686, and he then married Sarah Parker, who died in 1695, daughter of John and Joanna Parker of Newton. Daniel,[3] the son of Samuel and Sarah (Wilson), married first Rachel Jones, who died at Woburn in December 1715, daughter of Hugh and Mary Jones of Salem, Mass.; and secondly Susanna Wood. He resided in Reading and Woburn, Mass., and by his first wife, Rachel, had eight children, of whom Richard[4] married Abigail Coggin, daughter of Capt. John and Elizabeth (Richardson) Coggin of Woburn. They had Seth,[5] born 15 July 1744, who married Ruth Holden of Holden, Mass., and resided in Woburn, Sudbury, and Holden, Mass., and in Madison and Augusta, N. Y. Seth was a Revolutionary soldier, one of the Lexington minutemen. He was made corporal in Capt. James Davis's company, Colonel Doolittle's regiment, which marched on the alarm of 19 April 1775. He and his son, Seth,[6] bought a farm in Madison, N. Y., and built the first brick house there. Later he built another house, a two-story brick tavern, on the Cherry Valley Turnpike, a famous highroad between Albany and Buffalo. This tavern was known later as the Putnam place. Seth[5] died there in 1815, and his wife Ruth in 1820. Their son Seth,[6] born at Sudbury, Mass., in September 1768, married, in 1796, Abigail Griswold, daughter of Reuben and Mary (Rockwell) Griswold. They lived in Holden, Mass., and in Eaton, Madison, and Chautauqua, N. Y. Their son, Reuben Griswold[7] Snow, father of the subject of this memoir, was a dentist of Buffalo, N. Y. He was born at Madison 28 December 1805 and died at Buffalo 25 May 1871. He married first, at Buffalo, in 1834, Susan Burwell, who was born at Poland, Herkimer Co., N. Y., 24 October 1805 and died at sea 23 April 1850, daughter of Nathan and Nancy (Smith) Burwell; secondly, in 1851, Mary Sophia Sherwood, who died at Newport, Herkimer Co., N. Y., in 1853; thirdly, in September 1854, Harriet Miller of Buffalo, who died in September 1866; and fourthly Mrs. Susan Titus, who survived her husband several years. Reuben Griswold Snow had issue only by his first wife, Susan (Burwell).

George Burwell[8] Snow received a common school education in Buffalo, N. Y., whither the family moved in 1836, and became a machinist. In 1857, however, he began the study of dentistry in his father's office, and in 1859 was graduated at the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery in Philadelphia. He opened an office in Addison, N. Y., but after spending some time in Chicago, where he received instruction in porcelain block-work, and in Albion, Mich., where he received instruction in work in vulcanite, he returned to Buffalo in January 1863, and again entered practice with his father. During the winter of 1865 he attended medical lectures at the University of Buffalo.

In 1865, in association with Dr. T. G. Lewis, he invented and manufactured the Snow & Lewis automatic dental mallet, and later, with others, organized the Buffalo Dental Manufacturing Company, for the manufacture of dental appliances, of which he was the factory manager and president for several years. In 1873, withdrawing from the active management of this business, he reëntered dental practice; but nine years later he abandoned this altogether and devoted himself to the affairs of the Manufacturing Company until 1901, when he withdrew from it entirely and formed the Snow Dental Company, whose policies he directed by correspondence.

In 1892 Dr. Snow aided Dr. W. C. Barrett and others in establishing the Dental Department of the University of Buffalo. His first position there, in the session of 1892–93, was that of librarian and clinical professor of mechanical dentistry. In the following years he became successively professor of prosthetic dentistry, dean (1903–1912) and professor of prosthetic dentistry, and, from 1913–14 on, professor of prosthetic dentistry, emeritus.

Dr. Snow was one of the organizers of the Buffalo Society in 1864 and of the Western New York Dental Association. After his retirement he devoted himself to researches in the properties of rubber and vulcanite.

Many useful inventions are to be ascribed to his fertile brain and trained hands. Before he was twenty years of age he had invented an automatic bell ringer for locomotives, which is in use to-day. Among his dental inventions which have given him a world-wide reputation and have benefited the human race may be mentioned the Face-bow and New Century Articulator, a compensating vulcanizer, and the Snow spring mallet. His life has been characterized as "one of unselfish service to his fellow man, his profession, and his immediate associates."

Dr. Snow married first, at Buffalo, 15 April 1869, Sarah Maria Robie, who died at Buffalo 23 September 1878, daughter of John E. and Clarissa (Whitney) Robie; secondly, at Buffalo, 10 October 1881, Mrs. Charlotte E. (Taylor) Davis, who died 29 September 1904, daughter of William and Sarah (Gray) Taylor; and thirdly, at Niagara Falls, Ontario, 27 April 1908, Mrs. Sarah Marie (Davison) Lott, who survives him, daughter of ——— Markham and adopted daughter of J. B. Davison. Sarah, his daughter by his first wife, lived but a few hours, and his two sons by his second wife were stillborn.

Arthur Stuart Walcott, A.B., LL.B., of New York City, a resident member since 1920, was born in New York City 28 July 1869, the son of Benjamin Stuart and Loenza Boutelle (Boynton) Walcott, and died at Buck Hill Falls, Pa., 18 February 1923.

He traced his descent from Jonathan Walcott, who lived in that part of Salem, Mass., which was later incorporated as the town of Danvers, and who was perhaps a son of the William Walcott of Salem who was excommunicated at the same time and for the same cause as Roger Williams. Jonathan Walcott married, 26 January 1664/5, Mary Sibley, daughter of John, who bore to him several children and died 28 December 1683. Her husband married again, 23 April 1685, Deliverance Putnam, daughter of Thomas, and died 16 December 1699. Among his children by his wife Deliverance was William, born 27 March 1691, who married, 6 August 1712, Mary Felt, and was the father of Benjamin Walcott, born in 1729, who married Mary Foster, daughter of John and Margaret. They were the parents of Benjamin Stuart Walcott, who was born in 1755 and married Marcy Dexter, daughter of James and Alithia. He was the father of another Benjamin Stuart, born in 1785, who married Irene Doolittle, daughter of Gen. George Doolittle.

Their son, a third Benjamin Stuart Walcott, who was born at New York Mills, Oneida Co., N. Y., 31 August 1829, married Loenza Boutelle Boynton, perhaps born in Maine, daughter of John and Louisa (Boutelle) Boynton, and was the father of the subject of this memoir.

Arthur Stuart Walcott received his early education in private schools in New York City and at the Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N. J., and entered Harvard in the autumn of 1887. At that university he was admitted to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, cum laude, in 1891, and, after a journey around the world which lasted for nearly a year and in the course of which he visited Egypt, India, the Far East, Australia, Samoa, and the Hawaiian Islands, he took up the study of law at the Harvard Law School in September 1892. There he spent two years, and then, in September 1894, entered the law office of Daly, Hoyt & Mason in New York City. In April 1895 he passed the examinations for admission to the New York bar, and in June of the same year, after taking the third-year examinations at the Harvard Law School, he received from Harvard the degree of Bachelor of Laws. A severe illness in the winter of 1895–96 incapacitated him for work, and he sought recuperation at Bermuda in the spring of 1896 and in Canada in the following summer. The next winter he entered the law office of Rowland Cox in New York City, and, after remaining there two years (1896–1898), he opened an office of his own at 59 Wall Street.

His tastes for travel and for literary work soon drew him, however, from the active practice of his profession. In 1905 a second tour of the world led him again to the Far East, and he visited the scenes of conflict in the Russo-Japanese War, although he did not reach the actual fighting front. In 1907 a third journey around the world led him again to the Island Empire of the East, and in the spring of 1908 he travelled in the Panama Canal Zone, Venezuela, and the West Indies. A fourth trip around the globe was made in 1909–10, the summer of 1910 was spent abroad, and in 1911, with his wife, whom he had recently married, he made his fifth journey around the world, travelling westward from San Francisco and crossing Asia by the Trans-Siberian Railway. In 1912 he spent a month or two in the Canal Zone and in Costa Rica and in 1913 about six months in Europe. He was about to start for Japan in 1914, when the outbreak of the World War caused him to change his plans. In the summer of 1915, however, he and his wife crossed the Pacific to China and Japan, and he spent the winter in those countries.

Mr. Walcott contributed numerous articles to newspapers — to Japanese papers among others, and was the author of a book entitled "Java and Her Neighbours," which was published in 1914 by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

In November 1904 he completed ten years of service, as private, corporal, and sergeant, in the New York National Guard, having been enrolled during this period in Company K of the Seventh Regiment. In January 1895 he was called out for a week to help maintain order at the time of a trolley-car strike in Brooklyn, N. Y.

For many years Mr. Walcott was a director of the Hanover Fire Insurance Company of New York; he was a member of the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of New York, of which he was for three years, ending in December 1904, deputy secretary and then secretary; and he belonged also to the University, Harvard, and Racquet and Tennis Clubs of New York.

He married in New York City, 28 February 1911, Frederica Augusta Yenni, daughter of Frederic Augustus and Anna Deming (Courtney) Yenni, who survives him.

Nelson Clifton Davis, S.B., M.D., of Winchester, Mass., a resident member since 1919, was born at Providence, R. I., 13 September 1882, the son of Nelson Stafford and S. Etta (Congdon) Davis, and died at Saranac Lake, N. Y., 2 March 1923.

He received his preparation for college at the Maryland Naval Academy, and entered Harvard in 1901, taking there the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1906, as of 1905. He was enrolled as a student in the Harvard Medical School in the years 1905–1909, and was admitted to the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1909.

A surgical post at the Boston City Hospital was offered to him, which, however, he did not accept, as immediately after graduation from the Medical School he had associated himself with H. P. Hood & Sons of Boston, producers and distributors of dairy products, and in May 1914 he was elected a director of this company.

Dr. Davis was secretary of the Boston Scientific Society, a fellow of the Boston Medical Library, and a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the American Public Health Association, the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health, the Boston Press Club, the Calumet Club, the Society of Arts, and the Harvard Alumni Chorus.

He married in Boston, 1 May 1909, Marie Louise Eaton.

Frederick Wesley Parker, of Somerville, Mass., a resident member since 1897 and a former Councillor of the Society, was born in Boston 9 May 1864, the son of Jerome Wesley and Ann Eliza (Wright) Parker, and died at Somerville 6 March 1923.

He traced his descent from Dea. Thomas[1] Parker (1609–1683), who came to New England in the Susan & Ellen in 1635 and settled at Lynn and later at Reading, Mass., through Lieut. Nathaniel[2] (1651–1737), Ensign Obadiah[3] (1698–1758), Lieut. Obadiah[4] (1730–1816), Phineas[5] (born in 1756), Obadiah[6] (1783–1867), and Jerome Wesley,[7] his father, who was born at Andover, Vt., 1 June 1830 and died in 1895. His mother was born at Arlington (then West Cambridge), Mass., 20 October 1831, and died in 1879, the daughter of Stephen Ellis and Nancy (Nason) Wright and sixth in descent from Richard[1] Wright (1608–1691), who was at Plymouth in New England as early as 1636, through Adam[2] (1644–1724), Isaac[3] (who died in 1766), Isaac[4] (1736–1797), Chandler[5] (1769–1824), and Stephen Ellis[6] (1803–1885), her father. Through his mother Mr. Parker was descended also from Francis Cooke, George Soule, and Stephen Hopkins, three of the passengers in the Mayflower, her immigrant ancestor, Richard[1] Wright, having married Francis Cooke's daughter Hester, and Richard Wright's son Adam having married Sarah Soule, a granddaughter of George Soule. Many other ancestors of Mr. Parker served New England loyally in the Colonial period, both in civil and in military positions.

Frederick Wesley Parker was educated in the public schools of Charlestown, Mass., whither the family had removed in 1868, and he was graduated at the old Harvard School there in 1878.

In 1882, when he was in his nineteenth year, he entered the employ of Perkins, Dupee & Company, bankers, of Boston, and four years later became a partner in the banking and brokerage business of Sawyer, Clement & Company of Boston. In 1892 Mr. Sawyer retired, and the firm name was changed to Clement, Parker & Company; and so it remains at the present time, although Mr. Parker was forced, because of ill health, to retire from the firm several months before his death. His financial interests led him to acquire membership in the Boston Stock Exchange, of which he was at one time governor, and for several years he was a director of the Somerville National Bank.

In his home city he was called to serve as a member of the Common Council in 1895 and 1896, as a trustee of the Public Library in 1901 and in the following years, as a trustee of the Somerville Hospital, as president of the Central Club in 1904 and 1905, and as president of the Laymen's League of the First Unitarian Church, an office which he was holding at the time of his death.

Deeply interested in historical and genealogical subjects, he was recognized as an authority in these fields. In the New England Historic Genealogical Society he was appointed a member of the Committee on Collection of Records for the years 1910, 1911, and 1912, and he was elected a member of the Council of the Society for a three years' term, 1911–1913. He was a life member of the Bostonian Society and of the Somerville Historical Society, a member and at one time a councillor of the Society of Colonial Wars in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and a member of the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants, of which he was historian from 1899 to 1902, the Bunker Hill Monument Association, the Parker Family Association, in which he was an active worker, and the Philatelic Society. He belonged also to the Algonquin and Exchange Clubs of Boston and to several Masonic bodies.

Mr. Parker married, 15 June 1887, Nellie Elizabeth Blodgett of Cambridge, Mass., daughter of Elias and Elizabeth (Brown) Blodgett, who, together with a daughter, Mildred Blodgett Parker, survives her husband.

Page 134, line 4 and footnote. The compiler of this genealogy being at present (July 1924) abroad, it does not seem advisable to take up in the Register at any length at this time the subject of the ancestry of Robert[1] Pollock or Polk, the immigrant, from whom the Polks of North Carolina and Tennessee are descended. It may be stated, however, that the authors of various published accounts of this family claim that Robert[1] Pollock or Polk belonged to an Irish branch of the ancient family of Pollok of Renfrewshire, Scotland. A Robert Pollok, of the Renfrewshire family, was created a baronet by Queen Anne in 1703, but the baronetcy is now extinct. The Register will gladly publish any evidence that tends to prove or disprove the claims made by historians and genealogists about the ancestry of the founder of the American family. — Editor.

The Chair then presented, as the speaker of the afternoon, Wallace Nutting of Framingham, Mass., well known to the public for his pictorial representations of landscapes and Colonial doorways and interiors and an authority on early American homes and their furnishings. Mr. Nutting delivered an interesting and instructive address on Furniture, and exhibited and explained numerous lantern slides, many of which were skilfully colored, showing exteriors and interiors of Colonial houses and noteworthy pieces of furniture, and, by special request, he threw upon the screen some beautifully colored outdoor scenes portraying forests, fields, roads, and rivers.

The audience, composed of members of the Society and their guests, filled Wilder Hall and overflowed into the adjacent corridor and tea room, the attendance far exceeding that at any meeting of the Society for several years past. On motion of Walter Kendall Watkins an enthusiastic vote of thanks was extended to the speaker for his very enjoyable lecture.

Day, Rowland E. Robinson, and other well-known authors. Mr. Thrasher's long and intimate acquaintance with this sunny-hearted race enabled him to interpret these selections in a most sympathetic spirit and with a delicate finish.

No further business being presented, the Chair, at 3.50 P.M., declared the meeting dissolved, and announced that the usual social hour would follow.

Charles Edwards Park, D.D., of Boston, who in an interesting and instructive paper, entitled Clipper Ships and illustrated with stereopticon views, told the story of the marvellous swift-sailing ships that in the middle of the nineteenth century conferred new and undying renown on the American merchant marine.

The President then called on Stanton H. King, Superintendent of the Sailors' Haven, Boston, who, with the assistance of Daniel Harvey of Boston, supplemented Dr. Park's address by a vigorous rendering of several sailors' chanties, an innovation which was greeted with the hearty approval of the audience.

After brief remarks by Captain Snow of the United States Navy, in which he paid tribute to the gallant American seamanship of former days, Dr. Park and Messrs. King and Harvey were the recipients of a unanimous vote of thanks from the Society.

No further business being presented, the Chair, at 4.05 P.M., declared the meeting dissolved, and the members of the Society and their friends remained for the customary social hour.

NOTES

It having come to the attention of this Society that certain genealogists and publishers have used the name of the Society in connection with their own enterprises, the Society again desires to state that it has NO genealogical representatives in this country or in England, nor is it in any way connected with any publications other than those that it issues over its own name at 9 Ashburton Place, Boston.

Peirce Records. — Through the courtesy of Grenville Howland Norcross, Esq., of Boston, the Register is enabled to publish the following records, which were found by Mr. Norcross in looking over some old papers. They relate to the family to which the late Silas Peirce belonged, a well-known Boston merchant, who lived in a house on Somerset Street, between Beacon Street and Pemberton Square, and died in Boston 27 Aug. 1879.

The sections giving the family records of Benjamin Peirce, Hayward Peirce, and Hayward Peirce, 2d, are written on the first and third pages of a large sheet of paper, and are all in the same handwriting. They were evidently copied or compiled from various records to which the writer had access, and the words "Record. 1836," which are written on the back of the sheet, may indicate the year in which the copy or compilation was made. The two sections relating to the family of Waldo Peirce are in another handwriting and on another sheet of paper. Marks of punctuation, when needed, have been inserted by the Editor.

Some Records of the Vermont Coolidges: Corrections. — In footnotes to the Coolidge records that were copied from the records in the office of the Secretary of State at Montpelier, Vt., and communicated by me to the Register of January 1924 (vol. 78, pp. 29–33), it was suggested that the dates 1730, 1734, 1736, 1732, and 1737, given as the years in which Calvin, Catherine, Fannie (1st), Luther, and Oliver Coolidge, respectively, were born, were errors for 1780, 1784, 1786, 1782, and 1787, the 8 in each date having been apparently misread as 3 when the records at Plymouth were copied for transmission to Montpelier. I brought the matter to the attention of the Deputy Secretary of State at Montpelier, Rawson C. Myrick; and he sent the records to the town clerk of Plymouth, who found that in the dates in question the figure 8 had been read as 3, as conjectured, and made the necessary corrections in the returns for the Secretary of State's office. Therefore the dates which were queried in the article in the Register should be corrected to 1780, 1784, 1786, 1782, and 1787, respectively.

HISTORICAL INTELLIGENCE

HERALDRY. — The Committee on Heraldry of the New England Historic Genealogical Society strongly recommends that all coats of arms which can be proved to be authentic be offered for record with this Society. The arrangements for the making and preservation of such records are complete, and the volume of recorded arms has been begun by the entry therein of a number of well-authenticated coats. Printed forms and directions for the making of applications may be obtained from the Committee, and all communications on this subject should be addressed to the Committee on Heraldry, New England Historic Genealogical Society, 9 Ashburton Place, Boston.

Without taking any position with reference to the propriety of assuming arms, the Committee will be glad to examine arms or heraldic devices which any person or organization desires to assume, and give advice as to whether the same are heraldically correct or whether they violate a right of exclusive use heretofore acquired by others.

GENEALOGIES IN PREPARATION. — Persons of the several names are advised to furnish the compilers of these genealogies with records of their own families and other information which they think may be useful. We would suggest that all facts of interest illustrating family history or character be communicated, especially service under the United States Government, the holding of other offices, graduation from college or professional schools, and occupation, with places and dates of birth, marriage, residence, and death. All names should be given in full if possible. No initials should be used when the full name is known.

Burton. — Josiah, born at Stratford, Conn., 6 June 1732, died at Manchester, Vt., 28 May 1793, son of Benjamin and Bethiah (Curtis) Burton and grandson of Salomon Burton, who settled in Stratford in 1688, by Winifred Lovering Holman, 39 Winsor Avenue, Watertown, Mass.

Howard. — Thomas, born at Norwich, co. Norfolk, England, 10 Feb. 1640, came to Norwich, Conn., as early as 1660, died in Connecticut in 1676, by Cecil Hampden Cutts Howard, Beebe, Ark.

Charles F. Jenney

THE
HISTORICAL AND GENEALOGICAL REGISTER

OCTOBER, 1924

HON. CHARLES FRANCIS JENNEY, LL.B.

By Arthur Winslow Peirce, A.B., Litt.D., of Franklin, Mass.

Charles Francis Jenney, of Hyde Park, Mass., Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, died at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston on Thanksgiving Day, 29 November 1923, after undergoing an operation for gallstones on the preceding Tuesday. He had been a resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society since 1914, and, though not active in its work, was deeply sympathetic with its aims and ideals and followed its proceedings with cordial interest, as well as those of many other organizations of a similar nature in which he held membership.

Justice Jenney was born in Middleborough, Mass., 16 September 1860, the son of Charles Edwin and Elvira Frances (Clark) Jenney. He was ninth in descent from John Jenney of Plymouth, 1623, who came originally from Norwich, England, via Holland, his abiding place for several years. He was descended also from Elder William Brewster and other passengers in the Mayflower.

His early life was spent on a farm, and he attended the district school till he was twelve years old. His family then moved to North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Mass., and he was graduated from the Brockton High School, at the head of his class, in 1878. His scholarly habit of mind and his love of learning were early manifested by the fact that he took every course that the school offered except that in stenography, and only inability to find hours enough in the day excluded that. After graduating he taught for two years in the Brockton schools. He then entered the Law School of Boston University, where he was graduated, again at the head of his class, summa cum laude, in 1883. He finished the three years' course in two years, and was admitted to the bar of Norfolk County in 1882, receiving his degree of Bachelor of Laws in the following year.

He removed to Hyde Park, Mass., while a student in the Law School, and remained a resident of that place all his life. On 12 October 1886 he married Mary E. Bruce of that town, a native of Nova Scotia, and their home was at 100 Gordon Avenue. Their two daughters, Elsie, wife of Dr. G. G. Pearce of New Bedford, Mass., and Mildred, are graduates of Wellesley College. Mrs. Jenney and their daughters, together with Judge Jenney's brother, Edwin Clark Jenney, LL.B. (Boston University, 1890), at present United States Commissioner in Boston, and his sister, Mrs. Mabelle Rich of West Roxbury, Mass., survive him.

He practised law first in Hyde Park and later in Boston, maintaining offices in both places till 1889, when he confined his attention to his Boston office, though still doing much legal work for his fellow townsmen. He had a large clientele in what would be called a general practice, but he was specially interested and skilled in equity practice and procedure and in real-estate law and conveyancing.

He was very active in the life of the town, holding many responsible positions, including those of selectman, trustee of the Public Library, and town counsel. Accepting freely and generously his responsibilities as a citizen, he gave his influence and his endeavor to every cause that makes for civic well-being.

In 1886 he was a Republican representative in the General Court of Massachusetts, and in 1907 and 1908 he was a member of the Massachusetts Senate, serving in the latter year as chairman of the important Judiciary Committee, where he did notable work. He declined to be a candidate for a third term. His service in the Legislature brought him wide honor as a careful, sane, and able public official; and he displayed there those qualities of painstaking study of problems and preëminent fairness of judgment that were the foundation and the justification of his later honors.

Through all his career as a lawyer and public servant his constant aim was to get a thorough and complete knowledge of the problem in hand. No matter how small the matter, whether in a legal point at issue or in the best course to pursue for town or State, he felt that he must know the subject through and through and from every angle. Thoroughness was a part of his creed. This was not only his duty but his pleasure. Be it a knotty legal problem or a question of State policy, he found solid satisfaction in seeing it through to the end, and, when he had arrived at a conclusion, most men who knew him well trusted his judgment and were willing to follow him; and so well grounded in law and judgment and common sense were his decisions that men hesitated to try to refute them. All his life he was a student of the law, reading his law books with the same interest that other men read history or fiction, as a sort of relaxation rather than a necessary grind. So he became "learned in the law." This made his long years (1885–1909) as instructor and lecturer in Massachusetts Practice in the Boston University Law School years of preëminent service to the School and to the students under him. He taught as one well grounded in the theory and practice of his profession, and the host of young men who listened testify unanimously to the clarity and comprehensiveness of his lectures.

In 1909 Gov. Eben Sumner Draper appointed him a justice of the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, an appointment that was the reward of eminent fitness and splendid service and was furthered by no social or political influences. In a judiciary, renowned for its excellence all over the land, this appointment was held as one that honored the bench as well as the appointee, one befitting his record as a lawyer and a man. He filled the office most acceptably, his experience as a town official and as a lawmaker, together with the judicial quality of his mind and his scholarly thoroughness, making him a judge whose opinions were respected by his colleagues and the bar.

In 1919 Gov. Calvin Coolidge, with whom he had served in the Legislature, appointed him a justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, to take the place of Justice William Caleb Loring, resigned. This, too, was a promotion on merit, and was everywhere heartily approved. On this bench he served until his death. His years of service here were years of difficult and wearing work; and the long and exacting summer trial of the so-called "Tufts Case" was a great strain on his physical vitality and was perhaps the beginning of the breakdown of his health.

As a judge of both courts he won esteem and confidence because of his fairness, his judicial poise of mind, and the legal knowledge manifested in his decisions. The bar had a deep respect for the man and for his judicial opinions, which they knew to be the result of searching examination and sound judgment. His colleagues on the bench found him always ready to do his part and ever alert to assist them in case of need. While on the bench of the Superior Court, he gave much of his time to the equity session, for which his outstanding sense of fairness peculiarly adapted him.

Outside his professional life he had many interests, and an enumeration of the organizations to which he belonged will show clearly the bent of his mind. In addition to the New England Historic Genealogical Society he held membership in the American Antiquarian Society, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, the Hyde Park Historical Society, the Dedham Historical Society, the Canton Historical Society, the Nuttall Ornithological Club, the Cooper Ornithological Club, the Wilson Ornithological Club, the National Association of Audubon Societies, the American Ornithologists' Union, the Boston Society of Natural History, the New England Botanical Club, the American Fern Society, the Appalachian Mountain Club, the Massachusetts Bar Association, the Boston Bar Association, the Norfolk Bar Association, the Abstract Club, and the Union Club of Boston.

He had two real hobbies, the study of birds and the study of plants and flowers. He studied these as thoroughly and as enthusiastically as he did the problems of the law. And he was an authority on these subjects. Noted botanists and ornithologists were welcome guests in his home. Judge Chamberlain, who shared his tastes, and others made long excursions with him. He made many and sometimes very difficult trips to study birds in various regions. In the pursuit of this hobby he made journeys to Bird Rock in the Magdalen Islands, Cape Breton, Labrador, Percé in the Province of Quebec, Arizona, Knox Island in North Carolina, the Orkney and Shetland Islands, and many other bird haunts.

His wide knowledge in these branches was always at the service of any seeker after information, whether friend or casual acquaintance; and this knowledge was always at his immediate command, clear and accurate, with the book and the place quickly found if the inquirer wanted to read more on the subject. Though physically a large man, he was able to take long tramps, and he found it a pleasure always to take with him groups of congenial spirits or those who were glad to share in his wide experience with the life of plants and birds. He never seemed to think of it as a necessity of health or exercise to take a man engrossed in sedentary labors out into the open, but as something worth while doing for its own sake, and in this he found joy and recreation.

No sketch of Judge Jenney's life would be complete without including the story of his relations to his summer home, Monhegan Island, off the coast of Maine, where he was held in the highest esteem by the little group of a hundred or more permanent inhabitants and by the small army of visitors, mainly artists, college professors, and teachers, who come to the island each summer.

He went to Monhegan first about 1894. Many things about it attracted him — its isolation, its wild and gentle scenic beauty, its rather unusual variety (for an isolated island) of plants and birds, the type of people that its peculiar advantages and disadvantages brought together of a summer, and the character and life of the native fishing population of the island. To these fisher folk he became a good friend and a trusted counsellor.

In 1907 he built a house on the shore of the island, and spent all or a part of practically every summer in this home, to which he was much attracted and to which he welcomed many friends. He became greatly interested in the past of the little island, whose English history goes back to 1605, when Weymouth landed there, and which boasted a flourishing settlement long before the Pilgrims set foot on Plymouth soil, a colony, indeed, that more than once helped the Pilgrims through a starving period, the place where Samoset learned the English speech with which he greeted the astonished colonists at Plymouth. There were few families on Monhegan, and inherited land was seldom divided. Long years ago, it is said, an irate judge, his patience sorely tried by litigation, came to the island and insisted that inherited property should be divided and that each one's share should be set apart. But that was many years ago, and again there was much land in which an individual owned a sixty-fourth part interest or even a hundred and twenty-eighth part. Judge Jenney, with his brother and others, bought considerable land on Monhegan, and the problem of hunting down titles and obtaining releases took him deep into the history and genealogy of the island. In the end, it might be fairly said that, in his thorough way, he knew more about the families of the island than any of the islanders themselves.

In the year 1914 came the three hundredth anniversary of the expedition of Capt. John Smith to New England, on which he made Monhegan Harbor his headquarters for the summer, while in small boats he charted the coast and made his famous first map of New England. Judge Jenney enlisted himself early in the preparation for a fitting celebration of this event, and to him naturally fell the duty of preparing the historical address. This he afterwards elaborated, with the same painstaking care which he gave to everything that he did, by wide research in land registries, historical societies, and Colonial records, and even by a careful study of the English founders and owners of the prosperous fishing colony in America, Jennings and Eldredge, for which he made special studies at Plymouth and Bristol, England, where they lived.

The product of this study he gave as an address before the American Antiquarian Society at Worcester, and it was published in the proceedings of that organization. This was still further enlarged, with appendixes and map, and was published in 1923 as an historical monograph, under the title "The Fortunate Island of Monhegan." It is not too much to say that in it the story of this historic island is set down in perpetuum. Every statement is fortified by references in footnotes to original sources, and the little volume is of the utmost value both to those interested in the island and to students of our Colonial history.

As a man, "the Judge", as he was most often called, embodied the best characteristics of his New England heritage written large — strict integrity, the love of sound learning, civic pride and a sense of civic responsibility, loyalty and devotion to his home and family, and a deep, democratic, and helpful interest in the men with whom he came in contact. This Society, as well as his home and the State, deeply mourns his loss. Of men like him the world has great need.

Her half sister, Harriet Castle, became the wife of Jonadab Winchester's half brother, Francis Woods Winchester (127). Jonadab Winchester enlisted in the Army 12 May 1812, and was discharged 20 May 1813. On 1 May 1871, when 76 years old, he applied for a pension, which was granted. He attended the higher grades of school from the time of his discharge from the Army till his marriage. Soon after his marriage he migrated to Ellery, N. At Ellery he taught school, and later was a justice of the peace and a school examiner. His chief occupation, however, was farming. He and his son were among the founders of the Madison (Ohio) Seminary, and both were members of its Board of Trustees; and he was also a liberal benefactor of the American Bible Society.

He married at Baton Rouge, La., 7 Sept. 1833, Maria Hutches, who was born at Staten Island, N. Y., 5 Nov. 1804, moved to Baton Rouge when two years old, and died of heart disease 2 July 1861, daughter of Thomas and Mary Ann (McGoggie). Both husband and wife are buried at Baton Rouge.

*The record received from one of this branch of the family stated that Thomas Jefferson Winchester (140) had no children, but adopted two, a daughter, who died when fifteen years old, and a son. As Charles Leopold Winchester of Bangor, Me., a son of this son, stated in 1918 that he had never heard that his father, Edwin Carleton Winchester, was adopted, though he had no proof to the contrary, this line is carried out in this genealogy.

Alden Winchester lived at West Baton Rouge from 1834 to 1845 and then in Pointe Coupee Parish. He was a cotton planter and slaveholder. His family were Secessionists and ardent supporters of the Southern cause, and were ruined by the Civil War.

One son and one daughter, both of whom d. young.

Six other children, b. before Ruby; all were either stillborn or lived but a few days.

142. Hosea[6] Winchester (Benjamin,[5] Dea. Elhanan,[4] Elhanan,[3] Josiah,[2] John[1]), born at South Brimfield (now Wales) 16 Apr. 1796, died at Belleville, N. J., 25 Sept. 1866. He married first, at Quincy, 26 Sept. 1835, Abigail Emeline Robbins, born at Cambridge 12 Aug. 1798, daughter of John and Abigail (Wyeth); and secondly his first cousin by the half blood, Mrs. Mary Ann (Rice) Adams, daughter of Daniel and Lois (Winchester) Rice (vide supra, 28, vii).

In early manhood Hosea Winchester had some connection with the Shaker colony in the town of Harvard, of which his father, grandfather, and others of his family were members. He was their outside business man, selling the herbs they prepared and conducting their business with the outside world. His first wife was a member of the community, but they both left it prior to their marriage. Afterwards he was a wholesale and retail druggist and a dealer in herbs, extracts, and gums, for some time in Boston, where he had an eye and ear infirmary on Hanover Street, and then for many years on John Street in New York City, where his store was called the U. S. Botanic Depot. During this latter period he lived on an estate of fifty-four acres at Belleville, N. J., on the outskirts of Newark, and here for many years his daughter and her children lived with him. He was a man of character and of genial, kindly disposition, and, like his daughter, has left a cherished memory. He was proud of his Winchester blood, and all through his life kept in close touch with his relatives far and near.

Children by first wife:

i. Hosea Dana,[7] d. young.

ii. Emeline Robbins, b. in Boston; d. at Little Falls, N. J.; m. at Belleville, N. J., her second cousin by the half blood, Henry G. Adams, s. of her father's second wife.

Children (surname Adams), order of births not given:

1. Myra Winchester, of Little Falls, N. J. In the eighties she worked ardently with her cousin, the late William A. Amee of Cambridge, also of the Winchester blood, on the compilation of a Winchester genealogy, but this work was cut short by the serious illness and death of Mr. Amee. From her copious notes made at that time she has given to the compiler of this genealogy the most generous help; and he takes the greatest pleasure in acknowledging not only her kindness but also her keen and intelligent interest in the work. From her he has received more material than from any other source, much of which, gathered nearly forty years ago, it would have been impossible to obtain to-day.

Two other children.

*Though the information received about this family stated that Benjamin Winchester lived at Poultney, Vt., it would look, from the various birthplaces of his children and the places of death of his second and third wives, as if he must have moved to western New York.

Children by second wife:

iv. Mary Elizabeth, b. at Clarendon, N. Y., 14 Sept. 1849; d. in Colorado in 1915; m. in 1867 Harlan Keyes, and lived near Detroit, Mich. She is said to have been adopted, with her father's consent, into some other family when she was a baby.

†His grandson thinks that the initial "P." stood for Palmer or Pritchard, the latter being his mother's maiden surname.

A few months after his father's death, in 1795, he was taken to live with a Mr. Palmer at Fayette, Me., as his adopted son, and in 1816 he moved to Corinna. He was one of the earliest temperance advocates in central Maine.

AMPHILLIS, WIFE OF REV. LAWRENCE WASHINGTON OF PURLEIGH, CO. ESSEX, ENGLAND

By J. Gardner Bartlett and Elizabeth (French) Bartlett of Cambridge, Mass.

In Tyler's Quarterly Historical and Genealogical Magazine, vol. 4, pages 359–380 (January 1923), is an article entitled "The Washington Emigrants and their Parents," by T. Pape, B.A. This article states that the late Henry F. Waters in 1889, in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, "tried to prove that John Washington, who emigrated to America in the year 1656, was the eldest son of the Rev. Lawrence Washington, Rector of Purleigh, Essex, from 1633 to 1643, and that this Rev. Lawrence Washington was the fifth son of Lawrence Washington of Sulgrave." A reader of this article obtains the impression that this theory of Mr. Waters was proved by Mr. Pape, who also offers some suggested corrections to Mr. Waters's article. Nevertheless, not only did Mr. Waters make out an established case for his claim, but also during his lifetime the additional corroborative evidences recently given in this article by Mr. Pape were made public in the REGISTER by Mr. Waters himself, Mr. Worthington Chauncey Ford, and others. That Mr. Pape himself has apparently erred in his analysis of some of these evidences, it is the purpose of the present article to set forth.

Mr. Waters suggested that Amphillis, wife of Rev. Lawrence Washington, was Amphillis Roades, sister of William Roades; Mr. Pape shows that this idea was erroneous, but is himself in error in claiming that her maiden name was Amphillis Bovden or Bouden, an erroneous suggestion originally made in 1897 by the late William Brigg of London and published in his Herts Genealogist and Antiquary, vol. 2, pages 47–48. A brief synopsis of all the essential evidences so far made public on this matter is given herewith.

Andrew Knowling of Tring, co. Herts, in his will, dated 13 Jan. 1649/50, bequeathed to his daughters-in-law [i.e., stepdaughters] Amphillis Washington and Elizabeth Fitzherbert, to his son-in-law William Rhoades, to the two daughters of his deceased daughter-in-law [i.e., stepdaughter] Susan Billing by her late husband John Billing, and to John, Lawrence, William, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Martha Washington (when twenty-one), children of the said Amphillis; and he appointed as executor the said Lawrence Washington the younger and as overseers, during his minority, John Dagnall of Grove, the said William Rhoades, and the said Elizabeth Fitzherbert. This will was proved 29 Jan. 1649/50 by John Dagnall of Tring and William Roades of Middle Claydon, co. Bucks, as guardians of Lawrence Washington, Junior, aged about fourteen years.*

On 29 Jan. 1649/50 John Dagnall of Grove in Tring gave bonds in £50 as guardian of the two daughters of Susan Billing, deceased, by her late husband John Billing, the said John Dagnall being husband of Elizabeth Dagnall, sister by the mother to the said two daughters.† In the original document the word "sister" was inserted in place of "aunte," which was crossed out.

The following records and letter are important for the purpose of this article:

LETTER FROM AMPHILLIS WASHINGTON TO WILLIAM ROADES OF MIDDLE CLAYDON, CO. BUCKS*

"Good Brother.

"My kind love remembered to you and my Sister and to all my Cossens, these are to Sertify you that my nephew Dagnall hath not bought Ripington's house . . . My Nephew will not bye it because [etc.] . . . Yr truly Loving Sister to command to her power till death

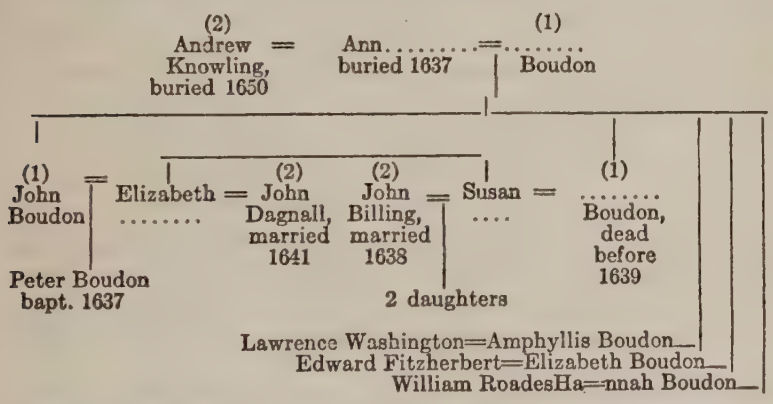
Amph=Washington

"Tring, this 28th Janeuary [probably 1652/3]."

From the above evidences Mr. Pape draws the following conclusions, illustrated by the appended chart, all given on page 368 of his article:

"It seems probable that Andrew Knowling married a widow Anne Boudon, who had by her first husband at least two sons, one of whom was named John, and at least three daughters, named Amphyllis, Elizabeth and Hannah. . . . The following is only a suggested relationship:"



(2) Andrew Knowling, buried 1650 = Ann..... buried 1637 =..... (1) Boudon
(1) John Boudon =
Elizabeth .....
(2) John Dagnall, married 1641
(2) John Billing, married 1638 = Susan = ... (1) ..... Boudon, dead before 1639
Peter Boudon bapt. 1637
2 daughters
Lawrence Washington=Amphyllis Boudon
Edward Fitzherbert=Elizabeth Boudon
William RoadesHa=nnah Boudon

It is apparent from the evidences that some of the connections claimed above by Mr. Pape are erroneous. The chart makes Elizabeth, wife of John Dagnall, to be sister of Susan, wife of John Billing, and therefore "aunt by the mother" to Susan's children, whereas the correction in the original bond terms Elizabeth "sister by the mother" to Susan's children, i.e., their half sister. The records therefore actually show that Susan married first [probably about 1617] ——— Bouden, by whom she had a daughter, Elizabeth Bouden [born probably about 1618], who married first [probably in *Preserved among the Verney Family Papers at Claydon House, co. Bucks. The italics are by the authors of this article.

1636] John Bouden, had by this marriage a son, Peter Bouden, baptized 21 Feb. 1636/7, and married secondly, 24 June 1641, John Dagnall. Susan (as "Mrs. Susan Bovdon") married secondly, 14 Dec. 1638, John Billing, by whom she had the two children to whom Elizabeth (Bouden) Dagnall was "sister by the mother," i.e., half sister.

As Andrew Knowling terms Susan Billing, Elizabeth Fitzherbert, and Amphillis Washington his "daughters-in-law," it seems reasonable to conclude that they were sisters, and that they were daughters of his wife Ann by a previous marriage, i.e., his stepdaughters; and, as Amphillis terms William Roades her "brother" and his wife her "sister" and Andrew Knowling terms Roades his "son-in-law," it also seems evident that Hannah, the wife of William Roades, was another sister of Susan, Elizabeth, and Amphillis, since William Roades could not have been a stepson of Knowling, as it is known that Roades's mother, Ann Roades, died in 1636 and his father, John Roades, survived until 1644.

Furthermore, Amphillis Washington, in her letter from Tring [about 1653], mentions "my nephew Dagnall," evidently referring, in the sense of nephew by marriage, to John Dagnall of Grove in Tring, husband of her niece Elizabeth (Bouden) Dagnall, who was daughter of Susan (———) (Bouden) Billing, a sister of Mrs. Amphillis Washington. The appended chart explains the foregoing conclusions and seems to make a simple explanation of the various connections and relationships mentioned in the records. But the name of the first husband of Ann (———) Knowling, the father of her children, Susan (———) (Bouden) Billing, Hannah (———) Roades, Elizabeth (———) Fitzherbert, and Amphillis (———) Washington, remains to be discovered.

GENEALOGICAL GLEANINGS IN ENGLAND

Contributed by G. Andrews Moriarty, Jr., A.M., LL.B., of Newport, R. I., and communicated by the Committee on English Research

Almy

In the Register, vol. 71, pages 310–324, may be found an article by George Walter Chamberlain, M.S., entitled "The English Ancestry of William Almy of Portsmouth, R. I.," which is based in part on an earlier article contributed by the present Chairman of the Committee on English Research to the Essex Institute Historical Collections, vol. 49, pages 172–176. The records printed below supply additional information about this Almy family in its English home.

It should be noted, however, that the statement made by Mr. Chamberlain in his article in the Register (vol. 71, page 319), that Thomas Almey of Dunton-Bassett, co. Leicester (No. 2 of Pedigree I), was born about 1550, is obviously an error, for William Almey, son of this Thomas, was born about 1556, as is stated in the article in question and as is proved by the deposition of William, made in 1625, when he was aged 68 years (ib., page 318). Therefore Thomas Almey, father of William, was born probably about 1530, and Thomas's father, John Almey, with whom Mr. Chamberlain's pedigree begins, was born probably about 1500–1505.

[The entries in the lay subsidies given above show that John Almey of Dunton-Bassett, co. Leicester (No. 1 of Pedigree I in Mr. Chamberlain's article), was undoubtedly the son either of William Almey or of Christopher Almey of the subsidy of 15 Henry VIII [1523–24]. These two men may have been brothers, and in that case they were born undoubtedly in the last quarter of the fifteenth century; or they may have been father and son. The other two men, John Reynold and Robert Rynold, of the subsidy of 1523–24 at Dunton-Bassett, and also Robert Reynolds, of the subsidy of 13 Elizabeth [1570–71], were probably relatives of the wife of John Almey (No. 1 of Pedigree I), who was a Reignolds. The wife of Thomas Almey (No. 2 of Pedigree I) was Joan Wale, and the surname Wale is found in several of the entries given above. The first wife of Christopher Almey (No. 6 of Pedigree I) was ——— Clarke, daughter of ——— Clarke of Lutterworth, co. Leicester, and the Henry Clarke of the subsidy of 39 Elizabeth [1596–97] was probably her father.]

From the Records of the Court of Requests*

February, 22 James I [February, 1624/5]. Edmund Clement of Lutterworth [co. Leicester], clerk, recites that on Easter last past he exhibited his bill of complaint against one Christopher Almey of South Kilworth [co. Leicester], yeoman. Twenty-seven years ago the complainant by suretyships undertaken for his friends and by other losses and misfortunes became indebted to divers persons, some in London and others in the counties of Leicester, Northampton, and elsewhere, in the sum of £1200 in all, and desiring to pay this great debt out of what should yearly accrue out of your subject's parsonage and incumbency at Lutterworth and wishing his creditors to receive from time to time out of the yearly profits equally and indifferently such sums of money as in twelve years would make full satisfaction of the principal due, being all his poor estate could bear, your subject about 38

*Preserved in the Public Record Office, London.

Elizabeth [1595–96] exhibited his bill, in the nature of a humble petition to the said late Queen of famous memory, in Your Highness's High Court of Whitehall at Westminster, and thereby set forth that your subject was indebted to William Miller of Whitebrook, co. Warwick, gentleman, William Tilley, citizen and merchant tailor of London, Richard Halford of Gilmorton in Leicester, gentleman, John Robinson, merchant of the Staple, Thomas Hoddiler, citizen and salter of London, William Hericke, citizen and goldsmith of London, Thomas Garwaie, merchant of the Staple of England, Thomas Ashley of Kirby, co. Northampton, husbandman, John Mobbey of Leicester town, yeoman, Christopher Almey, then of Lutterworth, yeoman, and divers others, to the number of thirty or more, in divers sums, amounting to £1200, and, having no way to pay his debts but the profits of his living and being desirous to give contentment out of his living by yearly payments to prevent many suits then growing and more likely to grow, he prayed for a commission out of the Court or under the privy seal to be directed, amongst others, to the Right Worshipful Sir Edward Hastings and Henrie Turvile, Esq., justices of the peace of the county of Leicester, commanding them or any one of them to call your subject and all his creditors and to mediate and end discords touching the said debts, as the estate would afford and as might give contentment to the creditors. A commission was accordingly awarded to Sir Edward Hastings and William [sic] Turvile in 38 Elizabeth [1595-96], and they called the creditors and examined your subject's estate, which they found to be very weak for so great a debt. In a treaty in what manner they would be contented to receive their due, amongst others the said Christopher Almey, then of Lutterworth, yeoman, was present, and acquainted the said Commissioners with his debt of £27, and stated that he would be content with yearly payments at such times and in such manner as contented the other creditors. The commissioners, then perceiving a charitable inclination of the said Christopher Almey and the other creditors to take small payments, with the consent of all the creditors determined that, if the creditors would abate by one half their debt, which divers did, then your subject should provide some able men to whom your said subject should make a list of his tithes and parsonage, and should be bound to pay the rest of the said sum so abated in two or three years, at the most, in yearly payments, but such as would not abate any of their claims should receive payments in ten years by yearly payments; and the commissioners directed your subject that tithes and other profits of the parsonage of Lutterworth (except a matter of £20, which your subject received for his livelihood) were to be paid to Robert Garfield of London, dyer, and Robert Smith of Lutterworth, barber, to have and to hold for twelve years next ensuing, for the yearly rent of a peppercorn, and on such lease they should enter into a bond with the creditors for the payment of their yearly sums. All this was done, and a schedule of debt was made, and Christopher Almey was to be paid £2. 5s. on 2 February 1598, £2. 5s. on 2 February 1599, and £2. 5s. on 2 February 1600 [and similar yearly payments down through 2 February 1608, amounting to £27]. These sums were to be paid to Christopher Almey by the said Smith and Garfield, and said Almey did from time to time deliver up to the said lessees their several bonds, to the number of ten specialties, and all the other persons also were paid, to the amount of £1200, and the creditors did deliver up their bonds and your subject's old bonds originally given to the said creditors, and Robert Smith demanded of the said Almey his said old bond, as well as of the said other creditors. But Almey refused, as he feared the lessees would not perform their agreements, and for the purpose of vexing and troubling your subject did retain the old bond, and, as the said lessees were only entrusted by your subject to take up the other bonds and as they forgot to continue to demand the same, the said Almey kept his bond after the last payment made in 1608 for ten years and never molested your subject, and then, well knowing that the commissioners and most of the others concerned were dead, the said Almey, about the year 1616, threatened your poor subject that, if he would not make a new bond for £100 for the payment of £50 (that being the full forfeiture on the old bond) at a day shortly to come and now long past, he would immediately arrest and imprison your said subject on the old bond; and your poor subject, to avoid open discredit and fearing to be deprived of the public exercise of his ministry, it being the only comfort of his life, was driven to enter into the £100 bond for payment of the £50, and said Almey, well knowing that your subject could not pay then, promised not to use any extreme course thereupon against your subject or compel him to pay any more than his means would afford, but, contrarily, he entered upon a suit in the Common Pleas on the bond, and threatened your subject with prison, and would have undone him in his estate, if he had not been relieved by Your Most Excellent Majesty; and your subject then prayed for a writ of privy seal against the said Christopher Allmey, to answer in the premises, and an injunction to stay proceedings at the law. And at a full hearing by counsel on both sides it appeared that the said defendant had confessed that about twenty-seven years last past he had accounted for the several payments but that the money paid was for interest only. Now, upon consideration, the Commission [sic] ordered that an injunction should be awarded against this defendant, his attorney, counsel, and solicitors, for a stay of proceedings. Since when the said Christopher Almey made his last will and testament and lately died, since which death his son William Almey and his executors proved the said will* and prosecuted suits at law with great violence against your poor subject, and they threaten him on his bond to arrest him, and your subject is forced to keep to his house and to neglect his ministry since before Christmas last past. He prays for a writ of privy seal against William Almey, and that he be enjoined as his father, Christopher Almey, was.

The answer of William Almey, executor of the will of Christopher Almey, deceased, defendant to the above-set-forth bill, asserts the insufficiency of the said bill, which is carelessly exhibited to trouble him and put him at unnecessary expenses and charges in the law rather than upon any good cause. The complainant did heretofore put in his bill against Christopher Almey, who answered the same, and this answer is true. The complainant did owe the deceased Christopher Almey the sum of £50, in a bond of £100. The testator never did in 1616 threaten the complainant, in order to make him give a penalty bond of £100. That bond was made upon a just reckoning and on this complainant's request for a longer time to pay the £50 due on the old bond, and the complainant did entreat Mr. Henry Flamell, the testator's attorney, not long before the testator's death, to get the testator to forbear the £50 a longer time, offering to pay the interest long past due, and not by fear of discredit was he drawn into giving the bond or by the testator's promise not to go to extremes on the said bond. True it is that about five months last past Christopher Almey made his will, and made the defendant executor of the same; and about Christmas last past the said complainant did in the presence of divers persons acknowledge and confess the debt of the £50 as still due, and that it was a just and true debt still unpaid, and the complainant has been instigated by others to commence this suit, and the complainant has offered the defendant a very good security to pay £25 on the Feast of St. Luke the Evangelist† next coming and £27 on that day come twelve months. This complainant also wrote divers letters to the testator to intreat him for forbearance, and, moreover, the testator on his deathbed and in the time of his sickness declared that the said money was due on the bond of £100 and that it was a just debt. Defendant prays that the debt be adjudged due and that it be caused to be paid, as the testator's personal estate is not able to pay all the debts owing, and this defendant, the executor, has become indebted and payeth interest upon £200, and not with £50 can he satisfy the just debts due from the estate. This complainant's estate hath been sequestered for great debts, and, he being unable to make satisfaction, the testator had prosecuted his claim against this complainant, who is better able to pay than the defendant to loose the £50, having enjoyed a very good parsonage of the value of eight score pounds per annum and having no charges of wife or child to maintain. True it is that the complainant [sic] intended to put the bond in suit at the common law, and the more so as the testator was much damnified by the complainant's long delay in making payment. (Court of Requests, uncalendared, James I, B. 38, part 2.)

*His will, dated 2 Oct. 1624, was proved 29 Oct. 1624. Christopher Almey was buried at South Kilworth, co. Leicester, 4 Oct. 1624. (Register, vol. 71, pp. 314, 317, 320.)

[In the article by Mr. Chamberlain to which reference has been made above an abstract was given (REGISTER, vol. 71, p. 318) of a document in the records of the Court of Requests which, it was stated, showed that in 1625 Edward Clement, clerk, sued William Almey, yeoman, son and executor of Christopher Almey, deceased, about the parsonage of Lutterworth [co. Leicester] and a bond connected therewith, the suit having been brought first against Christopher Almey and, after his death, against his son and executor William Almey. The documents of which abstracts are given above supply full particulars about this case, in which the defendant was William Almey (No. 7 of Pedigree I in Mr. Chamberlain's article), who emigrated to New England and finally settled at Portsmouth, R. I. This case is of considerable interest from the point of view of the legal antiquary as illustrating the process employed in bankruptcy proceedings in England in the early part of the seventeenth century. The commissioners correspond to the modern referee in bankruptcy, the two men appointed by them to receive the debtor's moneys and apply them correspond to our trustees in bankruptcy, and the action appears to have been begun by a petition to the Court at Westminster.]

SLOCUM

To the REGISTER of July 1916 (vol. 70, pages 283–284) the present Chairman of the Committee on English Research contributed a note entitled "Parentage of Giles Slocum of Portsmouth, R. I.," in which abstracts of English wills were given that made it appear probable that Giles Slocombe, son of Charity (Bickham) Slocombe of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, was identical with Giles Slocum, an early settler of Portsmouth, R. I. The will of Charity Slocombe of Old Cleeve, widow, dated 21 Nov. 1642, was proved 26 Jan. 1642/3, her son Giles being sole executor; and in the note in the REGISTER it was pointed out that Giles Slocum of Portsmouth, R. I., probably did not arrive in New England until 1647 or 1648, in spite of the assumption of some genealogists that he was at Portsmouth as early as or soon after 1638. The records printed below undoubtedly give the marriage of the parents of Giles Slocum, the Portsmouth settler, and his own baptism. He probably emigrated to New England shortly after the death of his mother, lived for a few years at Taunton, Mass., where Anthony Slocum, who afterwards migrated to Carolina, was then residing, and settled at Portsmouth in or shortly before 1648. The entries taken from the lay subsidies show that there were many Slocums in Old Cleeve and in neighboring parishes in the last years of the sixteenth and the first half of the seventeenth century.

MEMOIRS OF DECEASED MEMBERS OF THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORIC GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

Prepared by Rev. Lewis Wilder Hicks, M.A., Historian

1923*

David Blakely Hoar, A.B., of Brookline, Mass., a resident member since 1902, was born at Pawlet, Vt., 19 August 1855, the son of John Emory and Ann Borrodaile (Blakely) Hoar, and died unmarried in Boston 8 March 1923.

The English home and ancestry of the Hoar family of New England and their early history in Massachusetts have been set forth in an article compiled by Henry S. Nourse and entitled "The Ancestry of the Hoar Family in America," which was published in the Register of January, April, and July 1899 (vol. 53, pp. 92–101, 186–198, 289–300). From this article it appears that Charles Hoare the Elder of the city of Gloucester, England, saddler, whose wife's name was Margery and whose will was dated 29 May 1632, was the earliest of the surname from whom the descent of the New England family has been proved. His son, Charles Hoare the Younger, brewer, an alderman of Gloucester from 1632 to 1638 and sheriff of the city in 1634, married Joanna Hincksman, and died in 1638, his will being dated 25 September and proved 21 December of that year. Soon afterwards, probably about 1640, all the children of Charles and Joanna (Hincksman) Hoare who are named in their father's will, except Thomas (who was probably the eldest surviving son), migrated to New England, their mother Joanna accompanying them. These children were Margery Matthews, widow of John Matthews, who married secondly, in New England, Rev. Henry Flynt of Braintree, Mass., John, the ancestor of the subject of this memoir and also of the late Hon. George Frisbie Hoar, Daniel, who became a trader in Boston and later returned to England, Leonard, who was graduated at Harvard College in 1650, became a minister, and served for a short and unhappy term as the third president of Harvard, and Joanna, who married Col. Edmund Quincy of Braintree. Joanna, the widowed mother of these children, died at Braintree 21 December 1661.

John[1] Hoar, son of Charles and Joanna (Hincksman) Hoar, was at Scituate in the Plymouth Colony in 1643, moved to Concord, Mass., in 1659, and was the means of rescuing Mrs. Rowlandson from her captivity among the Indians in 1676. His wife Alice died 5 June 1696, and he died 2 April 1704. Of their three children, Elizabeth married, as his second wife, Jonathan Prescott of Lancaster, and became the ancestress of many distinguished descendants; Mary married Benjamin Graves; and Daniel[2] Hoar, the only son, who was born in 1650, married first, 16 July 1677, Mary Stratton, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Fry), and had by her eleven children, of whom the eldest, John,[3] was the ancestor of David Blakely Hoar, while the third son, Lieut. Daniel,[3] was the progenitor of the branch of the family that numbered the late Senator Hoar among its members.

John[3] Hoar, son of Daniel[2] and Mary (Stratton), was born at Watertown, Mass., 24 October 1678, and died at Sudbury, Mass., 1 March 1764. By his wife Ruth he had ten children, of whom Josiah,[4] the ninth child, who was born at Sudbury 2 January 1717 and died in 1779, married, 6 February 1745, Mary Walker, and is said to have served in the Revolutionary War as a captain. Jonathan[5] Hoar, son of Josiah[4] and Mary (Walker), born at Sudbury 9 January 1747, married, 1 April 1773, Sarah Heard, and was a sergeant of Minutemen and later a lieutenant in the Revolution. He died 19 February 1813. His son, David[6] Hoar, born at Sudbury 2 September 1773, moved to Poultney, Vt., and died 16 September 1862. He had a son Hiram,[7] who was born at Poultney 4 November 1803 and died 23 October 1886. This Hiram Hoar married Sarah Smith, a remarkable woman, whose son felt that to her influence he owed most of his success in life. She was born at East Sudbury (now Wayland), Mass., 29 December 1806, and was fifth in descent from Richard Smith, who came from Shropham, co. Norfolk, England, and settled in Ipswich, Mass., about 1640. She was also a descendant of John and Priscilla (Mullens) Alden of the Mayflower band.

John Emory[8] Hoar, A.M., son of Hiram[7] and Sarah (Smith) Hoar and father of David Blakely Hoar, was born at Poultney, Vt., 22 November 1828, and died at Brookline, Mass., 29 March 1902. He received his early education in a district school in his native town, and, after he had reached the age of sixteen, in the seminary at Castleton, Vt. There he was a pupil for three years, and then was admitted to the freshman class in Middlebury College, which he left a year later to enter Harvard, where he joined the junior class in the autumn of 1850 and received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1852 and the degree of Master of Arts, in course, three years later. He had begun his career as a teacher when he was only seventeen years old, in a district school in Rutland Co., Vt., he was an instructor as well as a pupil during his last year at the seminary at Castleton, and during his college course he supported himself by teaching. All the expenses of his higher education were met by his own efforts, with the exception of $80 given to him by his father when he went to Harvard. In the latter part of his senior year at Harvard he was a submaster in the Cambridge High School, and he held this position until April 1854, when he was elected principal of the Brookline High School, and served in that capacity for about thirty-five years, resigning in 1888. He was one of the organizers, in 1857, of the Brookline Public Library, was its first librarian, serving as such for fourteen years, and was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Library from 1895 until his death. He served also on the School Committee, was a charter member, trustee, and vice president of the Brookline Historical Society, was a resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society from 1866 until his death, and for some years was corresponding secretary of the American Institute of Instruction.* His first wife, Ann Borrodaile Blakely, mother of the subject of this memoir, whom he married 16 August 1854, was born at Pawlet, Vt., 11 November 1832, and died 23 December 1869. She was the daughter of David Blakely, Jr., of Pawlet and his wife Esther Edgerton, who was a descendant of Richard[1] and Mary (Sylvester) Edgerton of Saybrook, Conn., 1653, through Richard[2] and Elizabeth (Scudder), Joseph[3] and Elizabeth (Hoskins), Capt. Simeon[4] and Abiah (Hough), and Jacob[5] and Esther (Reed) of Norwich, Conn. David Blakely, Jr., was a son of David Blakely of Woodbury, Conn., and Pawlet, Vt., and his wife Phebe (Hall) and a grandson of Tilly and Mary Blakely of Woodbury. He was twice representative in the Vermont Legislature and was for many years a deacon in the Congregational Church. His two sons became ministers, Jacob E. graduating at Middlebury College in 1844 and at the Union Theological Seminary in 1854, and Quincy graduating at the University of Vermont and at the Union Theological Seminary in 1857.

David Blakely Hoar was prepared for college at the Brookline High School and entered Harvard in 1872, receiving there the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1876.* He studied law in the office of Alfred Hemenway and James P. Farley, Jr., of Boston, was enrolled in the Harvard Law School in 1878–79, and was admitted to the Suffolk bar in April 1879. In his professional career he was at first connected with the office of Warren & Brandeis of Boston, but afterwards, from 1896 on, he was a member of the firm of Brandeis, Dunbar & Nutter, later (after the appointment of Mr. Brandeis by President Wilson as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States) Dunbar, Nutter & McClennen.

For many years he was active in the civic life of Brookline, serving as trustee of the Brookline Public Library since 1909 and also as secretary of the Brookline Education Society, now the Brookline Civic Society. He had been secretary of the Brookline Tree Planting Commission since 1910, and was one of the founders of the Massachusetts Forestry Association. He was also a director of the Marine Biological Society of Woods Hole.

His religious affiliations were with the Protestant Episcopal Church, and for many years he was a vestryman of St. Paul's Church in Brookline. In politics he was a Democrat. He was a member of the Boston Bar Association, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Union Club, the Harvard Clubs of Boston and New York, and the Brookline Thursday Club.

George Edward Pollard, of Brookline, Mass., a resident member since 1891, was born in Boston 18 December 1841, the son of Luther and Eliza Ann (Hopkins) Pollard, and died at Brookline 9 March 1923.

He traced his descent from Thomas[1] Pollard of Billerica, Mass., who came from Coventry, co. Warwick, England, married, in November 1692, his cousin, Sarah Farmer (daughter of Edward and Mary), who died 3 May 1725, and died himself at Billerica 4 April 1724, through Thomas,[2] who was born 16 February 1696/7, settled in Dunstable, Mass., and married Mary ———, Sergt. Ebenezer,[3] who was born at Dunstable 4 December 1728, married Abigail Winn, and was at Lexington in 1775 and with the Northern Army in 1776, Abel,[4] who married Abigail Hills, and Luther,[5] his father, who was born at Nottingham West (now Hudson), N. H., 5 November 1806, and married Eliza Ann Hopkins, who was born at Windham, N. H., 17 March 1812. Luther Pollard came to Boston when a young man, but in 1850, on account of ill health, he returned to his New Hampshire farm. Fifteen years later, however, he came back to Massachusetts and settled in Charlestown, where he was engaged in the real-estate business.

Through his mother, Mr. Pollard was a descendant from John[1] Hopkins, who came from Ireland in 1730 and whose wife, Elizabeth Dinsmore, daughter of John, came from Antrim, settled in Maine, was taken captive by the Indians, was released, and went to live in Derry, N. H., through John[2] Hopkins, who was born 10 March 1739 and married Isabella Reid (daughter of Matthew and Mary Ann (Holmes) Reid and granddaughter of James Reid, a graduate of the University of Edinburgh and one of the settlers of Londonderry, N. H.), and John[3] Hopkins, who was born in 1762 and died at Windham, N. H., in 1846. This John[3] Hopkins, the maternal grandfather of Mr. Pollard, married Elizabeth Hughes, daughter of John and Mehitable (Buzwell). Her father, John Hughes, was at first a British soldier in the Revolution, but he deserted and joined the American Army, served almost continuously during the War, and settled afterwards in Windham, N. H.

George Edward Pollard was employed at first in the office of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and later became bookkeeper for the Chicopee Manufacturing Company in their Boston office, a position which he held for forty years.

*For the names of some of the more distinguished of his Harvard classmates vide supra, p. 287 (memoir of Thomas Trueman Gaff).

For twenty years he made his home in Brookline. He was a member of the Boston Athletic Association, the Boston Yacht Club, the Bostonian Society, and the Sons of the American Revolution. In politics he was a Republican.

Two sisters, Mary E. Pollard, who lived with him, and Mrs. R. H. Parker of Brookline, and four nieces survived him.

John Edmunds, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., a resident member since 1913, was born at Portland, Me., 26 May 1839, the son of John and Sarah Ann (Gooding) Edmunds, and died at Wellesley Hills 17 March 1923.

His father, John Edmunds, born at Langton, co. Dorset, England, 30 November 1805, was a son of Jabez Edmunds, who was born in 1774 and married in England Ann Churchen, and a grandson of John Edmunds, who was born in 1733 and married in England Martha ———, who also was born in 1733. His mother, Sarah Ann Gooding, who was married to his father at Portland, Me., was born at Portland 11 July 1812, the daughter of Lemuel and Sarah (Mitchell) Gooding, and was descended from James[1] Gooding of Boston, who married Mehitable Gould of Boston, through James[2] of Boston, who married Margaret Davenport of Boston, James[3] of Boston, born 27 December 1696, who married Elizabeth Childs of Boston, James[4] of Boston, born 4 October 1722, who married Hannah Sweetzer of Portland, Corporal Richard[5] of Portland, born 14 February 1754, who married Dorcas Bailey, born 7 March 1754, and Lemuel,[6] her father, born 14 October 1779, who married Sarah Mitchell of North Yarmouth, Me., who was born 2 August 1782. Richard[5] Gooding served in the Revolution as a corporal in Capt. David Bradish's company, Colonel Phinney's regiment (the Thirty-first Regiment of Foot), of Falmouth, Me.

Through his grandmother, Sarah (Mitchell) Gooding, Mr. Edmunds traced his relationship to a number of the well-known families of New England. Her father, Solomon Mitchell of Kittery, Me., who was born 5 September 1739 and married Deborah Mitchell of North Yarmouth (of another family), was a son of Benjamin Mitchell of Kittery, born in April 1712, who married Mehitable Bragdon, born 7 March 1715/16, a grandson of Joseph Mitchell of Kittery, born about 1673, who married Joanna Couch, and a great-grandson of Christopher Mitchell of Kittery, who was born before 1638 and married Sarah Andrews, born about 1641. Through his great-grandmother, Deborah (Mitchell) Mitchell, born 31 December 1739, Mr. Edmunds traced his descent from Experience[1] Mitchell of Plymouth, Duxbury, and Bridgewater, whose wife was Jane Cook, daughter of Francis Cook of the Mayflower, through Jacob[2] of Dartmouth, who married, 7 November 1666, Susanna Pope, daughter of Thomas, and was killed, with his wife, by the Indians in 1675, in King Philip's War, Jacob,[3] who married, as his second wife, Rebecca Cushman (daughter of Rev. Isaac and Rebecca (Rickard) Cushman, granddaughter of Elder Thomas and Mary (Allerton) Cushman, and great-granddaughter of Isaac and Mary (Norris) Allerton), and Seth,[4] who married Deborah Andrews or Andros and was the father of the Deborah Mitchell who married Solomon Mitchell.

John Edmunds was educated in the primary and grammar schools at Portland, and entered the high school there, but he left it in 1854 to attend the seminary at Kent's Hill, Me., where he was a pupil for three terms, in 1854–55.

He came to Boston in 1856, and went to work for David Hunt, boot and shoe jobber, on Central St.; and he continued in the boot and shoe business until his retirement in 1893.

In 1862 he enlisted as a private in Company H, Forty-third Massachusetts Volunteers, and was soon made an orderly sergeant. He served in the Army for nine months.

After his marriage, in 1866, he made his residence in Chelsea, Mass., where he remained for many years. He was elected to the first Board of Trustees of the Free Public Library, an office which he held for twenty years, he was on the investment board of the Chelsea Savings Bank, he was appointed to the first Board of Civil Service Commissioners of the city, and he was a member of the School Committee. He was also one of the founders of the Robert Lash Lodge (Masonic) of Chelsea, and was its treasurer for many years. In 1888 he removed to Wellesley Hills, where he filled with great efficiency various positions of trust, one of which was that of commissioner of the Wellesley Sinking Fund. For a number of years he was a director of the Blackstone National Bank of Boston.

He married at Chelsea, 27 February 1866, Jane Goldmann Reed, who was born 16 May 1843 and died 27 March 1910, daughter of William and Jane D. (Jones) Reed. Four children, Helen Curtis Edmunds, Goldmann Edmunds of Wellesley Hills, A.B. (Harvard, 1895), LL.B. (ib., 1898), a lawyer practising in Boston, John Winthrop Edmunds of Wellesley Hills, A.B. (Harvard, 1898), a member of the firm of Edmunds Brothers of Boston, dealers in investment bonds, and William Edmunds of Wellesley Hills, A.B. (Harvard, 1900), also of the firm of Edmunds Brothers, survive him.

Charles Henry Hanson, A.B., LL.B., of Malden, Mass., elected a resident member in 1908 and made a life member in 1909, was born at Sanford, Me., 3 March 1858, the son of Benjamin Forsyth and Mary Elizabeth (Libby) Hanson, and died at Malden 17 March 1923.

He was a descendant of Thomas[1] Hanson, who was in Dover, N. H., in 1639 and settled near Salmon Falls, N. H., in 1658, through Thomas[2] of Dover, John,[3] born about 1682, whose wife, Elizabeth, was captured, with others, by the Indians and was carried off to Canada, but was released when her husband went to Canada for her, William,[4] born in 1730, Thomas,[5] born at Waterborough, Me., in 1760, Joshua,[6] who was born at Sanford in 1790, married Philena Hobbs, and died in 1866, and Hon. Benjamin Forsyth,[7] his father, who was born at Sanford 31 July 1818, married Mary Elizabeth Libby, and died 15 February 1891. Benjamin Forsyth Hanson lived in Quincy and Somersworth, N. H., and returned to Sanford in 1852, where he became a well-known merchant. At Somersworth he had been a selectman, and at Sanford he was a member of the Republican County Committee and served for two terms in the Maine Senate.

On his mother's side Charles Henry Hanson was descended from John[1] Libby, who was born in England about 1602, came to New England in 1630, and was apparently in the employ of John Winter at Richmond Island, under the Trelawney Patent. Later he settled at Black Point, where his house was burned by the Indians. His son, John[2] Libby, whose wife was named Agnes, fled to Portsmouth, N. H., during the Indian troubles, and died there. Dea. Benjamin[3] Libby, son of John,[2] born 4 June 1682, married Sarah Stone, daughter of Daniel and Patience (Goodwin) Stone of Kittery, Me. Their son, Charles[4] Libby, was born at Berwick, Me., 29 December 1721, married Abigail Hilton, and died 8 September 1772. Dea. John[5] Libby, son of Charles,[4] was born at Berwick 2 January 1768, and married Mary Gowan, daughter of Patrick and Abigail (Woodsum) Gowan of Berwick; and their son, Elias[6] Libby, born 27 September 1793, married Mehitable Butler, and was the father of Mary Elizabeth[7] Libby, who was born at Sanford 8 February 1819 and married Hon. Benjamin Forsyth Hanson.

Charles Henry Hanson received his early education in the public schools of Sanford and at the Lebanon (Me.) and Limerick (Me.) Academies. He was graduated at Colby University in 1883, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He studied law at Somersworth, N. H., in 1883–84 and at Portland, Me., in 1884–85, and received the degree of Bachelor of Laws from Boston University in 1886. He was admitted to the bar in the same year, and entered upon the practice of his profession in Boston, making his home in Malden, where he resided until his death.

He married first, 20 October 1887, Mary Elizabeth Pierce, who died 5 April 1909, daughter of Charles Henry and Sarah Martha (Sprague) Pierce; and secondly Nora Moody of Islesborough, Me. By his first wife he had four children, Rufus Pierce, Christine, Elizabeth, who died in infancy, and Thurlow Hanson.

Hon. William Prentiss Parker, of Roxbury, Mass., a resident member since 1888, was born at Roxbury 11 December 1857, the son of Augustus and Mary Elizabeth (Baker) Parker, and died at sea, on the voyage from Naples to New York, 22 March 1923.

He was descended from Thomas[1] Parker, who was at Lynn, Mass., in 1635, arriving from England in that year in the Susan & Ellen, aged 30, and who removed, a few years later, to Reading, Mass., where he was deacon for thirty-eight years and died 12 August 1683. His son, Dea. Nathaniel[2] Parker, who was born 16 May 1651 and died in 1737, married Bethia Polley, probably daughter of John Polley of Roxbury, and lived in Reading. Their son, Timothy[3] Parker, born in Reading 24 February 1695/6, married Keziah ———, and moved to Hopkinton, Mass. Nathaniel[4] Parker, son of Timothy[3] and Keziah, who was born at Hopkinton about 1732 and died at Holliston, Mass., 15 January 1774, aged 42, married, 1 January 1756, Hannah Chamberlain of Roxbury. They were the parents of Maj. Nathaniel[5] Parker, who was born at Roxbury 3 November 1760 and died at Brimfield, Mass., in 1820. He married, in 1788, Rebecca Dudley, fifth in descent from Gov. Thomas Dudley of the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay, and after the Revolution he was employed by the United States Government to transport coin from Philadelphia to Boston. His son, Thomas[6] Parker, who was born at Brimfield 27 May 1791 and is supposed to have died at New Orleans, married, 27 July 1820, Sarah Seaver of Roxbury, born 8 April 1797, who was fifth in descent from Robert Seaver of Roxbury, 1634, her mother being Elizabeth Clapp, who was fourth in descent from Roger Clapp of Dorchester, 1630. Sarah (Seaver) Parker died at Roxbury in 1884, aged 86. Augustus[7] Parker, son of Thomas[6] and Sarah (Seaver) and father of the subject of this memoir, was born at Dorchester 30 August 1827, and married, 16 November 1854, Mary Elizabeth Baker, who was born at West Dedham, Mass., 29 January 1827, the daughter of Capt. Jeremiah and Abigail (Prentiss) Baker. He served in the Massachusetts Legislature in 1867, was a member of the Roxbury City Council and also of the Boston City Council for a number of years, and was vice president of the Franklin Savings Bank of Boston.

Mary Elizabeth Baker, mother of Hon. William Prentiss Parker, was descended from Edward[1] Baker of Lynn, 1630, who lived for many years at Northampton, Mass., but returned to Lynn and died there in March 1687, whose wife was named Jane, through John[2] Baker of Dedham, Mass., who married Sarah Whiting, daughter of Timothy, Sr., and Sarah, Jeremiah[3] Baker, who was born 16 August 1716 and died at Dedham 11 June 1798, Jeremiah[4] of Dedham, who married, 9 November 1786, Fanny Whiting of Natick, Mass., and Capt. Jeremiah,[5] her father, who was born in 1761 and died 12 September 1855. He was one of the guards over Burgoyne's soldiers who were prisoners in Boston, and was captain of a company of Dragoons in the War of 1812. He married Abigail Prentiss, born 19 May 1791, died 31 October 1848, daughter of Rev. Thomas Prentiss, A.B. (Harvard, 1766), A.M. (ib., 1769), S.T.D. (ib., 1808), who was born at Holliston 14 October 1747 and died at Medfield, Mass., 28 February 1814. Rev. Thomas Prentiss was ordained to the ministry at Medfield in 1770, was chaplain of the forces at Roxbury during the Revolution, and established a public library at Med-field. His wife was Mary Scollay, daughter of John Scollay, for forty years town clerk of Boston. Two sons of Rev. Thomas Prentiss were graduated at Harvard, Rev. Thomas, Jr., in 1811 (A.M., 1814), who became pastor of the church in Charlestown and died in 1817, and William in 1825 (A.M., 1828), who became a lawyer and died in 1834. The father of Rev. Thomas Prentiss, Sr., was Rev. Joshua Prentice, A.B. (Harvard, 1738), A.M. (ib., 1741), born at Cambridge, Mass., 9 April 1719, who married Mary Angier of Cambridge, Mass., was ordained pastor of the church at Holliston in 1743, and died in 1788. He was the son of Dea. Henry Prentice of Cambridge, born in 1693, died in 1778, who married Elizabeth Rand, daughter of William Rand of Charlestown; and Dea. Henry Prentice was the son of Solomon Prentice, born 23 September 1646, died 24 July 1719, and grandson of Henry Prentice, who was in Cambridge as early as 1640 and died 9 June 1654.

William Prentiss Parker was educated in the Roxbury public schools and the Boston English High School, and was for a year a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. On 17 December 1877 he entered, as a clerk, the employ of the banking house of Kidder, Peabody & Company of Boston, and for a period of forty years was the head of the merchandise department of this firm, retiring in 1917.

He was at one time treasurer of the Fellowes Athenæum of Roxbury, a director of the Old Ladies' Home of Roxbury, treasurer of the Boston City Club in 1908 and 1909, a trustee of the pauper institutions of the city of Boston from May 1901 for several years, a member of the Boston Board of Aldermen in 1908, and a member of the Sinking Fund Commission. He was a Republican in politics, and represented the Eighth Suffolk Senatorial District in the Massachusetts Senate in 1909, 1910, and 1916, serving in various years on the Committees on Banking, Metropolitan Affairs, Public Health, Mercantile Affairs, Engrossed Bills, and State House and Libraries. He was also a delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1912.

At the stated meeting of the New England Historic Genealogical Society on 1 October 1913 Mr. Parker read an interesting paper entitled "Colonial and Historic Houses," which he illustrated with lantern slides made from photographs which he had himself taken from 1888 on, showing many famous Massachusetts buildings that are no longer standing.

After his retirement from active duty with Messrs. Kidder, Peabody & Company he spent his summers at Nantucket and his winters in Washington, and also indulged in the pleasure of foreign travel. Accompanied by his sister, Miss Mary S. Parker, he left Boston 10 January 1923 for a tour in Italy and France, and his death occurred on the steamship on which they were returning to the United States.

John Paul Rylands, F.S.A., of Birkenhead, co. Chester, England, a corresponding member since 1877, was born at Warrington, co. Lancaster, England, 10 March 1846, the eldest son of Thomas Glazebrook and Jane Chapman (Ragg) Rylands, and died at Liverpool, England, 22 March 1923.

He belonged to an ancient family, whose ancestry has been traced by Foster, in his "Pedigrees of Lancashire Families," London, 1873, as far back as the second half of the sixteenth century. Nicholas Rylands of West Leigh, co. Lancaster, whose wife was buried at Leigh in 1584, was the father of Omphrey Rylands of West Houghton, co. Lancaster, who was born in 1560 and married, in 1596, Elizabeth Greene. Their son, Robert Rylands of Astley, co. Lancaster, born in 1598, married, in 1630, Margaret Grundie, and they were the parents of John Rylands of Bedford, co. Lancaster, who was born in 1631 and married Jane ———, who died in 1662. In the record of his ancestry filed in 1877 with the New England Historic Genealogical Society the subject of this memoir traced his descent from this John Rylands and his wife Jane, through their son, George Rylands of Risley, in the parish of Winwick, co. Lancaster, born in 1654, died in 1727, who married, in 1689, Margery Boardman, who died in 1717, daughter of Mr. Christopher Boardman of Croft, co. Lancaster. The elder son of George and Margery (Boardman) Rylands, John Rylands of Culcheth, co. Lancaster, born in 1690, died unmarried in 1723; but the younger son, Peter Rylands of Risley, later of Wigan, who was born in 1695 and died in 1773, married, in 1731, Mary Knowles, born in 1705, died in 1768, daughter of Thomas Knowles. Their only son, John Rylands of Warrington, gentleman, who was born in 1731 and died in 1815, married twice, but had issue only by his first wife, Martha Booth, whom he married in 1763, who was born in 1731 and died in 1806, the daughter of Nathaniel Booth of Orford House, near Warrington, gentleman. Peter Rylands of Warrington, the eldest son of John and Martha (Booth) Rylands, was born in 1767, and was drowned in the Mersey in 1787, dying unmarried. Paul Rylands of Warrington, their third and youngest son, born in 1772, died unmarried in 1802. But their second son, John Rylands of Bewsey House, Warrington, Esq., who was born in 1771 and died in 1848, married first, in 1793, Susannah Highfield, who died in 1807; and secondly, in 1808, Martha Glazebrook, born in 1782, died in 1870, daughter of Rev. James Glazebrook, vicar of Belton, co. Leicester, and incumbent of St. James's Church, Warrington, by his wife Dorothy Kirkland, daughter of Thomas Kirkland, M.D., of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, co. Leicester. The only son of John and Susannah (Highfield) Rylands grew up and married, but died without issue. By his second wife, however, Martha Glazebrook, John Rylands had three sons and two daughters, of whom the second son, Thomas Glazebrook Rylands, Esq., J.P., F.R.A.S., F.L.S., F.G.S., etc., was born at Warrington 24 May 1818 and married first, 24 May 1845, Jane Chapman Ragg (anciently spelled Wragge), born at Ashby-de-la-Zouch 4 October 1826, died at Heath House, Warrington, 23 October 1856, daughter of Mr. William and Dorothy Palmer (Chapman) Ragg of Ashby-de-la-Zouch and granddaughter of Thomas Fowler Chapman of Ashby, merchant, and his wife Jane Kirkland, who was a daughter of Thomas Kirkland, M.D., mentioned above. Thomas Glazebrook Rylands married secondly, 2 February 1860, Elizabeth Dewhurst, daughter of Richard M. W. Dewhurst of Kenyon House, co. Lancaster, Esq. He resided at Heath House, in Warrington, and later in the township of Thelwall, co. Chester, where, upon a small property that he had bought, he built, in 1869–1871, a residence called "Highfields." By his first wife he had two sons, John Paul Rylands, who is here commemorated, and William Harry Rylands, born 20 December 1847; and by his second wife he had a son, Thomas Glazebrook Rylands, who died in infancy, and two daughters, Rachel Dorothea Rylands and Martha Glazebrook Rylands.

John Paul Rylands was educated at the grammar school at Winwick, in Lancashire, under Rev. Samuel Burnell, M.A., of Queen's College, Cambridge, and afterwards he attended a private school formerly kept at Thelwall by John Atkinson, F.G.S. This latter school he left in 1863. The Winwick Grammar School was founded about 1553, and one of its early masters was Richard Mather, who emigrated to New England in 1635 and was the father of Rev. Increase Mather and grandfather of Rev. Cotton Mather.

From 1864 to April 1876 Mr. Rylands took part in the management of the firm of Rylands Brothers, Limited, of Warrington, wire manufacturers, who made part of the first Atlantic cable and other cables. In 1877 he described himself as "of no occupation;" but later he became a barrister, was a member of the Northern Circuit, and for a number of years was engaged in Chancery practice in Liverpool, in conveyancing, and in chamber practice. He retired from this professional work some time ago.

In the fields of local history, genealogy, and heraldry he was a well-known and recognized authority. He was a member of many organizations devoted to these subjects, among them the Royal Historical and Archæological Association of Ireland, to which he was admitted in 1869, the Historic Society of Lancashire and Cheshire, to which he was elected in 1870, of which he was vice president, and to the "Proceedings" of which he contributed many papers, the Chester Architectural, Archæological, and Historical Society (1872), and the British Archæological Association (1873). He was elected a fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of London and a fellow of the Royal Historical Society in 1873, and a member of the Royal Archæological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland in 1875. He held membership also in the British Record Society, the Harleian Society, and the Chetham Society, and edited for these societies several volumes on genealogy and heraldry. He served in 1910 as president of the Liverpool Athenæum. He had a large collection of manuscripts relating chiefly to the heraldry and genealogy of Lancashire and Cheshire, and among his published works may be mentioned "Notes on Book Plates," "Arms in Warrington Church," "Disclaimers at the Heralds' Visitation," and genealogies of the Borron family, the Culcheths of Culcheth, and the Risleys of Risley. A paper entitled "The Armorial Bearings of the City of Liverpool," which he read before the Historic Society in November 1890, is admitted to be the standard work on this subject.

Mr. Rylands resided at his father's home, Heath House, in Warrington, afterwards at his father's new residence, "Highfields," in Thelwall, co. Chester, and more recently in a house on Bidston Road, Birkenhead, which also was known as "Highfields." He had travelled in many of the countries of Europe.

For seven successive generations his Venn ancestors had been university graduates and clergymen of the Church of England. John Venn of Broadhembury, co. Henry Venn, third son of Rev. Richard and Mary (Ashton), was born at Barnes, co. Surrey, 2 March 1724/5, and died at Clapham, co. Surrey, 24 June 1797. He was admitted Bachelor of Arts at Jesus College, Cambridge, in 1745/6 and Master of Arts at Queen's College in 1749. He became a fellow of Queen's College in the same year, and was vicar of Huddersfield, co. York, 1759–1771, and rector of Yelling, co. Huntingdon, 1771–1797. He was a prominent leader in the evangelical revival in the Church of England and a writer on religious topics whose works were widely read. By his first wife, Eling Bishop, whom he married 10 May 1757, daughter of Rev. Thomas Bishop of the Tower Church, Ipswich, he was the father of Rev. John Venn, B.A. (Sidney-Sussex College, Cambridge, 1781), M.A. (ib., 1784), born at Clapham 9 March 1759, died there 1 July 1813, who was rector of Little Dunham, co. Norfolk, 1783–1792, and rector of Clapham, co. Surrey, 1792–1813. He was one of the founders of the Church Missionary Society in 1797, and was active in efforts for the suppression of the slave trade. He married, at Trinity Church, Hull, 22 October 1789, as his first wife, Katharine King, daughter of William King of Hull, merchant; and they were the parents of Rev. Henry Venn, B.A. (Queen's College, Cambridge, 1818), M.A. (1821), B.D. (1828), who was born at Clapham 10 February 1796 and died at Mortlake, co. Surrey, 13 January 1873. He was a fellow of Queen's College, 1819, and proctor, 1825, vicar of Drypool, co. York, 1827, vicar of St. John's, Holloway, London, 1834–1846, a prebendary of St. Paul's Cathedral in 1846, and honorary secretary of the Church Missionary Society for thirty-two years, becoming the leading spirit in the work of this organization. He married, 21 January 1829, Martha Sykes, who was born at Swanland, near Hull, co. York, 23 May 1800, the fourth daughter of Nicholas Sykes, of Hull, merchant, and his wife Mary (daughter of John Cam, M.D.); and they were the parents of Rev. John Venn, the subject of this memoir.

Dr. Venn's preparatory education was obtained at the Cholmondeley School, Highgate, London, 1846–47, and at the Islington Proprietary School, 1848–1853. He was admitted to Caius College, Cambridge, in October 1853, received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1857, became a fellow of the College the same year, and proceeded to the degree of Master of Arts in 1860. He became a senior fellow of his college in 1868, and at the time of his death he was the senior of the senior fellows. In 1883 he received the degree of Doctor of Science and was elected a fellow of the Royal Society, and he was also a fellow of the Society of Antiquaries.

Entering the ministry of the Anglican Church, he was ordained as a deacon in 1858 and as a priest in 1859. He was curate of Cheshunt, co. Hertford, in 1858, and of Mortlake, co. Surrey, from 1860 to 1862, returning in the last-named year to Caius College as lecturer on Logic and Moral Philosophy. He was appointed Hulsean Lecturer at Cambridge for the year 1869–70, and became president (vice master) of Caius College in 1902. He was one of the most conspicuous figures and most highly esteemed men in the University, in whose history and traditions he was profoundly interested and to whose library he presented in 1888 his collection of books on logic, which at that time was certainly the finest of its kind in England.

His published works include "Logic of Chance," which appeared first in 1866 and subsequently in 1876 and 1888, "Characteristics of Belief," the Hulsean Lectures of 1869, "Symbolic Logic," 1881, with a second edition in 1894, "Empirical Logic," 1889 and 1908, "Biographical History of Caius College," 3 vols., 1897, "Caius College" (a history of the college), 1901, "Venn Family Annals," 1904, "Annals of Gonville and Caius College" (edited for the Cambridge Antiquarian Society), 1904, "Matriculations and Degrees, 1544–1659" (at the University of Cambridge), 1913, "Early Collegiate Life," 1913, and "Alumni Cantabrigienses," a monumental work, to be completed in several volumes, in which his son collaborated with him and of which two volumes appeared in 1922. His work as an historian of Cambridge University is of especial importance to students of New England history and genealogy, as most of the university graduates who came to New England in the early days of its settlement had taken their degrees at Cambridge.

Dr. Venn married, 21 June 1867, Susanna Carnegie Edmonstone, daughter of Rev. Charles Welland Edmonstone and his wife, Susanna Mary Douglas, who was a daughter of Rev. Philip Douglas. Their only child is John Archibald Venn, M.A. (Trinity College, Cambridge), who was appointed Gilbey Lecturer on Agriculture in Cambridge University in 1921.

Watson Bradley Dickerman attended Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., from 1861 to 1864, and later spent some time in the office of his brother, who was a manufacturer of woolens at Springfield, Ill. He then spent two years in the banking house of J. Bunn, as clerk, bookkeeper, and teller, and went to New York City late in the year 1866.

He was elected a member of the New York Stock Exchange in 1868, and retained his membership until 1915. In 1870, with the late W. G. Dominick, he formed the well-known brokerage firm of Dominick & Dickerman, from which he withdrew in 1899, becoming in the following year a partner in the firm of Moore & Schley. He retired from active business in 1909.

He was elected to the Board of Governors of the New York Stock Exchange in 1875 and served several full terms of four years each, in 1890 and 1891 he was president of the Exchange, and afterwards he was again a governor. In 1899 he was appointed receiver of the Norfolk & Southern Railroad Company, and, upon the reorganization of this road in 1891 as the Norfolk & Southern Railroad, he was elected its president. He also had many banking and railroad interests in the West.

Mr. Dickerman was well known as a breeder of blooded horses, and had an extensive stable at Mamaroneck, N. Y., where his country residence was situated. He was deeply interested in the work of the Zoölogical Society of New York City, and gave to it generous financial support, serving also on the Board of Managers of the Society for fifteen years and being a member of the Executive Committee.

He was a member of the Century, Union, Riding, Brook, Metropolitan, and Country Clubs, and, since 1921, a life member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society. In memory of his ancestors, Abraham[2] Dickerman, who played an important part in the settlement of New Haven, and William[1] Jones, Deputy Governor of the New Haven Colony in 1664 and Deputy Governor of Connecticut from 1691 to 1697, he provided for a tablet, which is to be placed in the stair hall of the building of the New England Historic Genealogical Society at 9 Ashburton Place, Boston.

Mr. Dickerman married first, at Brooklyn, N. Y., 18 February 1869, Martha Elizabeth Swift, who was born at Brooklyn 16 September 1847 and died 17 December 1908, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Phelps) Swift; and secondly, 11 April 1917, Florence Elaine Calkin, daughter of Brant and Clara (Haines) Calkin, who, with their son, Watson Bradley Dickerman, Jr., survives him. He received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Columbia in 1850, from Union College in 1869, and from Harvard in 1871. He married in New York City, 15 December 1836, Julia Kean, born at Ursino, near Elizabeth, N. J., 19 December 1816, died in New York City 30 June 1887, daughter of Peter and Sarah Sabina (Morris) Kean of Ursino. Their eldest son, Nicholas[8] Fish (1846–1902), diplomatist and banker, A.B. (Columbia, 1867), LL.B. (Harvard, 1869), A.M. (Columbia, 1871), was attached to the United States Legation at Berlin as assistant secretary and secretary, 1871–1877, and was United States chargé d'affaires in Switzerland, 1877–1881, and United States minister to Belgium, 1882–1886; his son, Hamilton[9] Fish, a soldier in the War with Spain, was killed in action in Cuba, 26 June 1898, while serving as second sergeant of Troop K, First Volunteer Cavalry (the so-called "Rough Riders"). Their second son, Hon. Hamilton[8] Fish, A.B. (Columbia, 1869), A.M. (ib., 1872), LL.B. (ib., 1873), born at Albany, N. Y., 17 April 1849, was private secretary to his father while the latter was Secretary of State, a member of the New York Assembly for eleven years, serving as speaker of the House in 1895 and 1896, and Assistant Treasurer of the United States at New York City, 1903–1908, was elected as a Republican Representative from New York in the Sixty-first Congress (1909–1911), and is a member also of the House of Representatives of the present (the Sixty-eighth) Congress (1923–1925).

Stuyvesant[8] Fish, third son of Hon. Hamilton[7] Fish, was a pupil at Mr. Haccius's school at Lancy, near Geneva, Switzerland, in 1858, and his education was continued under tutors in 1859 while his parents were travelling in Europe. In 1859 he attended Mr. Elie Charlier's school in New York City, where he remained until 1861, when he entered Mr. Marlborough Churchill's school at Sing Sing, N. Y. In 1867 he was admitted to Columbia University, and received there the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1871 and that of Master of Arts in 1874.

Embarking on a business career, Mr. Fish in a few years gained an important place as a railway official and financier. In the fall of 1871 he entered the railway service as a clerk in the New York offices of the Illinois Central Railroad Company; in the following year he was appointed secretary to the president of the road; but in November 1872 he became a clerk in the banking firm of Morton, Bliss & Company of New York and later in the affiliated house of Morton, Rose & Company of London, and then from January 1875 to March 1877 he was managing clerk for Morton, Bliss & Company, with power of attorney. In 1876 he became a member of the New York Stock Exchange, retaining this membership until 1879, and he was also elected a director of the Illinois Central Railroad Company and appointed treasurer and agent for the purchasing committee of the New Orleans, Jackson & Great Northern Railroad Company. In the fall of 1877 he was made secretary of the Chicago, St. Louis & New Orleans Railroad Company, and in March 1882 was elected its vice president. In 1883 he was elected second vice president of the Illinois Central system, in 1884 was its first vice president, and in 1887 was advanced to the presidency of the company, which he held until November 1906. He was president of the Association of Railway Executives from April 1904 to April 1906, chairman of the Seventh Session of the International Railway Congress at Washington, D.C., in May 1905, and a member of the Monetary Commission established by the Indianapolis Monetary Conference of 1897. He was trustee of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, 1883–1906, and the New York Life Insurance & Trust Company, and a director of the National Park Bank and a number of other financial corporations.

In the year preceding his death Mr. Fish was a determined opponent of the method of enforcing the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States prescribed by the so-called "Volstead Act," and attacked vigorously the activities of the Anti-Saloon League.

He was a member of many clubs and societies, among which may be mentioned the Union, St. Anthony, Metropolitan, Racquet and Tennis, Church, Sleepy Hollow, and Down Town Clubs, the Automobile Club of America, the St. Nicholas Society, the New York Historical Society, of which he was recording secretary, and the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, of which he was a life member and vice president. In common with many other Pilgrim Tercentenary members of the New England Historic Genealogical Society he accepted an invitation to place on the walls of the stair hall of the Society's building a tablet in memory of an American forbear, and this tablet, commemorating Jonathan Fish, his immigrant ancestor, was erected in 1921.

Mr. Fish married in New York City, 1 June 1876, Marian Graves Anthon, who was born on Staten Island, N. Y., 8 June 1853 and died 25 May 1915, daughter of William Henry Anthon, an eminent lawyer of New York City, and his wife Sarah Atwood (Meert) Anthon. Mrs. Fish was for many years a leader in New York and Newport society. Their first child, Livingston Fish, died in infancy; but their other children, who survive them, are Marian Anthon Fish, wife of Albert Zabriskie Gray, A.B. (Harvard, 1903), Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., A.B. (Yale, 1905), who married Isabell Mildred Dick and has succeeded his father in his Pilgrim Tercentenary membership in the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and Sidney Webster Fish, A.B. (Harvard, 1910, as of 1908), LL.B. (Columbia, 1911), who married Olga Wiborg. Mr. Fish's city residence was at No. 25 East 78th Street, New York, and his country seat was at "Glenclyffe," near Garrison on the Hudson.

Funeral services for Mr. Fish were held at Trinity Church in New York City on 12 April 1923, and he was buried in St. Philip's Churchyard, Garrison, where his wife, his parents, and many of his kindred are interred.

Arthur Bucklin Claflin, Ph.B., of Boston, a life member since 1885, was born at Hopkinton, Mass., 10 August 1852, the son of Hon. William and Mary Bucklin (Davenport) Claflin, and died suddenly at the Hotel Touraine, in Boston, 11 April 1923.

The founder of the Claflin family in New England was Robert[1] Mack-Claflin, of Scotch ancestry, who was accepted as a townsman at Wenham, Mass., in 1661, and served in 1688 in the war against the French and Indians. He married, 14 October 1664, Joanna Warner; and their sixth son was Daniel[2] Mackclaflin or Claflin, born 25 January 1674, who married (intention recorded at Wenham, 1 March 1700/1) Sarah Edwards. His eighth child, Ebenezer[3] Claflin, born at Wenham 2 July 1716, lived in Hopkinton, Mass., where he married, 22 May 1739, Hannah Smith, and died in December 1793. Ebenezer[4] Claflin, son of Ebenezer[3] and Hannah (Smith), born at Hopkinton 14 September 1742, responded to the Lexington alarm, 19 April 1775, as a sergeant in Capt. John Holmes's company, Col. Samuel Bullard's regiment, and in September 1776 enlisted in Capt. Aaron Gardner's company, Col. Eleazer Brooks's regiment, and served in New York until 19 November 1776, taking part in the Battle of White Plains on 28 October of that year. He was a representative in the General Court, 1790 and 1791. He married at Hopkinton, 18 June 1773, Sarah Tilton, and died 8 January 1797.

Lee[5] Claflin, son of Ebenezer and Sarah (Tilton), born at Hopkinton 19 November 1791, was bereft of his father in childhood, and became a tanner in Milford, Mass., in 1813 and a manufacturer of boots and shoes a few years later. He made his way to a prominent and influential position in the business world and in public life, was a representative from Milford in the General Court in 1834, removed from Milford to Hopkinton in 1839, and was later a member of the Massachusetts Senate. He was the first president of the Milford and Hopkinton banks, and of the Hide and Leather Bank of Boston. He was one of the organizers of Hopkinton Academy, one of the founders and original trustees of Boston University, a trustee and benefactor of Wesleyan University, of Wesleyan Academy, and of the Boston Theological Seminary, and a benefactor of an abandoned seminary at Orangeburg, S. C., to which the name of Claflin University was given. He was an active adherent of the Free-Soil Party and an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He married, 19 December 1815, Sarah Watkins Adams, born at Hopkinton 25 April 1792, daughter of Elisha and Sarah (Watkins) Adams of Hopkinton and a descendant of Henry[1] Adams of Braintree, Mass., through Ensign Edward,[2] who married Lydia Rockwood, Elisha,[3] who was born at Medfield, Mass., 25 August 1666, settled in Bristol, then in Massachusetts but now in Rhode Island, and married Mehitable Cary, William,[4] who was born at Bristol in June 1693 and married Joanna (———) Adams, William,[5] who was born at Mendon, Mass., 19 September 1719, lived in Braintree and Medway, Mass., and married Ruth ———, and Elisha[6] of Hopkinton, her father, who was born at Braintree 25 February 1751, served as a private from Hopkinton in Capt. John Holmes's company on the Lexington alarm, and married Sarah Watkins, a daughter of Maj. Andrew and Thankful (Morse) Watkins. Lee Claflin died in Boston 23 February 1871.

His son, Hon. William[6] Claflin, born at Milford 6 March 1818, was educated in the public schools and at Milford Academy, and entered Brown University in 1833. But the death of his mother, in 1834, and the state of his own health compelled him to give up his college course; and, after three years in his father's factory, he went to St. Louis, Mo., in 1838, and there engaged in the shoe and leather business. In 1844 he came back to Massachusetts, joined his father in Hopkinton in the manufacture of boots and shoes, and continued in the wholesale boot and shoe business, in Hopkinton and Boston, for over thirty years, retiring from active participation in the business in 1878. In Boston the firm was known as Lee Claflin & Company, later as Wm. Claflin & Company and still later as Wm. Claflin, Coburn & Company. He succeeded his father as president of the Hide and Leather National Bank of Boston, and was interested in other financial organizations. Entering public life as a Free-Soiler, he was for four years (1849–1852) a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives from Hopkinton, and in 1849 and 1850 he was also a selectman of Hopkinton. As a Republican he was elected to the Massachusetts Senate for the years 1860 and 1861, serving as president of that body in the latter year. In 1860 he was a delegate to the Republican National Convention at Chicago, which nominated Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency, and he was also a delegate to the Republican National Conventions of 1864, 1868, and 1872. He was a member of the Republican National Committee, 1864–1875, and chairman of this committee, 1868–1872. He was elected Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts for the years 1866, 1867, and 1868, and Governor for the years 1869, 1870, and 1871. He served as Representative from the Eighth Massachusetts District in the Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth Congresses (1877–1881), being then a resident of Newton, Mass. His interest and helpfulness in the cause of higher education was far-reaching; as Governor of the Commonwealth he signed the charter of Boston University in 1869; and he was vice president of the Board of Trustees of Boston University, 1869–1872, president of the Board, 1872–1904, a charter member of the Board of Trustees of Wellesley College, of which he had signed the charter in 1870, and a trustee of Mount Holyoke College. He was an active worker in Methodist circles, and was president of the General Theological Library from 1883 to 1891. His public services had been recognized by Wesleyan University, which conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Laws in 1868, and by Harvard University, which bestowed on him, as Governor of Massachusetts, the same degree in 1869. On 4 May 1870 Governor Claflin was elected a resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and became a life member in 1873. He was a Director of the Society from 1883 to 1889, and one of the Councillors (as the Directors have been styled since 1889) from 1889 to 1892. On 22 June 1892, after the resignation of President Abner Cheney Goodell, he was elected President of the Society, and served in this capacity, by virtue of successive reëlections, until 1899, when he declined to be a candidate for another year. In 1855 he had taken up his abode in Newton, in the section known as Newtonville, where he built on his estate a mansion called "The Old Elms," and there he died on 5 January 1905. By his first wife, Nancy Williams Harding, daughter of Lewis and Nancy (Warren) Harding of Milford, Mass., whom he married in Louisville, Ky., in October 1839, Governor Claflin had a daughter, Emma Harding, who married Charles W. Ellis of Newton. Mrs. Claflin died 18 January 1842; and her husband married secondly, at Hopkinton, 12 February 1845, Mary Bucklin Davenport, who died at Whitinsville, Mass., 13 June 1896, daughter of Samuel Daniels and Mary Claflin (Bucklin) Davenport of Hopkinton. By his second wife Governor Claflin had four sons and one daughter, of whom only two sons, Arthur Bucklin and Adams Davenport, survived him.

Arthur Bucklin[7] Claflin was prepared for college at Round Hill, Northampton, and at Stockbridge, Mass., entered the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in 1871, and received there the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy in 1874.

After leaving the Scientific School he engaged in the tanning business which had been founded by his grandfather, Lee Claflin, and continued in active business life until his retirement, twenty years later. In the latter part of his life he spent much time abroad, and was preparing to make another journey to Europe, from which he had but recently returned, when the outbreak of the World War compelled him to change his plans. For many years he made his home at the Hotel Touraine, in Boston, spending his summers at the Woodstock Inn, Woodstock, Vt.

He married at Cleveland, Ohio, 6 June 1883, Margaret Helen Root, who survives him, together with his brother, Adams Davenport Claflin, A.B. (Harvard, 1886), of Newton.

Rev. George Clarke Houghton, A.M., D.D., of New York City, a resident member since 1917, was born in New York City 17 December 1852, the son of Frederick E. and Anna E. (Dawson) Houghton, and died there, suddenly, 17 April 1923.

His great-grandfather, Edward Houghton, who was probably a descendant of the Houghtons of Lancaster, Mass., migrated from Hinsdale, N. H., to Northfield, Mass., in 1793, moved to Deerfield, Mass., in 1812, and died there 29 September 1820. His wife was Sally Smith of Petersham, Mass. Their son, Clark Houghton, who was born 27 August 1784 and died at Deerfield 11 July 1829, married, 10 May 1814, Fanny Smith; and they were the parents of Frederick E. Houghton, who was born at Deerfield 14 February 1815 and became a banker and broker in New York City.

Fanny Smith, the mother of Frederick E. Houghton, was descended from Lieut. Samuel[1] Smith, born about 1602, who, with his wife Elizabeth and four children, came to New England in the Elizabeth from Ipswich, co. Suffolk, England, 30 April 1634. He settled at Wethersfield, Conn., where he was known as "Antient Serjeant" and was a deputy for several years in the General Assembly of Connecticut. In 1659 he removed to Hadley, Mass.; and there he was often chosen a deputy in the General Court of the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay, and was lieutenant of the Hadley troop from 1661 to 1678, being the acknowledged leader of the forces in that region during King Philip's War. He died about 1680, and his widow, Elizabeth, died 16 March 1684/5. Their son, Philip[2] Smith, who was born about 1633 and died 10 January 1684/5, was lieutenant, deacon, deputy, and justice of the County Court. He married Rebecca Foote, daughter of Nathaniel. Ichabod[3] Smith of Hadley, son of Philip and Rebecca (Foote), who was born 11 April 1675 or 1676 and died 6 September 1746, married Elizabeth Cook, who died 10 October 1751, aged 73 years, daughter of Aaron Cook. Moses[4] Smith, son of Ichabod and Elizabeth (Cook), was born 30 April 1706, was of Amherst, Mass., in 1735, and died 12 May 1781. His wife was Hannah Childs, who died 26 January 1778, aged 67 years, daughter of Samuel Childs. Their son, Amasa[5] Smith, who was born 30 April 1746, was a sergeant in the Revolutionary Army and a lieutenant of the Artillery Company in 1788. He married Naomi Dickinson of Shelburne, Mass., widow, and died 7 October 1812. Fanny Smith, mother of Frederick E. Houghton, was their daughter.

George Clarke Houghton became a student at St. Stephen's College, Annandale on the Hudson, N. Y., where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1867 and that of Master of Arts in 1870. He had intended to study law; but his uncle, Rev. George Hendric Houghton, dissuaded him from this purpose, and he entered the General Theological School in New York City, where he was graduated in 1870. Many years later, in 1893, St. Stephen's College conferred on him the degree of Bachelor of Divinity, and in 1895 he received from the same institution the degree of Doctor of Divinity. In 1870 he was ordained a deacon in the Protestant Episcopal Church by Right Rev. Horatio Potter, Bishop of New York, and in 1871 he was advanced to the priesthood.

Dr. Houghton was a curate in Trinity Parish, New York City, 1870–1878, rector of Trinity Church, Hoboken, N. J., 1879–1897, and at the same time rector of St. John's Church, West Hoboken, and of Grace Church, Weehawken, N. J., 1884–1894. In 1897 he was called to be rector of the Church of the Transfiguration, in New York City, succeeding his uncle, Rev. George Hendric Houghton, the founder and first rector of this church, and there he served until his death, a period of more than a quarter of a century, uniting with his duties in New York City those of rector of the Church of the Transfiguration at Pine Hill, Ulster Co., N. Y.

It was during the incumbency of its first rector, Rev. George Hendric Houghton, that the Church of the Transfiguration in New York City became famous as "the Little Church around the Corner." Joseph Jefferson, the actor, as the story goes, endeavored to arrange for funeral services for a brother actor at a fashionable church on Fifth Avenue, but was told that services could not he held there for a member of his profession. He was directed, however, to "a little church around the corner," where an actor could receive burial rites, and his exclamation, "God bless the little church around the corner," gave to the Church of the Transfiguration its popular name and led many persons connected with the stage to resort to it for wedding ceremonies and funerals. To this church came also eloping couples and those preferring quiet weddings. Dr. George Clarke Houghton showed the same tolerant and hospitable spirit that had distinguished his uncle, but he sought to remove the impression that his church was a second Gretna Green, often persuaded young people to think twice before rushing into marriage, insisted on their having the consent of their parents, and refused to perform the marriage ceremony for those who had been divorced. His parting advice to the many couples whom he joined in marriage was: "Be kind."

During his residence in New Jersey Dr. Houghton took an active interest in educational work, and was elected by the State Board of Education to be superintendent of Public Instruction in New Jersey. This responsible position he held from 1885 to 1897. In 1887 he organized the New Jersey Industrial Education Association, and served as its president until 1897; and he also founded in 1887 the Manual Training College of New Jersey, and was its president until 1895 and one of its directors for two years longer.

His willingness to be of service to his adopted State appeared also in his acceptance of the position of chaplain of the New Jersey National Guard, which he held from 1879 to 1892.

Dr. Houghton was a member of the New York Historical Society, the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, the American Geographical Society, the American Museum of Natural History, the Municipal Arts Society, the American Forestry Association, the Church Choral Society, the Society of Colonial Wars, and the Society of Sons of the Revolution. His clubs included the Calumet of New York City, the National Arts, the Players, the Graduates, the Catholic, the Salmagundi, and the Press Club.

He was the author of "Sermons for Special Holy Days," "History of the Church of the Transfiguration and Life of Its Founder and First Rector," and "Manual of Devotions."

For some two years before his death he had been in poor health, a trip to the South failed to bring any marked improvement in his physical condition, and, owing to his inability to carry on his church work, Rev. Dwight Cameron was made acting rector of the Church in January 1922.

Dr. Houghton married, in 1870, Mary Creemer Pirrson, who died before her husband. His daughter, Mrs. Charles Strombohm, was living with him when he died.

Hon. Macgrane Coxe, M.A., LL.B., of New York City, a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1920, was born at Huntsville, Ala., 29 May 1859, the son of Col. Robert Edward and Eliza Reed (Davies) Coxe, and died in New York City 20 April 1923.

His grandfather, Richard Coxe, who came from co. Wexford, Ireland, in 1803, and settled in New Orleans, La., was the founder of the family in the South. His father was engaged in business at Huntsville, Ala., served in the Seminole War, and was sent as commissioner to the Exposition in London in 1851 and to that in Paris in 1855.

His mother was a descendant of John[1] Davies, who was born in the parish of Kington, co. Hereford, England, in 1680, came to America in 1735, and settled in the town of Litchfield, Conn., where he succeeded in acquiring nearly a thousand acres of land. He was a zealous member of the Church of England, and as a man of wealth gave largely towards the founding of the Episcopal Church in Litchfield. His wife was Catherine Spenser. Their son, John[2] Davies, born in England in 1711, came to America later than his father, returned to England, came again in 1745 with three of his children, and left them with his father while he went back to England for his wife and remaining children. With these he arrived in 1747 and settled in Litchfield. He, too, was an ardent churchman. He married first, in 1734, Elizabeth Brown, who died in 1740; and it was his second wife who came with him to America. Rev. Thomas[3] Davies, son of John and Elizabeth (Brown), was born in England 2 January 1737, entered Yale College, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1758 and that of Master of Arts in 1763, and studied theology in England. He was ordained deacon by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the following day was admitted to the priesthood. Returning to New England, he became rector of the Episcopal Church in New Milford, Conn., and also served St. Michael's Church in Litchfield. He married, 1 April 1762, Mary Hervey, daughter of Joel Hervey of Sharon, Conn., and died at New Milford 12 May 1766, having scarcely crossed the threshold of his ministry. William[4] Davies, son of Rev. Thomas and Mary (Hervey), was born at New Milford 21 March 1763, and died at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 7 February 1857. He was a merchant at Amenia and Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and married, 23 June 1787, Polly Leach of Amenia, who died 23 July 1814. Their son, Thomas Leach[5] Davies, who was born at Amenia 8 July 1792 and died 19 March 1880, was affiliated with the Class of 1813 at Columbia, and became president of the Poughkeepsie National Bank and major general in the State Militia. He was an active Episcopalian, and married, 4 September 1826, Jane Reed, daughter of Rev. John Reed. They were the parents of Eliza Reed Davies, who married Robert Edward Coxe.

During the Civil War the parents of Macgrane Coxe were travelling in Europe, and their young son accompanied them. Later he attended school at Poughkeepsie, and entered Racine College in Wisconsin, going thence to Yale. His college course was interrupted in 1877–78 while he assisted his father in business matters, which had become involved during the Civil War; but he returned later to Yale as a special student for a year, and in 1887 was granted the degree of Bachelor of Arts, as of the Class of 1879.

After giving up his college course and helping his father in his business interests, he studied law at Columbia University, received there the degree of Bachelor of Laws in 1881, and soon afterwards was admitted to the New York bar. He entered the offices of Mann & Parsons in New York City, spent the next year with the firm of Field, Dorsheimer, Bacon & Deyo, and then, in 1883, formed a partnership with C. G. Bennett, for the practice of law, making a specialty of railroad law.

A Democrat in politics, he was appointed in 1885, in the Cleveland administration, assistant United States district attorney for the Southern District of New York, and held this office for four years, until 1889. From 1 December 1889 to 1896 he was United States commissioner for the same district, and then served as minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Guatemala and Honduras, 1896–97.

Resuming the practice of law in New York City, he was a referee in bankruptcy from 1899 until his death; and, in addition to his professional work, he was interested in the management of property at Southfields, Orange Co., N. Y., and for several years was president of the Sterling Iron & Railroad Company. On 3 December 1917 he was elected president of the Orange County Society. From 1906 to 1917 he lectured on bankruptcy in the Yale Law School, and in 1908 Yale University conferred on him the honorary degree of Master of Arts. In the same year he was appointed by President Roosevelt a member of the Board of Visitors of the United States Naval Academy.

He helped to organize the New York Southern Society, of which he was a life member and the first secretary. He was also a member of the New York Historical Society, the American Bar Association, the New York State Bar Association, and the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. For a number of years after he came to New York City he was bass soloist and conductor of a choir of fifty voices at All Souls' Church (Protestant Episcopal), and he was a member of the Mendelssohn Glee Club of New York. Among other clubs of which he was a member were the University, Church, Manhattan, Down Town, Yale, Tuxedo, and Democratic Clubs of New York and the Metropolitan Club of Washington, D. C. His country home was at Southfields, N. Y.

His published works include "The Sterling Furnace and the West Point Chain," 1906, "Analogous Provisions of the Bankruptcy Acts of 1898 and 1867," 1907 (revised edition, 1911), and "Chancellor Kent at Yale," 1908.

Mr. Coxe married at Southfields, N. Y., 28 August 1888, Lena Townsend Crawford of New York, daughter of David and Caroline Parrish (Townsend) Crawford, who survived him, but died in New York City 4 January 1924. One son and three daughters survive their parents, namely, Capt. Peter Townsend Coxe, U. S. A., Caroline Townsend, wife of Lester Hawthorne Monks of Boston, merchant, Eleanor Crawford Coxe, and Elizabeth Davies, wife of Rev. Truman Post Riddle, U. S. N., B.A. (Yale, 1910), M.A. (ib., 1915).

Susanna Willard, of Cambridge, Mass., a resident member since 1904, was born in Boston 24 March 1845, the daughter of Joseph and Susanna Hickling (Lewis) Willard, and died at Cambridge 23 April 1923.

She belonged to a family whose connection with Harvard College was noteworthy, her Willard ancestors for five consecutive generations having been graduates — two of them serving also as presidents — of that time-honored seat of learning, and her three brothers (Sidney Willard, A.B., 1852, Joseph Willard, A.B., 1855, LL.B., 1858, and Robert Willard, A.B., 1860, M.D., 1864), of the sixth generation, being also enrolled among Harvard's loyal sons.

The immigrant ancestor of this family was Maj. Simon[1] Willard, who was baptized at Horsmonden, co. Kent, 7 April 1605, and died at Charlestown, Mass., 24 April 1676, the son of Richard Willard, who died in 1616. Simon Willard came to the Massachusetts Bay Colony in the spring of 1634, and after a brief stay in Cambridge settled in 1635 in Concord, being one of the founders of that historic town and its first representative in the General Court of the Colony. He continued to serve as representative until 1649, and was assistant from 1657 until his death. He was also prominent in military affairs, being a lieutenant as early as 1637 and later captain and major, and performing valiant service on the breaking out of King Philip's War. In 1659 he moved to Lancaster and about twelve years later to Groton, where his house was burned by the Indians in March 1675/6. He was the father of some seventeen children, among whom was Rev. Samuel[2] Willard, A.B. (Harvard, 1659), A.M. (ib., 1662), who was born at Concord 31 January 1639/40 and died in Boston 12 September 1707. Samuel[2] Willard was ordained to the ministry at Groton, and, after preaching there for several years, became pastor of the Old South Church in Boston in 1678. He was a fellow of Harvard College from 1692 to 1699 and acting president of the College, with the title of vice president, from 12 July 1700 to 14 August 1707. Along with his duties at Harvard he retained his pastorate of the Old South Church, and spent only a part of each week in Cambridge, which in those days was reached from Boston by a roundabout land journey of eight miles, by way of Boston Neck and Brookline, a striking contrast with the present system of rapid transit through the Cambridge tunnel. He was distinguished for his great learning and for holding firmly, in spite of what amounted almost to persecution, to his conviction that the witchcraft mania was a base delusion. His justification came in time, however, when it fell to him to receive and read Judge Samuel Sewall's public retraction of his belief in witchcraft and his confession of his grievous error in regard to the popular craze. He it was, also, who baptized Benjamin Franklin. By his two wives Rev. Samuel Willard had twenty children, the first wife, Abigail Sherman, who was born 3 February 1647/8, daughter of

Rev. John and Mary (Launce) Sherman of Watertown, Mass., and who was married 8 August 1664, being the mother of Maj. John[3] Willard, merchant, A.B. (Harvard, 1690), A.M. (ib., 1693), who was born at Groton 8 September 1673, settled at Port Royal (now Kingston), Jamaica, as early as 1700, and married Frances Sherburne in 1703 or 1704. Rev. Samuel[4] Willard, A.B. (Harvard, 1723), A.M. (ib., 1726), son of Maj. John and Frances (Sherburne), was born at Kingston, Jamaica, about September 1705, was sent to New England when seven years old to be educated, and went back to Jamaica after completing his academic studies at Harvard; but he returned soon to New England, taught school there, studied theology, and on 30 September 1730 was ordained to the Congregational ministry and settled over the church at Biddeford, Me. He married, 29 October 1730, his second cousin, Abigail Wright, born at Sudbury, Mass., 19 February 1707/8, daughter of Capt. Samuel and Mary (Stevens) Wright of Sudbury, and he died at Kittery, Me., 25 October 1741. His son, Rev. Joseph[5] Willard, A.B. (Harvard, 1765), A.M. (ib., 1768), S.T.D. (ib., 1785), LL.D. (Yale, 1791), born at Biddeford 29 December 1738, was a tutor at Harvard, 1766–1772, a fellow of Harvard, 1768–1772, and for nine years pastor of the church at Beverly, Mass. A noted divine and educator, and possessing a marked mathematical talent, he was one of the incorporators of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, its first corresponding secretary, and its vice president, a member of other learned societies both in this country and abroad, and president of Harvard College from 19 December 1781 until his death at New Bedford, Mass., 25 September 1804. By his wife, Mary Sheafe, who was born at Portsmouth, N. H., 22 November 1753, was married 7 March 1774, and died 6 March 1826, daughter of Jacob and Hannah (Seavey) Sheafe of Portsmouth, he was the father of thirteen children, of whom the youngest was Joseph[6] Willard, A.B. (Harvard, 1816), A.M. (ib., 1819), LL.B. (ib., 1820), who was born at Cambridge 14 March 1798, in Wadsworth House, the old residence of the presidents of Harvard, which is still standing on Massachusetts Avenue, near Harvard Square. He was a lawyer of note, first in Waltham and Lancaster and later in Boston, where for several years he was clerk of the courts. To his professional interests he added a taste for history and genealogy, wrote a history of Lancaster, and in 1858, after many years of research, published the "Willard Memoir," which contained a record of the Willard family during the early years of its residence in this country. He was the author, also, of an unpublished biography of Gen. Henry Knox. He died 12 May 1865; and his wife, Susanna Hickling Lewis, who was born at Charlestown 24 August 1806 and was married to Mr. Willard 24 February 1830, died in Boston 31 July 1869. They were the parents of Susanna[7] Willard, who was the youngest but one of seven brothers and sisters, of whom two died in early childhood.

Her mother, Susanna Hickling Lewis, was descended from George[1] Lewis, clothier, who married in England Sarah Jenkins, came to New England from co. Kent before 1633, lived at Plymouth and Scituate, settled in Barnstable before 1641, and died about 1664, through James[2] Lewis, who married, 31 October 1655, Sarah Lane, daughter of George of Hingham, Mass., and died at Barnstable 4 October 1713, John[3] Lewis of Hingham, who was born 29 October 1656, married Hannah Lincoln, daughter of Daniel, and died 30 October 1715, Rev. Isaiah[4] Lewis of Wellfleet, Mass., A.B. (Harvard, 1723), A.M. (ib., 1726), teacher and preacher, who was born 10 June 1703, married Abigail Winslow, daughter of Kenelm and Abigail (Waterman) Winslow, and died in 1786, Winslow[5] Lewis of Eastham, Mass., who was born at Wellfleet 3 July 1738, married Mary Knowles, daughter of Willard Knowles, and died in July 1801, and Isaiah[6] Lewis, her father, who was born 14 June 1776, married Harriet Ann Townsend Cox, and died at sea 20 April 1822. Other ancestors of Susanna Willard, on her mother's side, were Richard Warren, one of the Pilgrims who came in the Mayflower, and Lemuel Cox, famous as a builder of bridges in the years immediately following the Revolution, who was the first to bridge the Charles River between Boston and Charlestown, a feat thought by many of that day to be impossible, owing to the swift current.

Susanna[7] Willard, the subject of this memoir, was educated at home and in public and private schools. From her mother she derived a marked talent for music, which she cultivated under the best teachers of her day in Boston and also for two years at the Conservatory of Music in Leipzig, becoming an accomplished pianist and giving instruction in music to numerous pupils. For many years she was a member of the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston. From her father she inherited a taste for historical and genealogical studies, and did much research work, not only in the history of her own family but also for others who wished to join hereditary-patriotic societies. As a member of the publication committee of the Willard Family Association, she was very helpful in the preparation of the "Willard Genealogy," which was published by the Association in 1915. She was a member of the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames (and was at one time the genealogist of this organization), the Society of Mayflower Descendants, the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, and the Cambridge Historical Society. She held membership also in The Bee, a well-known Cambridge sewing circle, which was established by girls who, sixty years ago, were young, for the purpose of sewing for the soldiers in the Civil War, and which is still in existence.

She knew the stress of Civil War times, for her home was shadowed by the loss of her eldest brother, Maj. Sidney Willard, who was killed in the Battle of Fredericksburg, while her youngest brother, Robert, served as a surgeon in the Navy throughout the War.

Miss Willard resided in Boston until about twenty years before her death, when she went to live with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Robert Willard, in Cambridge. From her early years she was an active member of the Unitarian Church and a regular attendant at its services, her affiliations being first with the old West Church, on Cambridge Street, Boston, which now shelters a branch of the Boston Public Library. Later she was connected with the Arlington Street Church, during the ministry of the late Rev. Brooke Herford.

Three striking characteristics distinguished Miss Willard: first, her personal dignity, which set her apart from the general run of people and was not without a charm of its own; second, her delightful sense of humor and brilliant wit, keen but never unkind; third, her strong desire to be of help to others. She was instant in her response to any call for assistance, and her generous support carried many a friend over some hard bit of life's pathway — and her friendships were legion, many of them dating back to her school days. Her eager enthusiasm and interest in life kept her young in spite of advancing years. Typical of what is best of our New England stock, she was a rare, brave soul, one of nature's noblewomen.

Of her immediate relatives only her niece survives her, Miss Theodora Willard of Cambridge, with whom and with whose mother she had made her home in recent years. Theodora Willard, the only daughter of the late Robert Willard, M.D., and his wife, Caroline Cross (Williamson) Willard, is a talented artist, a pupil of the late A. W. Buhler of Gloucester, Mass., and her paintings of the salt marshes of the Massachusetts shore are especially admired.

Richard Henry Williams, of New York City, a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1919, was born in New York City 11 September 1854, the son of Charles and Theodora Amelia (Hopkins) Williams, and died there 28 April 1923.

His father was born at Warren, Herkimer Co., N. Y., 12 November 1797, and died at Stamford, Conn., 24 February 1884; and through him the subject of this memoir claimed descent from Lieut. Henry Williams of Groton, Conn., who was killed in action at Fort Griswold 6 September 1781, from William Williams, Esq., of Groton, who was moderator of the town meeting which took patriotic action in 1774 and a member of the Committee on Inspection, and from Maj. Edward Mott of Preston, Conn., who served with the Connecticut troops.

His mother was born at Manlius, N. Y., 26 June 1827, was married to Charles Williams in New York City, 2 June 1846, and died at Lakewood, N. J., 29 May 1887. She was descended from John[1] Hopkins, who was at Cambridge, Mass., in 1634, and at Hartford, Conn., in 1636, where he died in 1654, through Stephen[2] Hopkins, who married Dorcas Bronson, daughter of John of Farmington, Conn., and died in October 1689, Ebenezer[3] Hopkins, who married, 21 January 1691, Mary Butler, daughter of Samuel of Wethersfield, Conn., Hezekiah[4] Hopkins, who was baptized at Hartford 16 November 1701, married at Harwinton, Conn., 3 June 1742, Sarah Davis, and died at Harwinton 24 June 1780, Col. Hezekiah[5] Hopkins, who was born at Harwinton about 1752 or 1758, married there, 12 June 1783, Eunice Hubbell (born about 1763, died at Pompey Hill, N. Y., 2 April 1839), and died at Pompey Hill 18 May 1834, and Richard Hubbell[6] Hopkins, her father, who was born at Harwinton 5 September 1798, married at Manlius, N. Y., 22 July 1822, Theodora Phelps (born at Manlius 13 October 1800, died at Circleville, Ohio, 6 April 1833), and died at Cincinnati, Ohio, 24 April 1863.

On the maternal side Mr. Williams could trace his descent also from Thomas Rogers of the Mayflower, through the latter's son, Lieut. Joseph Rogers, Mary Rogers (born at Sandwich in the Plymouth Colony 22 September 1644, daughter of Lieut. Joseph), who married at Barnstable, 10 August 1664, John Phinney (born at Plymouth 24 December 1638), Dea. John Phinney (son of John and Mary), who was born at Barnstable 5 May 1665, married there, 30 May 1689, Sarah Lombard, and died there 27 November 1746, and Elizabeth Phinney (daughter of Dea. John and Sarah), who was born at Barnstable 11 April 1690, married there, 25 November 1714, Lieut. Nathan Davis (born at Barnstable 2 March 1690, died at Harwinton, Conn., 17 September 1785), and died at Harwinton 30 June 1786. Their daughter, Sarah Davis, who was born about 1722 and died at Harwinton 22 October 1790, was the wife of Hezekiah[4] Hopkins and great-great-grandmother of Richard Henry Williams.

Mr. Williams was a member of the firm of Williams & Peters of New York City, coal dealers, and was also connected with many business and financial corporations. He was a trustee of the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company, a director of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, the Federal Reserve Bank, and the Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Corporation, and president of the Freeport Texas Company.

He was a member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, the Society of Mayflower Descendants, and the Society of Sons of the Revolution, president of the Racquet and Tennis Club and the Westminster Kennel Club, and a member of the Church, Union, Metropolitan, Colony, Brook, Piping Rock, Tuxedo, Turf and Field, and other clubs, the Essex Fox Hounds, and the National Golf Links.

He married in New York City, 30 December 1879, Sarah Welford Peters, born in New York City 6 September 1856, who survives him, together with a daughter, Josephine T. (Williams) (Dixon) Campbell, wife of Hon. Cecil A. Campbell of London, England, and a son, Richard Henry Williams, Jr., of "Brookrace," Mendham, Morris Co., N. J., a member of the firm of Williams & Peters of New York City, in which his father was a partner.

Esther Hinckley Baker, of Providence, R. I., a Pilgrim Tercentenary member since 1919, was born in Boston 5 February 1838, the daughter of Capt. Ezra Howes and Esther May (Hinckley) Baker, and died at Providence 5 May 1923.

Francis Baker, her immigrant ancestor, from St. Albans, co. Herts, England, came to New England in the Planter in 1635, aged 24, married, in 1641, Isabel Twining, and, after living for a few years in Boston, removed to that part of Yarmouth on Cape Cod which is now the town of Dennis, and died in 1696, in his 85th year. His widow died 16 May 1706. They had a family of eight children. One of their descendants, Judah Baker, married Mercy Howes; and his son, Capt. Ezra Howes Baker, who was born at Dennis 17 August 1811 and died in Boston 28 January 1876, was the father of the subject of this memoir. The wife of Ezra Howes Baker was Esther May Hinckley, who was born at Barnstable, Mass., 7 August 1812 and died in Boston 25 July 1850, daughter of Lot and Rebecca Hinckley and a descendant of Samuel Hinckley, who was baptized at Harrietsham, co. Kent, England, 25 May 1589, lived for a while at Hawkhurst and Tenterden, co. Kent, and came to New England, with his wife and several children, in the Hercules in March 1634/5. Samuel Hinckley settled finally at Barnstable, and was the ancestor of a well-known Cape Cod family, whose branches are now found in many parts of New England and elsewhere in the United States. His son Thomas was the last Governor of the Plymouth Colony before it was united with Massachusetts. Through some of her Hinckley ancestors Esther Hinckley Baker traced her descent from the Pilgrims of the Mayflower and was enabled to join the Society of Mayflower Descendants.

Capt. Ezra Howes Baker came to Boston in 1836 and went into business with Alpheus Hardy, under the firm name of Hardy & Baker. Later Charles J. Morrill was admitted to partnership in the firm, which then took the name of Hardy, Baker & Morrill. Still later, upon the withdrawal of Mr. Hardy, the firm name was again changed to Baker & Morrill. Capt. Baker's son, Ezra Howes Baker, Jr., became a member of the firm about 1861, and the business was carried on until the death of the younger Baker in 1888, when the firm was dissolved.

Esther Hinckley Baker was educated at the Oread Institute in Worcester, Mass., and after her school days became the head of her father's household, residing in South Boston until his death. Then she moved to Providence, and, after spending the summer of 1881 in Europe, built on Hope Street, in that city, the house which was her home for the remainder of her life. In Providence she lived very happily with a dear friend, Elizabeth Dorrance Bugbee, the friendship of these two noble women, which had begun many years before at the Oread Institute, continuing until the death of Miss Bugbee in February 1920. Except for occasional short journeys — to the White Mountains, to Florida, to Cuba, Miss Baker seldom left her home in Providence.

Not of robust health, although by no means an invalid, fond of music and books, kindly in all her relations, generous, and endowed with a lot of common sense, she was an example of the best type of New England gentlewoman.

NOTES

It having come to the attention of this Society that certain genealogists and publishers have used the name of the Society in connection with their own enterprises, the Society again desires to state that it has NO genealogical representatives in this country or in England, nor is it in any way connected with any publications other than those that it issues over its own name at 9 Ashburton Place, Boston.

Maverick. — In July of the present year (1924) I searched the registers of the ancient parish of South Huish, co. Devon, England, for records relating to the family of Rev. John Maverick, who was curate of South Huish in the early years of the seventeenth century, rector of Beaworthy, co. Devon, 1615–1629, and minister at Dorchester, Mass., from 1630 until his death on 3 Feb. 1635/6. The following entries, which were disclosed by this search, give some baptismal dates of Rev. John Maverick's children which had not been discovered when the article on the early generations of the Maverick family was published in the Register in April 1915 (vol. 69, pp. 146–159), and show that the daughter Mary, who married in New England Rev. James Parker, was the second Mary in the list of these children and that the son Aaron was born before this second Mary and her brother Moses. No record was found of the baptisms of Samuel, Elias, and Antipas Maverick, other sons of Rev. John Maverick, of whose births only the approximate dates are known.

Baptisms

1606 Mary daughter of John Mavericke, Curate, 30 November.
1607 Arone son of John Mavericke 6 March [1607/8].
1609 Marie daughter of John Mavericke 6 January [1609/10].
1611 Mosses son of John Mavericke, Curate, 3 November.
1613 Abbigalle daughter of John Mavericke, Curate, 20 March [1613/14].

Burial

1606 Marie daughter of Mr. John Mavericke 6 March [1606/7].

The registers of the parish of South Huish are now in the custody of the vicar of the neighboring parish of Malborough. The church of South Huish, situated in a little valley, almost in sight of the English Channel, is now in ruins, the tower is near falling, and the grounds are overgrown with weeds. Services have not been held in the church for over sixty years, except once a year, in order to hold the property. In this parish Samuel Maverick and his brothers and sisters probably spent their early years.

Chicago, Ill. Charles Edward Banks.

[Since the publication in the Register of the article on the Maverick family to which Colonel Banks refers, Mr. J. R. Hutchinson of London, in his "Genealogical Notes from the High Court of Admiralty Examinations," has contributed a bit of information of considerable interest, viz., "John Maverick of Dorchester in New England, sailor, deposes 24 April, 1645, aged 24. His brother 'liveth hard by Boston.'" (New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, vol. 47, p. 112.)

This deposition identifies the John Maverick of Boston who had a wife Jane, and who, it was conjectured, was perhaps a son of Samuel Maverick of Noddle's Island (East Boston) and a grandson of Rev. John Maverick (see Register, vol. 69, p. 159, second footnote), as another son of Rev. John Maverick. He was undoubtedly the John Maverick who married at All Hallows, London Wall, 15 Apr. 1645 (nine days before John Maverick of Dorchester deposed at the High Court of Admiralty), Jane Andrewes (see printed "Registers . . . of the Parish of All Hallows, London Wall," p. 252); and Jane (Andrewes) Maverick was undoubtedly the Mrs. Jane Maverick who, with Dorothy Andrewes, appears as a legatee in the will of James Astwood of Boston, dated 17 Sept. 1653 (Register, vol. 7, p. 337). John and Jane Maverick of Boston had a son John, born 18 Apr. 1653, and a daughter Dorothy, born 23 January 1654/5. This John Maverick, father of John and Dorothy, disappears from New England some time before 1670.

In "The National Cyclopædia of American Biography," vol. 6, p. 432 (New York, James T. White & Company, 1896), in a biographical sketch of Samuel Augustus Maverick (1803–1870), who took an active part in establishing the Republic of Texas, it is stated that "John and Samuel Maverick, brothers, were original settlers of Charlestown, S. C., 1670–80, and John was a member of the first colonial parliament in that state." Proof of this statement, in so far as the arrival of a John Maverick in Carolina is concerned, is found in the Collections of the South Carolina Historical Society, vol. 5, pp. 271–274, where it is stated that Mr. John Maverick and servants from Barbados arrived in Carolina 8 Feb. 1670/1, and that he was chosen to Parliament in 1672.

Now Nathaniel Maverick of Barbados, who was a son of Samuel Maverick of Noddle's Island and a grandson of Rev. John Maverick, in his will dated 16 August 1670 and proved 24 February 1673/4 (Register, vol. 67, p. 366), mentions his sons John, Samuel, and Nathaniel, all under twenty-one years of age when the will was made; and this will was witnessed by John Maverick, Samuel Maverick, and two other men. It may be assumed that the first two witnesses were not the minor sons of Nathaniel Maverick, and also that the minors of 1670 were not the Charleston settlers of 1670–1680; and it seems reasonable to believe that the John Maverick who went from Barbados to Carolina in 1670/1 was John, son of Rev. John Maverick.

The Editor is indebted to Mr. William Prescott Greenlaw, Librarian of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, for bringing to his attention the facts collected in this note. Additional information about the Charleston branch of the family is desired, in order to complete a manuscript genealogy of the Maverick family which is now in the possession of this Society. — Editor.]

The Polks of North Carolina and Tennessee: Corrections. — The following corrections for the genealogy of the Polk family which began in the Register of April 1923 and was concluded in the Register of July 1924 were forwarded by Mr. Wilmot Polk Rogers of Berkeley, Calif., one of the collaborators with Mrs. Angellotti in the preparation of that article, but were received too late to be printed with the additions and corrections published at the end of the final instalment (supra, pp. 329–330).

Historical Intelligence

Whipple Pedigree. — Mr. J. Gardner Bartlett, the well-known genealogist, a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, has presented to the Library of the Society a photostat copy of a chart prepared by him which shows three generations of the Whipple family of Bocking, co. Essex, Eng., and Ipswich, Mass., descendants of Matthew Whipple of Bocking, clothier, who was buried at Bocking 16 Jan. 1618/19, and his wife Joanna. Brief abstracts of wills that help to establish the pedigree are given; and the chart will be of great service to all interested in the Whipples, especially as many errors about this family have found their way into print.
